

DAYA SATAKAM

26424 of
VEDANTA DESIKA

English Commentary

by

D. RAMASWAMY AYYANGAR

ADVOCATE, MADRAS.

Published by

TIRUMALA-TIRUPATI DEVASTHANAMS, TIRUPATI.

1961

Price Rs. 3/-

DAYA SATAKAM

OF

VEDANTA DESIKA

(A hymn in praise of the Mercy of Lord Sri Venkateswara)

WITH

COMMENTARY IN ENGLISH

BY

D. RAMASWAMY AYYANGAR,

Advocate, Madras.

FOREWORD

BY

The Honourable Sri P. V. RAJAMANNAR,

(Chief Justice, High Court, Madras)

INTRODUCTION BY

Sri C. ANNA RAO, Executive Officer,

T. T. DEVASTHANAMS, TIRUPATI.

* * *

Published by

TIRUMALA-TIRUPATI DEVASTHANAMS PRESS,

TIRUPATI.

PLACED ON THE SHELF

Date.....

11-7-96

SRI VENKATESWARA
CENTRAL LIBRARY & RESEARCH CENTRE.

Acc. No.....

26424

Date.....

TIRUPATI.

015, 1x(Q22)

— K61

Śrī VEDĀNTADEŚIKA

Śrīmadbhagavadgītāśāstrī Mahāprajñā

श्रीमान् वेङ्कटनाथः कवितादिकेसरी ।

वेदान्ताचार्ययो मे कनिष्ठता सदा हरि ॥

आम्नायमौलिगुह्या कथनाकरेण नाशतरिप्यत पदादि भवादिभमाता ।

अज्ञातभक्ति जगदभुत सत्वरिञ्च सज्ञातशास्त्रमभविष्यद्वदिनं च ॥

INTRODUCTION

Sri Vedanta Desika, the great scholar devotee, sang 108 slokas on the 'Daya' or 'Gr' aspect of Sri Srinivasa for the benefit of posterity. A reading of the Sathakam will invoke the grace of the Lord on the reader. The Devasthanam published commentaries on the slokas in Tamil, Telugu and Kannada languages through the columns of the Bulletin. Sri D. Ramaswami Iyyengar, helped the Devasthanam to publish the commentaries in the English language as well, to serve a larger circle of devotees. His exposition and treatment of the subject matter is thought-provoking and brilliant. The flow of thought in the commentaries coming as it does from the heart of a great devotee is exhilarating. We are grateful to the commentators for this service of his to the bhakthas.

T. T. DEVASTHANAMS }
TIRUPATI }
18—11—60. }

C. ANNA RAU
Executive Officer

FOREWORD.

I have always lamented the fact of the comparative ignorance of one of the greatest systems of religious philosophy in the world, which has been developed in South India by great saints, devotees, scholars and philosophers, namely, the Visishtadvaita. That system embodies some of the most beautiful concepts of relations between man and God. One such concept is Prapathi, the doctrine of complete surrender to Supreme Being. The basis for that doctrine is the conviction of the limitless mercy, kindness, and grace of the Lord, and the declaration in the Charama Sloka of the Gita. It is this quality which is glorified by the name of dayaa, personified as Dayaadevi, extolled by one of the greatest exponents of Visishtadvaita, Sri Vedanta Desika, in his Daya Satakam.

The Satakam, as the name denotes, is a collection of hundred slokas. Sometimes the number goes up to 108 for auspicious reasons. The hundred slokas which comprise the stotra proper are made up of decads. Sri Ramaswamy Ayyangar has brilliantly demonstrated how each of the ten decads is in a different metre and deals with a distinct theme, and what is extremely significant is that the ten themes dealt with in the stotra are the ten topics of the famous Dramidopanishad (Tiruvoimozhi) of Nammalwar.

We have in Vedanta Desika a most remarkable combination of a supreme bhaktha, a profound scholar and a poet of the first rank. Daya Satakam reveals this versatility of his.

Sri Ramaswamy Ayyangar has fully brought and described the fundamental truths, the power ideas and the lyrical beauties of the satakam.

Striking a personal note, what has appealed to most in this stotra of haunting loveliness is the in which Sri Desika develops the idea of dayaa, cribed as Dayaadevi, as an entity peculiarly distinct from the Lord Himself, though ultimately daya an attribute of the Lord Himself. She is capable even reversing the decisions of the Lord to punish. She controls the actions of the Lord, so to say. swaroopa and the roopa of dayaa are sung in the decad of the poem. To my mind, Dayaadevi is other than Lakshmidēvi herself, because she is embodiment of Lord Srinivasa's mercy;

“Srinivaasasya Karunaamiva roopineem”

The concept of dayaa which, as I have already mentioned, is the basis of the doctrine of prapna has a vital place in the Visishtadvaita philosophy which I may call as the “Religion of Dayaa.” Supreme Being is also Dayaanidhi. Dayaa is ichcha, the desire, of the Lord. Dayaa ensures deliverance to every being.

Sri Ramaswamy Ayyangar cannot be adequately commended for the admirable way in which he expounded the slokas of Sri Vedanta Desika. He could not have succeeded in his task as he has, for the fact that he himself is a scholar, a philosopher and a bhaktha.

PREFACE

Even like the holy waters of the sacred Ganga pouring on the head of a lame man living far away, the Grace of Lord Srinivasa has descended on me, a very unworthy person, and enabled even me to write out a commentary on one of the finest pieces of devotional lyric given to the world by Vedanta Desika,—the Dayaa Satakam. Thanks to the help and co-operation unstintingly extended to me by the energetic and devoted Executive Officer, Sri C. Anna Rao, and the Staff of the Tirumala-Tirupati Devasthanams Press, the commentary was published in instalments in 24 consecutive issues of the Tirumala-Tirupati Devasthanams Bulletin. And now it is being issued as a separate book. It is very good of Sri C. Anna Rao to have commended the book to the worshipping public by writing out an introduction, and I thank him heartily for it.

The book has been very lucky in securing the approval and approbation of Sri P. V. Rajamannar, Chief Justice of the Madras High Court, and a reputed connoisseur of all the noble fine arts. I am very grateful to him for enriching the book by his nice foreword.

Sri Ramaswamy Ayyangar has fully brought and described the fundamental truths, the power ideas and the lyrical beauties of the satakam.

Striking a personal note, what has appealed to most in this stotra of haunting loveliness is the dayaa in which Sri Desika develops the idea of dayaa, described as Dayaadevi, as an entity peculiarly distinct from the Lord Himself, though ultimately dayaa an attribute of the Lord Himself. She is capable even reversing the decisions of the Lord to punish. She controls the actions of the Lord, so to say. The swaroopa and the roopa of dayaa are sung in the 8 decad of the poem. To my mind, Dayaadevi is nothing other than Lakshmidēvi herself, because she is the embodiment of Lord Srinivasa's mercy;

“Srinivaasasya Karunaamiva roopineem”

The concept of dayaa which, as I have already mentioned, is the basis of the doctrine of prapath has a vital place in the Visishtadvaita philosophy which I may call as the “Religion of Dayaa.” The Supreme Being is also Dayaanidhi. Dayaa is the ichcha, the desire, of the Lord. Dayaa ensures deliverance to every being.

Sri Ramaswamy Ayyangar cannot be adequately commended for the admirable way in which he has expounded the slokas of Sri Vedanta Desika. He could not have succeeded in his task as he has, but for the fact that he himself is a scholar, a philosopher, and a bhaktha.

VICTORIA CRESCENT,
MADRAS-8.
9—11—1960.

P. V. RAJAMANNAR,
Chief Justice
MADRAS HIGH COURT.

Even like the holy waters of the sacred Ganga pouring on the head of a lame man living far away, the Grace of Lord Srinivasa has descended on me, a very unworthy person, and enabled even me to write out a commentary on one of the finest pieces of devotional lyric given to the world by Adanta Desika,—the Dayaa Satakam. Thanks to the help and co-operation unstintingly extended to me by the energetic and devoted Executive Officer, Sri C. Anna Rao, and the Staff of the Tirumala-Tirupati Devasthanams Press, the commentary was published in instalments in 24 consecutive issues of the Tirumala-Tirupati Devasthanams Bulletin. And now it is being issued as a separate book. It is very good of Sri C. Anna Rao to have commended the book to the worshipping public by writing out an introduction, and I thank him heartily for it.

The book has been very lucky in securing the royal and approbation of Sri P. V. Rajamannar, Chief Justice of the Madras High Court, and a noted connoisseur of all the noble fine arts. I am very grateful to him for enriching the book by his foreword.

Sri Venkateswara Swamivara Tirumala (Thirupati)

^१ श्रीमान् वेंकटनाथार्यः कवितार्किककेसरी ।

वेदान्ताचार्यवर्यो मे सन्निधत्तां सदाहृदि ॥

Srimaan Venkata Natharyaha Kavi-tarkika-kesari ।

Vedaantacharyavaryo me Sannidattaam Sada hrdis ॥

May Sri Venkatanaatha of auspicious attributes, who is a among poets and logicians, and who is esteemed and revered
s Vedaantacharya—May he ever reside and shine resplende ny heart!

² रामानुज दया पात्रं ज्ञान वैराग्य भूषणम् ।

श्रीमद् वेङ्कटनाथार्यं वन्दे वेदान्त देशिकम् ॥

Raamanuja Dayaa Paatram Gnaana Vairaagya Bhooshanaa

Srīmad Venkatanaatharyam Vande Vedaanta Desikam ॥

Prostrations to Sri Venkatanaatha the Great, who is a receptacle for the grace of Ramanuja, who shines adorned by Knowledge and Renunciation, (or is an ornament to knowledge and renunciation) and who is known by the honorific title of Vedanta Desika

(1) Before studying the great works of our ancient Acharyas, we first offer our obeisance to the respective author of each work, and then obtain his grace, without which the meaning and significance of the work in several parts cannot be properly grasped or understood. Each Acharya has got laudatory and invocatory verses sung in his honour and praise by his best disciple or by one of his followers, and they are known in Tamil as Tishti. Probably because they stand separately from the work proper of the Acharya, this sloka is invariably recited by all before studying any Sanskrit work. — Vedanta Desika.

(2) This sloka is also a Tanian in praise of Sri Desika. This is invariably recited at the beginning of the study and chanting of the sacred verses of the Alvars, known as the 4000 Divya Prabhandams, by D great sanctity to the Hill. Hence the poet starts the stotra with praise of the Hill, that Hill (Tam-Girim)—which is well known and famous. The utpreksha (poetical fancy) is that the Hill is real a form of the Lord's Daya, even as sugar is a form of sugarcan juice. 'Sarkata' means sugar. It also means stones or pebbles.

विगाहं तीर्थबहुलं शीतलं गुरुसन्ततिम् ।

श्रीनिवासदयाम्बोधेः परीवाहपसम्पराम ॥ (२)

Vigahe teertha bahulam Seetalam guru santatim ।

Sreenivasa dayaambodheh Pareevaaha Paramparaam ॥ (

I bathe in the cool and refreshing streams, full of water, which flow in uninterrupted continuity from that great reservoir which the storage of Sreenivasa's Mercy,—the streams constituted by the hierarchy of acharyas, in whose shape the Lord's grace flows from that reservoir.

The author pays his respects to the earlier Acharyas. Every good act must be done guru-vandana-poorvakam, preceded by paying homage to the guru or Acharya. "Teertha" signifies water and also an Acharya of repute (vide teerthapaada, teerthankar). It is a guru santathi or heirarchy. It is 'seetalaam'—cool, calculated to destroy our tapa or heat. The acharyas are here enjoyed as the overflow channels carrying the surplus water which is the Daya of the Lord. It is much easier and safer to bathe in the waters of running streams than to bathe in a deep and large lake or reservoir. The suggestion in this sloka is that acharyas are gracious personages bringing the Lord's Mercy unto us.

कृतिनः कमलवास कारुण्यैकान्तिनो भजे ।

धत्ते यत्सूक्तिरूपेण त्रिवेदी सर्वयोग्यताम् ॥ (३)

Kritinah Kamalaavasa Karunyai-kantinobhaje ।

Datte yat Saaktinoopena Trivedi Sarva Yogyatam ॥ (

I worship those great and blessed persons who solely rely on the Mercy of Lord Sreenivasa to the exclusion of everything else—those great persons who rendered the ancient Vedas accessible to one and all by their own works (Prabhandam.)

The Alwars are referred to in this sloka. They were the first to postulate the potency of Divine Mercy to which alone they looked up, rejecting all other forms and aids prescribed for God-realisation. Their great service to humanity lies in their rendering the meaning of the Vedas into the Tamil language and thereby making Vedic knowledge—the most relevant portion of it—available to one and all, irrespective of the caste, creed or sex differences which go on and regulate the study of those Vedas. The exclusiveness of Vedic truths was done away with by their Tamil works capable of being studied by every one—male or female, Brahmin or Non-Brahmin. Kamalaavasa signifies Sreenivasa and also a lotus tank. The Alvars have sung of the Lord as a Lotus Tank (தாமரை நீள் வட்டம் : பொற்றாழரைக் கயம்). So when Desika thinks of the Alvars their reference to the Lord as a Lotus Tank comes to mind, (vide sloka 43 of Daya Satakas post). And that is in the Lord's peculiar name in this place, Sree-nivasa. Kamala is another name for Lakshmi.

पराशरमुखान्वन्दे भगीरथनये स्थितान् ।

कमलाकान्तकारुण्य गङ्गाप्लावितमद्विधान् ॥ (४)

Paraasara mukhan vande Bhageerata naye stitaan ।

Kamalaakanta Kaarunya Gangaaplavita mad-vidaan ॥

To the great Rishis like Parasara, I offer my salutations, because of their indefatigable attempts, even like Bhageerata's, to get like me get drenched (wet) with the Mercy of the Consort of Ka (Lakshmi).

The Maharishis of yore, the great and earliest Seers of Holy land, are next thought of with gratitude. Paraasara of them has been specially mentioned as the most outstanding among them, as he is the author of Sri Vishnu Purana in which the various divine deeds of the Lord replete with Mercy have been elaborately dealt with. Sage Valmiki finds special mention at the end of the stotra, in the 103rd sloka.

Bhageeratha is well known for his steadfast and undaunted tapas by the force and efficacy of which he brought the sacred Gangaa to this earth. So too by unswerving invocations and Dhyana or contemplation the Rishis have succeeded in making the Lord's compassion available even to us—who are as spiritually as the forefathers, sixty thousand in number, of Bharata. In the plenitude of our gratitude therefore we have to remember those great Rishis.

entire world is more often than not seized with a feeling of anger at the transgressions which we mortals in our ignorance are very often guilty of. This anger is a serious obstacle to the flow of mercy. It is the function of Bhoodevi to remove this obstacle by Kshama (forgiveness), which makes the Lord put up with all our sins and thereby helps us to obtain His mercy. It is this quality of Kshama which Bhoodevi stands for and symbolises, and inculcates in the Lord. So She is pictured here as the remover of the obstacles in the way of the flow of Daya. It was the function of Vishwakshen to remove the obstacles in the way of our seeking God and approaching Him in all humility for help. When we go there we are assured by Lakshmi of His grace or Krpa which She stands for. The possibility of any barrier in the way of that grace reaching us is removed by Bhoodevi. Viswa-dhaarini means the supporter of all (everything). It also indicates one who patiently suffers and puts up with everything—Sarvam-Saha. That is Bhoodevi.

निशामयतु मां नीला यद्भोगपटलैर्ध्रुवम् ।

भावितां श्रीनिवासस्य भक्तदोषेष्वदर्शनम् ॥ (८)

Nisaamayathu maam Neela Yat bhogapatalayr-dhruvam ।

Bhavitam Sreenivaasasya Bhakta dosheshu-adarsanam. ॥ (8)

May Neela Devi turn her glances on me. It is only by virtue of the screen she draws, as it were, in front of Lord Sreenivasa by her amorous endearments, that that Lord pretends not to see the errors (faults and sins) of His devotees.

The Vaishnavites associate three chief Devis as the Consorts of the Lord. Lakshmi and Bhoodevi among them are well known. Neela Devi, however, is not so well known, except to very close students of Sri Vaishnava Sampradaya. When the Lord came down to this earth as Lord Sri Krishna, Lakshmi took the form of Rukmini, Neela took the form of Satyabhama. In Tamil, Neela is known as Nappinnai (Vide 18th Verse of Tiruppavai). She is the same as Satyabhama of the Srimad Bhagavatha. The part Neela plays in coming to the help of the seekers after the Lord's grace is very nicely put in this sloka by the author of this Stotra. The Lord's fondness towards her makes Him blind to the sins of His votaries. The analogy used is from Vaidya Sastra. Patalaa is what is now known as cataract in the eye. Those who are given to sexual excesses, it is believed in Ayurveda, get cataract.

अशेषविघ्नशमनमनीकेश्वरमाश्रये ।

श्रीमतः करुणाम्बोधौ शिक्षास्रोत इवोत्थितम् ॥ (५)

Asesha Vignasamanam Aneekeswaram aasraye ।

Srimatah Karunaambodhau Siksha srota ivoththitam ॥ (5)

I seek shelter under the Commander-in-chief of the armie (of the Lord) who is also the destroyer of all obstacles. He is lik a stream of instruction spurting out from the vast reservoir that i the Mercy of Sreeman (Lord of Lakshmi).

In the spiritual heirarchy of the Vaishnavites. Vishvak senaa who is the Commander-in-Chief in Vaikunta of the forces of the Lord is a Nitya or eternal, even like Garuda and Ananta. But unlike them he has a place in the Guruparampara or line of acharyas next only to that of Lakshmi who in turn is next to that Primordial Teacher, Sriman Narayana. So in this sloka Desika pays his respects to him and in doing so refers very nicely to the threefold greatness that is Vishvak senaa's. First he is the queller of all obstacles in the path of an aspirant. Next he is the chief of the Divine army. And lastly he is the originator as it were of instruction or teaching. The imparting of knowledge to another is called siksha. That term has acquired a secondary meaning of 'punishment' which is intimately associated with that term now. Even the secondary meaning is in Desika's mind. For not only is Vishvak sena the foremost of teachers but he is also a pedagogue with a birch or cane in his hand. It is called 'vetra' and symbolises punishment or chastisement.

The imparting of knowledge is an aspect of Daya or God's Mercy. That has been very beautifully indicated here by suggesting that the stream of siksha (teaching) takes its origin from the big lake of Daya.

The Smarthas and Saivites look up to Vighneswara for removing obstacles in the path of the observance of righteous and religious ceremonies. Vighneswara will, taken strictly, mean the Lord of obstacles. It is only by inference that it must be taken that he is one who protects us from obstacles by removing them. Desika can be seen to refer here to Vishvak sena as being Vigna-samana. At the same time his Eeswaratvam is also there. He is Aneekeswara.

समस्तजनना वन्द चैतन्यस्तन्यदायिनीम् ।

श्रेयसीं श्रीनिवासस्य करुणामिव रूपिणीम् ॥ (६)

Samasta Jananeem Vande Chaitanya stanya daayineem ।

Sreyaseem Sreenivasasya Karunam Iva Roopineem ॥ (6)

I bow before the Mother of all, who feeds every one with the of knowledge, who is the bestower of greatness and who is the odiment, as it were, of Lord Sreenivasa's mercy.

After paying obeisance to Sri Vishvaksena, the poet in this a pays his respects to Sri Mahalakshmi. She is referred to the Mother of all. Just as the ordinary mother feeds her babes her breast milk, Lakshmi the Divine Consort of the Lord s everyone with the milk of knowledge. Stanya means breast . Here it is in the form of chaitanya or knowledge. The d Sreenivaasasya in the third pada has been very cleverly ed so as to be taken along with the previous word and also the succeeding words. She is Sreyaseem Sreenivasasya, ning thereby the cause for His superiority and excellence. She so Sreenivasasya karunamiva roopinee—the embodiment of Mercy of Srinivasa. This idea of Lakshmi being the “roopi- ’ or the alter ego of karuna or compassion is a topic very fre-tly dealt with in the course of this stotra.

वन्दे वृषगिरीशस्य महिषीं विश्वधारिणीम् ।

तत्कृपाप्रतिघातानां क्षमया वारणं यया ॥ (७)

Vande Vrishigireesasya Mahisheem Visvadarineem ।

Tat Krpa pratighaatanaam Kshamayaa Vaaranam Yayaa ॥ (7)

I prostrate before Mother Earth (Bhoomi Devi) who is the ort of the Lord of Vrishagiri (another name for Venkatachala) by Her trait of forgiveness removes all obstacles to the flow is grace.

In this sloka the author pays his respects to the Consort of Srinivasa who occupies a seat on His left just as Maha-mi occupies a seat on His right. The Ubhayanachiars (Nan-i) on either side of Sri Malayappa Swami on the Hills are evi on His right and Bhodevi on His left. Lakshmi symbo-Mercy and it is in that aspect the poet paid his respects to Her previous sloka. The Lord who is also the law-giver for the

To a man afflicted by cataract in the eye, vision gets affected and he is not able to see well. This is said to happen in the case of the Lord here. The adarsanatvam (non-seeing) in regard to the faults of Bhaktas is attributed to the Patala or screen caused by Neela's bhoga or endearing enjoyment. That the poet is here referring to a great truth in very ordinary language will be clear from the use of the word Bhaavitam. It is only a pretence. It is not a constitutional defect or affliction but it is a put-on state-of-affairs. One is reminded of the name Avignata अविज्ञाता in the Sahasra-nama given to the Lord by that Grand Old Sire, Bheeshmaa. Avignata literally means one who does not know.

This is the only sloka of the 108 slokas of the Daya Sataka in which there is no mention of Daya. In all the other 107 slokas invariably Daya finds a place,—mentioned in some places as Daya, in other places as Karuna, Kṛpa or Anukampa. This is a very naive way of suggesting that there is need on our part to invoke the Lord's grace only because of our sins being taken note of by the Lord.

कमप्यनवधिं वन्दे करुणावरुणालयम् ।

वृषशैलतटस्थानां स्वयं व्यक्तिमुपागतम् ॥ (९)

Kamapyanavadhim Vande Karunaa Varunaalayam ।

Vrishasaila-tatastaanaam Swayam Vyaktim upaagatam. ॥ (9)

I adore that indescribable and limitless ocean of Mercy (Lord Sreenivasa) which is self-revelatory to those who (take their) stand on (the shore known as) Vrishasaila (i.e., Tirumala).

After paying his respects to the Hill, the Acharyas, the Alwars, the Maharishis, to Vishwaksena, Mahalakshmi Bhodevi and Neela Devi respectively, the poet now offers his Vandana or worship to Lord Srinivasa Himself, as a prelude to praising Daya from the next sloka. This (ninth) sloka is the only sloka in praise of the Lord Himself. His name occurs in every sloka of this stotra but not in this which describes Him only as an ocean of mercy. The two viseshanas (adjectives) used here are Kamapi and Anavadhim. The first indicates His greatness that is beyond words. The second refers to His immeasurability. Avadhi is boundary or limit and is used both in regard to space and time. Anavadhim here therefore indicates one who is unlimited by space or time.

In the second half of the sloka reference is made to this Lord Tirumala as a Swayam-vyakta (self-revealed). There are several forms of archas or idols. The most important among them Swayam Vyakta where the Lord of His own will takes a form unlike other cases where in response to prayers or requests from Siddhas, Devas or men He graciously descends into an arch form, referred to as Saiddha, Daiva, and Maanusha, respectively. That Tirumala is a Swayam-Vyakta-stala is well known and several Puranas speak about it.

The word 'Tatasta' means "one who takes his stand on and also "one who stands on the shore." The suggestion in the latter meaning is that the ocean is fathomable only by those who do not attempt to get into it. The Upanishadic saying 'Vignaata Avijaanataam' is brought to our minds by this suggestion. He will not reveal Himself to those who think they can by their efforts fathom His greatness. But to those who stay on the shore in the feeling that He is unfathomable, He shows himself. Of course to those who go to Tirumala He is there revealing Himself to them of His own accord (Swayam).

अकिंचननिधिं सूतिमपवर्गतिवर्गयोः ।

अञ्जनाद्रीश्वरदयामभिष्टौमि निरञ्जनाम् ॥ (१०)

Akinchana Nidhim Sootim Apavargatrivargayoho ।

Anjanaadreeswara Dayaam Abishtowmi Niranjanaam, " (10)

I praise the Daya (or Grace) of Anjanaadreeswara (the Lord of the Anjana Hill) who is the treasure (stored up wealth) for helpless and hapless persons, and who is the bestower of Moksha as well as Dharma, Artha and Kama, and who is free from all fault or blemish.

From this sloka the praise of Daya Devi regularly starts. This is also indicated by the Kriyaa-pada (predicate) used here—Abhistowmi. The poet's pratigna (प्रतिज्ञा) or determination is to praise, adequately and well, Daya Devi. She is referred to as the Daya of Anjanaadreeswara. Anjanaadri is one of the several names of Vengadam. The Puranas have it that Anjana Devi (mother of Aanjaneya) performed penance on this Hill for getting a son and hence the Hill is known as Anjanaadri. The Lord of the Hill is Anjanaadreeswara. His Daya is the subject of praise in this Stotra.

श्रीमते निगमान्तमहादेशिकाय नमः

श्री श्रीनिवास परब्रह्मणे नमः

॥ दयाशतकम् ॥

DAYAA SATAKAM

· SECOND DECAD. ·

Introduction.

FROM the 11th sloka to the 20th, the metre employed is what is known as Geeti. This, like the well known Aarya, is a metre regulated not by syllables or aksharaas, but by maatras or syllabic instants. A change of the metre for every ten sloka studiously employed by a poet is an indication to the readers that there is a change of topic with every change of metre. For the ten decads of this Stotra proper, the ten topics of Dramidopanishad (Nammalwar's Tiruvoimozhi) as summarised by Desika himself in his Dramidopanishad Saaram and Dramidopanishad Taatpary Ratnaavali have been adopted as the topics. Accordingly "Sevaa Yogyatvam" was the topic of the first decad. Sevaa Yogyatvam means 'worship-worthiness.' God is Sevaa Yogy because He has Tirumalai as His abode, because He is sought after by Acharyas, Alwars and Maharishis, because He is served by Vishvaksema, and surrounded by Sri Devi, Bhodevi, and Neela Devi, and because He is himself an ocean of grace, mercy, compassion and sympathy towards all.

The topic of the second decad is "ati-bhogyatwa" or the exceedingly enjoyable quality of God. The slokas of this decad while dealing with the greatness of Daya, each in its own way, are collectively calculated to emphasise how God is sweet and enjoyable to His devotees. Praise of Dayaa—a quality of God—is really praise of the Dayaa-van दयावान् the possessor of Daya.

अनुचरशक्त्यादिगुणामग्रेसरबोधविरचितालोकम् ।

स्वाधीनवृषगिरीशं स्वयं प्रभूनां प्रमाणयामि दयाम् ॥ (११)

*Anuchara Saktyaadi gunaam Agresara bodha virachitaa-lokaam ।
Swaadheena Vrishagireesam Swayamprabhootaam Pramaanayaami
Dayaam ॥ (11)*

I swear by Daya, who has Shakti and other attributes (as her retinue (followers), who has her path lighted (illumined) going ahead, who wields full sway over Vrishagiri Srinivasa), and who is by herself immense and immeasurable. No sooner than the Poet said that he was going to praise her, we find Dayadevi herself sallying forth.

This sloka describes Dayadevi as starting out in all response, as it were, to the poet's desire to praise her, expressed in the previous verse. Even before one full sloka is uttered in praise of her, she descends and condescends to show herself. Her saubhagya accessibility is apparent from this.

Those who have seen processions of the Lords in Tenali have noticed how the Lord is preceded by several paraphernalia followed by others. Here the poet describes Gnana as preceding the Lord and the other attributes, Shakti, Bala etc., as following the Lord. "Six attributes or gunas are usually associated with the Lord, the agavan." They are gnana, bala, aisvarya, veerya, shakti, and bhakti. Out of them Desika speaks of gnana as going before the Lord and the other five as following in her wake. As is the case with the prekshas (poetical fancies) of Desika, a very great truth underlies this poetic description of Dayadevi's procession. Know that Daya goes in front and indicate where Daya is to function. By mentioning, Daya is backed up by the other five attributes which support the protection afforded by Daya will not be confective. So they are described as anucharaas or followers of Daya. Daya is itself an attribute of the Lord. As we shall see, Desika postulates the supremacy of Daya over all His other attributes. In this sloka, the chief six attributes (shad-gunas) are shown as helping Daya in her mission of bringing relief, redemption, to suffering humanity.

'Aaloka' means light, lustre, brightness. Here that brightness is brought about by gnana which is described as going in front of Daya. When great personages walk in public, an attendant carrying a torch or a lamp shows the way in front, often also shouting, 'This way,' 'This way.'

By referring to Daya as "Svaadheena-vrishagireesaa" it shows to us how completely Lord Srinivasa is under the control of Daya. Her purpose is so noble and is so much to the Lord's own heart that He, so to say, surrenders Himself her. The manner and the measure in which He does so is the theme of several later slokas. This surrender is born not out of fear or subordination, but out of a spirit of harmony (Aikarasya ऐकरस्य in regard to the object in view.

Lest one should think that the greatness of Daya is entire due to her being the consort of the Lord, the poet adds, “svaya prabhootam,” conveying to us thereby that by herself she is immense and supreme.

The word ‘pramaanayaami’ in this sloka is not easy to understand. Pramana is authority and hence validity. The poet evidently intends to establish the validity of Daya. This term has also been taken to mean a ‘measure.’ In that view we have to take that Desika says that in singing this Stotra in her praise he is really attempting to measure the immeasurable. Another meaning, permissible, will also be very apt. Till Desika wrote the Daya sataka there was no textual authority postulating the supremacy of Daya. It may not be an exaggerated claim to make that for the prameya (object of knowledge) of Daya, Daya Sataka is the pramaana,—(authority).

अपि निखिललोकसुचरितमुष्टिं धयदुरितमूर्च्छनाजुष्टम् ।

संजीवयतु दये मामञ्जनगिरिनाथरञ्जनी भवती ॥ (१२)

Api nikhila loka sucharitamushtindhaya durita moorchanaajushtar Sanjeevayati daye maam anjanagirinaatha ranjanee bhavatee. (12)

Daya Devi! Acting in a manner very pleasing to the Lord of Anjanagiri (Lord Srinivasa), revive and restore me to life from the state of stupor into which I was plunged by my sins which are powerful enough to devour at one gulp all the virtuous deeds of the entire world.

From this sloka onwards the Poet addresses Daya and all the slokas are couched in the second person. Desika in this sloka says with a great sense of thankfulness that while he had swooned away under the vast load of his sins, Daya took pity on him and restored him to consciousness. To the devout, living in sin with no thought for God, is death. From that state Daya redeems human souls. Most modestly, Desika refers to himself as one such so redeemed and restored to life. Sanjeevanam means giving life. The heavy load of sin smothers one’s own existence and brings about a state akin to death. Just as some famous oshadhis (herbs) bring back to life those who are almost dead, Daya revives us.

The sins committed by us must be felt by us to be big enough to devour, or to use a slightly different metaphor, consume, all good deeds done by all else throughout the whole world. Musadhaya signifies sipping from one's own fist or palm and swallowing in one gulp, as Sage Agasthya did with the seven seas. Our sins are so vast that they can devour and reduce to nothing all sukrita (good deeds) and all the sucharita (good conduct) of the whole world taken together. They reduce us to a state akin to death, and yet from that state of moorchana or stupor, we are revived by Daya.

There is a paata पाठ or reading for this sloka in which sanjyatu takes the place of sanjeevayati. In that paata the meaning is 'May Daya revive me.'

Daya is referred to in this sloka as anjanagirinaatha रान्जगिरिनाथ which means one who delights Anjanagirinaatha (Srinivasa). It may be that it is because she is so dear to the Lord that she is able to infuse life into our dead and dormant selves. Or it may be that she is so very dear to the Lord because she gives us life.

This sloka is regarded as a great Mantra. Acharyas have prescribed its 'aavritti' (repetition) to their disciples as a panacea for several ills that beset the latter in their progress, material and spiritual.

भगवति दये भवत्या वृषगिरिनाथे समाप्लुते तुङ्गे ।

अप्रतिघमज्जनानां हस्तालम्बो मदाघसां मृग्यः ॥ (१३)

Bhagavati Daye! bhavatyaa Vrishagirinaathe samaaplute tu Apratighamajjanaanaam hastaalambo madaaghasaam mrigyaha.

Glorious Dayadevi! When even the high and lofty Lord of Vrishagiri floats in the flood caused by you, my sins which inescapably drowned will have to seek in vain for a helping hand to come to rescue (and lift them up).

While in the preceding sloka the Poet dealt with his sins which have been rescued and revived, in this he talks about the submergence (and consequent extinction) of his sins. Daya is likened to a flood and an analogy in which the poet revels often in the course of this Satakam. It is such a big and huge flood that it sweeps even the high-priest Lord off His feet. This sloka shows that the re-vivification brought about by Daya as mentioned in the previous sloka is the effect of the extinction of our sins.

श्रीमते निगमान्तमहादेशिकाय नमः

श्री श्रीनिवास परब्रह्मणे नमः

॥ दयाशतकम् ॥

DAYAA SATAKAM

SECOND DECAD.

Introduction.

FROM the 11th sloka to the 20th, the metre employed is which is known as Geeti. This, like the well known Aarya, is a metre regulated not by syllables or aksharaas, but by maatras or syllabic instants. A change of the metre for every ten slokas studiously employed by a poet is an indication to the readers that there is a change of topic with every change of metre. For the ten decads of this Stotra proper, the ten topics of Dramidopanishad (Nammalwar's Tiruvoimozhi) as summarised by Desika himself in his Dramidopanishad Saaram and Dramidopanishad Taatparaj Ratnaavali have been adopted as the topics. Accordingly "Sevaa Yogya twa" was the topic of the first decad. Sevaa Yogya means 'worship-worthiness.' God is Sevaa Yogya because He has Tirumalai as His abode, because He is sought after by Acharya Alwars and Maharishis, because He is served by Vishvakshen and surrounded by Sri Devi, Bhodevi, and Neela Devi, and because He is himself an ocean of grace, mercy, compassion and sympathy towards all.

The topic of the second decad is "ati-bhogyatwa" or the exceedingly enjoyable quality of God. The slokas of this decad while dealing with the greatness of Daya, each in its own way are collectively calculated to emphasise how God is sweet and enjoyable to His devotees. Praise of Dayaa—a quality of God—is really praise of the Dayaa-van दयावान् the possessor of Daya.

अनुचरशक्त्यादिगुणान्ग्रेसरबोधविरचितालोकम् ।

स्वाधीनवृषगिरीशं स्वयं प्रभूनां प्रमाणयामि दयाम् ॥ (११)

*Anuchara Saktyaadi gunaam Agresara bodha virachitaa-lokaam
Swaadheena Vrishagireesam Swayamprabhootaam Pramaanayaam
Dayaam* " (11)

I swear by Daya, who has Shakti and other attributes (c Lord) as her retinue (followers), who has her path lighted (illumined by Gnana going ahead, who wields full sway over Vrishagi (Lord Srinivasa), and who is by herself immense and immeasurable.

No sooner than the Poet said that he was going to praise Devi, we find Dayadevi herself sallying forth.

This sloka describes Dayadevi as starting out in all in response, as it were, to the poet's desire to praise her, expressed in the previous verse. Even before one full sloka is uttered in praise, she descends and condescends to show herself. Her saule or easy accessibility is apparent from this.

Those who have seen processions of the Lords in Ter will have noticed how the Lord is preceded by several paraphs and followed by others. Here the poet describes Gnana as preceding Daya and the other attributes, Shakti, Bala etc., as following.

Six attributes or gunas are usually associated with the "Bhagavan." They are gnana, bala, aisvarya, veerya, shakti, tejas. Out of them Desika speaks of gnana as going before and the other five as following in her wake. As is the case with all utprekshas (poetical fancies) of Desika, a very great truth underlies this poetic description of Dayadevi's procession. Knowledge must go in front and indicate where Daya is to function. When functioning, Daya is backed up by the other five attributes with whose support the protection afforded by Daya will not be complete or effective. So they are described as anucharaas or followers.

Daya is itself an attribute of the Lord. As we shall see, Desika postulates the supremacy of Daya over all His other glorious attributes. In this sloka, the chief six attributes (shad-gunas) are shown as helping Daya in her mission of bringing relief, redemption and redemption, to suffering humanity.

'Aaloka' means light, lustre, brightness. Here that brightness is brought about by gnana which is described as going in front of Daya. When great personages walk in public, an attendant holding a torch or a lamp shows the way in front, often also claiming, 'This way,' 'This way.'

By referring to Daya as "Svaadheena-vrishagireesaa" the poet shows to us how completely Lord Srinivasa is under Daya's sway or control. Her purpose is so noble and is so much to the Lord's own heart that He, so to say, surrenders Himself

श्रीमते निगमान्तमहादेशिकाय नमः

श्री श्रीनिवास परब्रह्मणे नमः

॥ दयाशतकम् ॥

DAYAA SATAKAM

SECOND DECAD.

Introduction.

FROM the 11th sloka to the 20th, the metre employed is what is known as Geeti. This, like the well known Aarya, is a metre regulated not by syllables or aksharaas, but by maatras or syllabic instants. A change of the metre for every ten slokas studiously employed by a poet is an indication to the readers that there is a change of topic with every change of metre. For the ten decads of this Stotra proper, the ten topics of Dramidopanishad (Nammalwar's Tiruvoimozhi) as summarised by Desika himself in his Dramidopanishad Saaram and Dramidopanishad Taatparya Ratnaavali have been adopted as the topics. Accordingly "Sevaa Yogyatwam" was the topic of the first decad. Sevaa Yogyatwam means 'worship-worthiness.' God is Sevaa Yogy because He has Tirumalai as His abode, because He is sought after by Acharyas, Alwars and Maharishis, because He is served by Vishvak-sena, and surrounded by Sri Devi, Bhoodevi, and Neela Devi, and because He is himself an ocean of grace, mercy, compassion and sympathy towards all.

The topic of the second decad is "ati-bhogyatwa" or the exceedingly enjoyable quality of God. The slokas of this decad while dealing with the greatness of Daya, each in its own way, are collectively calculated to emphasise how God is sweet and enjoyable to His devotees. Praise of Dayaa—a quality of God—is really praise of the Dayaa-van दयावान् the possessor of Daya.

अनुचरशक्त्यादिगुणामग्रेसरबोधविरचितालोकम् ।

स्वाधीनवृषगिरीशं स्वयं प्रभूनां प्रमाणयामि दयाम् ॥ (११)

*Anuchara Saktyaadi gunaam Agresara bodha virachitaa-lokaam ।
Swaadheena Vrishagireesam Swayamprabhootaam Pramaanayaami
Dayaam* " (11)

I swear by Daya, who has Shakti and other attributes (of the Lord) as her retinue (followers), who has her path lighted (illuminated) by Gnana going ahead, who wields full sway over Vrishagireesa (Lord Srinivasa), and who is by herself immense and immeasurable.

No sooner than the Poet said that he was going to praise Daya Devi, we find Dayadevi herself sallying forth.

This sloka describes Dayadevi as starting out in all glory in response, as it were, to the poet's desire to praise her, expressed in the previous verse. Even before one full sloka is uttered in her praise, she descends and condescends to show herself. Her saulabhya or easy accessibility is apparent from this.

Those who have seen processions of the Lords in Temples will have noticed how the Lord is preceded by several paraphernalia and followed by others. Here the poet describes Gnana as preceding Daya and the other attributes, Shakti, Bala etc., as following her.

Six attributes or gunas are usually associated with the term "Bhagavan." They are gnana, bala, aisvarya, veerya, shakti and tejas. Out of them Desika speaks of gnana as going before Daya, and the other five as following in her wake. As is the case with all utprekshas (poetical fancies) of Desika, a very great truth underlies this poetic description of Dayadevi's procession. Knowledge must go in front and indicate where Daya is to function. In so functioning, Daya is backed up by the other five attributes without whose support the protection afforded by Daya will not be complete or effective. So they are described as anucharaas or followers.

Daya is itself an attribute of the Lord. As we shall see later, Desika postulates the supremacy of Daya over all His other numerous attributes. In this sloka, the chief six attributes (shad-gunas) are shown as helping Daya in her mission of bringing relief, redress, and redemption, to suffering humanity.

'Aaloka' means light, lustre, brightness. Here that brightness is brought about by gnana which is described as going in front of Daya. When great personages walk in public, an attendant holding a torch or a lamp shows the way in front, often also exclaiming, 'This way,' 'This way.'

By referring to Daya as "Svaadheena-vrishagireesaa" the poet shows to us how completely Lord Srinivasa is under Daya's sway or control. Her purpose is so noble and is so much after the Lord's own heart that He, so to say, surrenders Himself unto

. The manner and the measure in which He does so is the theme of several later slokas. This surrender is born not out of fear or subordination, but out of a spirit of harmony (Aikarasya) in regard to the object in view.

Lest one should think that the greatness of Daya is entirely due to her being the consort of the Lord, the poet adds, “svayambhootam,” conveying to us thereby that by herself she is immensely supreme.

The word ‘pramaanayaami’ in this sloka is not easy to understand. Pramana is authority and hence validity. The poet evidently intends to establish the validity of Daya. This term has also been taken to mean a ‘measure.’ In that view we have to take into account Desika says that in singing this Stotra in her praise he is really attempting to measure the immeasurable. Another meaning, if permissible, will also be very apt. Till Desika wrote the Dayaasatka there was no textual authority postulating the supremacy of Daya. It may not be an exaggerated claim to make that for the prameya (object of knowledge) of Daya, Daya Sataka is the pramana,—(authority).

अपि निखिललोकसुचरितमुष्टिंघयदुरितमूर्च्छनाजुष्टम् ।

संजीवयतु दये मामञ्जनगिरिनाथरञ्जनी भवती ॥ (१२)

nikhila loka sucharitamushtindhaya durita moorchanaajushtam eevayati daye maam anjanagirinaatha ranjanee bhavatee. (12)

Daya Devi! Acting in a manner very pleasing to the Lord of nagiri (Lord Srinivasa), revive and restore me to life from a state of stupor into which I was plunged by my sins which are powerful enough to devour at one gulp all the virtuous deeds of the entire world.

From this sloka onwards the Poet addresses Daya and all the slokas are couched in the second person. Desika in this sloka speaks with a great sense of thankfulness that while he had swooned under the vast load of his sins, Daya took pity on him and revived him to consciousness. To the devout, living in sin without thought for God, is death. From that state Daya redeems souls. Most modestly, Desika refers to himself as one such, who has been deemed and restored to life. Sanjeevanam means giving life. A heavy load of sin smothers one's own existence and brings about a state akin to death. Just as some famous oshadhis (herbs) bring to life those who are almost dead, Daya revives us.

The sins committed by us must be felt by us to be big enough to devour, or to use a slightly different metaphor, consume, a good deeds done by all else throughout the whole world. Mudhaya signifies sipping from one's own fist or palm and swallowing in one gulp, as Sage Agasthya did with the seven seas. Our sins are so vast that they can devour and reduce to nothing all the sukrita (good deeds) and all the sucharita (good conduct) of the whole world taken together. They reduce us to a state akin to death, and yet from that state of moorchana or stupor, we are revived by Daya.

There is a paata पाठ or reading for this sloka in which sanjyatu takes the place of sanjeevayati. In that paata the meaning is 'May Daya revive me.'

Daya is referred to in this sloka as anjanagirinaatha rar which means one who delights Anjanagirinaatha (Srinivasa) may be that it is because she is so dear to the Lord that she is able to infuse life into our dead and dormant selves. Or it may be that she is so very dear to the Lord because she gives us life.

This sloka is regarded as a great Mantra. Acharyas have prescribed its 'aavritti' (repetition) to their disciples as a panacea for several ills that beset the latter in their progress, material and spiritual.

भगवति दये भवत्या वृषगिरिनाथे समाप्लुते तुङ्गे ।

अप्रतिघमज्जनानां हस्तालम्बो मदाघसां मृग्यः ॥ (१३)

Bhagavati Daye! bhavatyaa Vrishagirinaathe samaaplute tu
Apratighamajjanaanaam hastaalambo madaaghasaam mrigyaha.

Glorious Dayadevi! When even the high and lofty Lord of Vengiri floats in the flood caused by you, my sins which inescapably drowned will have to seek in vain for a helping hand to come to rescue (and lift them up).

While in the preceding sloka the Poet dealt with his sins which have been rescued and revived, in this he talks about the submergence (and consequent extinction) of his sins. Daya is likened to a flood, an analogy in which the poet revels often in the course of this Satakam. It is such a big and huge flood that it sweeps even the high-priest Lord off His feet. This sloka shows that the re-vivification brought about by Daya is not a partial one, but a complete one.

her. The manner and the measure in which He does so is the theme of several later slokas. This surrender is born not out of fear or subordination, but out of a spirit of harmony (Aikarasya ऐकरस्य in regard to the object in view.

Lest one should think that the greatness of Daya is entirely due to her being the consort of the Lord, the poet adds, “svayam prabhootam,” conveying to us thereby that by herself she is immense and supreme.

The word ‘pramaanayaami’ in this sloka is not easy to understand. Pramana is authority and hence validity. The poet evidently intends to establish the validity of Daya. This term has also been taken to mean a ‘measure.’ In that view we have to take it that Desika says that in singing this Stotra in her praise he is really attempting to measure the immeasurable. Another meaning, if permissible, will also be very apt. Till Desika wrote the Dayaa-sataka there was no textual authority postulating the supremacy of Daya. It may not be an exaggerated claim to make that for the prameya (object of knowledge) of Daya, Daya Sataka is the pramaana,—(authority).

अपि निखिललोकसुचरितमुष्टिधयदुरितमूर्च्छनाजुष्टम् ।

संजीवयतु दये मामञ्जनगिरिनाथरञ्जनी भवती ॥ (१२)

Api nikhila loka sucharitamushtindhaya durita moorchanaajushtam Sanjeevayati daye maam anjanagirinaatha ranjanee bhavatee. (12)

Daya Devi! Acting in a manner very pleasing to the Lord of Anjanagiri (Lord Srinivasa), revive and restore me to life from a state of stupor into which I was plunged by my sins which are powerful enough to devour at one gulp all the virtuous deeds of the entire world.

From this sloka onwards the Poet addresses Daya and all the slokas are couched in the second person. Desika in this sloka says with a great sense of thankfulness that while he had swooned away under the vast load of his sins, Daya took pity on him and restored him to consciousness. To the devout, living in sin with no thought for God, is death. From that state Daya redeems human souls. Most modestly, Desika refers to himself as one such, so redeemed and restored to life. Sanjeevanam means giving life. The heavy load of sin smothers one's own existence and brings about a state akin to death. Just as some famous oshadhis (herbs) bring back to life those who are almost dead, Daya revives us.

The sins committed by us must be felt by us to be big enough your, or to use a slightly different metaphor, consume, all the deeds done by all else throughout the whole world. Mushtin- z signifies sipping from one's own fist or palm and swallowing the gulp, as Sage Agasthya did with the seven seas. Our sins so vast that they can devour and reduce to nothing all the ta (good deeds) and all the sucharita (good conduct) of the the world taken together. They reduce us to a state akin to it, and yet from that state of moorchana or stupor, we are led by Daya.

There is a paata पाठ or reading for this sloka in which sanjeeva- takes the place of sanjeevayati. In that paata the meaning
 'May Daya revive me.'

Daya is referred to in this sloka as anjanagirinaatha ranjane-
1 means one who delights Anjanagirinaatha (Srinivasa). It be that it is because she is so dear to the Lord that she is able 'use life into our dead and dormant selves. Or it may be that so very dear to the Lord because she gives us life.

This sloka is regarded as a great Mantra. Acharyas have ribed its 'aavritti' (repetition) to their disciples as a panacea several ills that beset the latter in their progress, material or ual.

भगवति दये भवत्या वृषगिरिनाथे समाप्लुते तुङ्गे ।

अप्रतिघमज्जनानां हस्तालम्बो मदाघसां मृग्यः ॥ (१३)

rvati Daye! bhavatyaa Vrishagirinaathe samaaplute tunge, ighamajjanaanaam hastaalambo madaaghasaam mrigyaha." (13)

Florious Dayadevi! When even the high and lofty Lord of Vrishaoats in the flood caused by you, my sins which inescapably get ed will have to seek in vain for a helping hand to come to their (and lift them up).

While in the preceding sloka the Poet dealt with his having rescued and revived, in this he talks about the submerging consequent extinction) of his sins. Daya is likened to a flood, alogy in which the poet revels often in the course of this Stotra.
 such a big and huge flood that it sweeps even the high-placed off His feet. This sloka shows that the re-vivification brought by Daya as mentioned in the previous sloka is the effect of extinction of our sins.

her. The manner and the measure in which He does so is the theme of several later slokas. This surrender is born not out of fear or subordination, but out of a spirit of harmony (Aikaras ऐकरस्य in regard to the object in view.

Lest one should think that the greatness of Daya is entire due to her being the consort of the Lord, the poet adds, “svaya prabhootam,” conveying to us thereby that by herself she is immen and supreme.

The word ‘pramaanayaami’ in this sloka is not easy to understand. Pramana is authority and hence validity. The poet evidently intends to establish the validity of Daya. This term has also been taken to mean a ‘measure.’ In that view we have to take that Desika says that in singing this Stotra in her praise he is really attempting to measure the immeasurable. Another meaning, permissible, will also be very apt. Till Desika wrote the Dayaa sataka there was no textual authority postulating the supremacy of Daya. It may not be an exaggerated claim to make that for the prameya (object of knowledge) of Daya, Daya Sataka is the pramaana,—(authority).

अपि निखिललोकसुचरितमुष्टिं धयदुरितमूर्च्छनाजुष्टम् ।

संजीवयतु दये मामञ्जनगिरिनाथरञ्जनी भवती ॥ (१२)

Api nikhila loka sucharitamushtindhaya durita moorchanaajushtam Sanjeevayati daye maam anjanagirinaatha ranjanee bhavatee. (12)

Daya Devi! Acting in a manner very pleasing to the Lord of Anjanagiri (Lord Srinivasa), revive and restore me to life from a state of stupor into which I was plunged by my sins which are powerful enough to devour at one gulp all the virtuous deeds of the entire world.

From this sloka onwards the Poet addresses Daya and all the slokas are couched in the second person. Desika in this sloka says with a great sense of thankfulness that while he had swooned away under the vast load of his sins, Daya took pity on him and restored him to consciousness. To the devout, living in sin with no thought for God, is death. From that state Daya redeems human souls. Most modestly, Desika refers to himself as one such, so redeemed and restored to life. Sanjeevanam means giving life. The heavy load of sin smothers one’s own existence and brings about a state akin to death. Just as some famous oshadhis (herbs) bring back to life those who are almost dead, Daya revives us.

ine sins committed by us must be felt by us to be big enough, or to use a slightly different metaphor, consume, a deeds done by all else throughout the whole world. Mu signifies sipping from one's own fist or palm and swallow the gulp, as Sage Agasthya did with the seven seas. Our vast that they can devour and reduce to nothing all ta (good deeds) and all the sucharita (good conduct) of the world taken together. They reduce us to a state akin, and yet from that state of moorchana or stupor, we are led by Daya.

There is a paata पाठ or reading for this sloka in which sanj takes the place of sanjeevayati. In that paata the meaning is 'May Daya revive me.'

Daya is referred to in this sloka as anjanagirinaatha रान्जना means one who delights Anjanagirinaatha (Srinivasa). It may be that it is because she is so dear to the Lord that she is able to infuse life into our dead and dormant selves. Or it may be that she is so very dear to the Lord because she gives us life.

This sloka is regarded as a great Mantra. Acharyas prescribed its 'aavritti' (repetition) to their disciples as a panacea for several ills that beset the latter in their progress, material and spiritual.

भगवति दये भवत्या वृषगिरिनाथे समाप्लुते तुङ्गे ।

अप्रतिघमज्जनानां हस्तालम्बो मदाघसां मृग्यः ॥ (१३)

avati Daye! bhavatya Vrishagirinaathe samaaplute tughamajjanaanaam hastaalambo madaaghasaam mrigyaha.

Glorious Dayadevi! When even the high and lofty Lord of Vats is overwhelmed by the flood caused by you, my sins which inescapably will have to seek in vain for a helping hand to come to me (and lift them up).

While in the preceding sloka the Poet dealt with his sins which he has been rescued and revived, in this he talks about the subsequent (or consequent) extinction of his sins. Daya is likened to a flood in which the poet revels often in the course of this Sloka. It is such a big and huge flood that it sweeps even the high-priests off His feet. This sloka shows that the re-vivification brought about by Daya is so complete that it even sweeps away the sins which were the cause of his fall.

her. The manner and the measure in which He does so is the theme of several later slokas. This surrender is born not out of fear or subordination, but out of a spirit of harmony (Aikarasy ऐकरस्य in regard to the object in view.

Lest one should think that the greatness of Daya is entirely due to her being the consort of the Lord, the poet adds, “svayaṁ prabhootam,” conveying to us thereby that by herself she is immense and supreme.

The word ‘pramaanayaami’ in this sloka is not easy to understand. Pramana is authority and hence validity. The poet evidently intends to establish the validity of Daya. This term has also been taken to mean a ‘measure.’ In that view we have to take it that Desika says that in singing this Stotra in her praise he is really attempting to measure the immeasurable. Another meaning, if permissible, will also be very apt. Till Desika wrote the Dayaa sataka there was no textual authority postulating the supremacy of Daya. It may not be an exaggerated claim to make that for the prameya (object of knowledge) of Daya, Daya Sataka is the pramaana,—(authority).

अपि निखिललोकमुचरितमुष्टिं धयदुरितमूर्च्छं नाजुष्टम् ।

संजीवयतु दये मामञ्जनगिरिनाथरञ्जनी भवती ॥ (१२)

Api nikhila loka sucharitamushtindhaya durita moorchanaajushtan Sanjeevayati dāye maam anjanagagirinaatha ranjanee bhavatee. (12)

Daya Devi! Acting in a manner very pleasing to the Lord of Anjanagiri (Lord Srinivasa), revive and restore me to life from a state of stupor into which I was plunged by my sins which are powerful enough to devour at one gulp all the virtuous deeds of the entire world

From this sloka onwards the Poet addresses Daya and all the slokas are couched in the second person. Desika in this sloka says with a great sense of thankfulness that while he had swooned away under the vast load of his sins, Daya took pity on him and restored him to consciousness. To the devout, living in sin with no thought for God, is death. From that state Daya redeems human souls. Most modestly, Desika refers to himself as one such, so redeemed and restored to life. Sanjeevanam means giving life. The heavy load of sin smothers one's own existence and brings about a state akin to death. Just as some famous oshadhis (herbs) bring back to life those who are almost dead, Daya revives us.

The sins committed by us must be felt by us to be big enough to devour, or to use a slightly different metaphor, consume, as good deeds done by all else throughout the whole world. Mudhaya signifies sipping from one's own fist or palm and swallowing in one gulp, as Sage Agasthya did with the seven seas. Our sins are so vast that they can devour and reduce to nothing all the sukrita (good deeds) and all the sucharita (good conduct) of the whole world taken together. They reduce us to a state akin to death, and yet from that state of moorchana or stupor, we are revived by Daya.

There is a paata पाठ or reading for this sloka in which sanjayatu takes the place of sanjeevayati. In that paata the meaning is 'May Daya revive me.'

Daya is referred to in this sloka as anjanagirinaatha रान्जनागिरिनाथ which means one who delights Anjanagirinaatha (Srinivasa). It may be that it is because she is so dear to the Lord that she is able to infuse life into our dead and dormant selves. Or it may be that she is so very dear to the Lord because she gives us life.

This sloka is regarded as a great Mantra. Acharyas have prescribed its 'aavritti' (repetition) to their disciples as a panacea for several ills that beset the latter in their progress, material and spiritual.

भगवति दये भवत्या वृषगिरिनाथे समाप्लुते तुङ्गे ।

अप्रतिघमज्जनानां हस्तालम्बो मदाघसां मृग्यः ॥ (१३)

Bhagavati Daye! bhavatyaa Vrishagirinaathe samaaplute tanga Apratighamajjanaanaam hastaalambo madaaghasaam mrigyaha

Glorious Dayadevi! When even the high and lofty Lord of Vengiri floats in the flood caused by you, my sins which inescapably drowned will have to seek in vain for a helping hand to come to rescue (and lift them up).

While in the preceding sloka the Poet dealt with his sins which have been rescued and revived, in this he talks about the submergence (and consequent extinction) of his sins. Daya is likened to a flood, an analogy in which the poet revels often in the course of this Satakam. It is such a big and huge flood that it sweeps even the high and lofty Lord off His feet. This sloka shows that the re-vivification brought about by Daya as mentioned in the previous sloka is the effect of the extinction of our sins.

her. The manner and the measure in which He does so is the theme of several later slokas. This surrender is born not out of fear or subordination, but out of a spirit of harmony (Aikarasya ऐकरस्य in regard to the object in view.

Lest one should think that the greatness of Daya is entirely due to her being the consort of the Lord, the poet adds, “svayam prabhootam,” conveying to us thereby that by herself she is immense and supreme.

The word ‘pramaanayaami’ in this sloka is not easy to understand. Pramana is authority and hence validity. The poet evidently intends to establish the validity of Daya. This term has also been taken to mean a ‘measure.’ In that view we have to take it that Desika says that in singing this Stotra in her praise he is really attempting to measure the immeasurable. Another meaning, if permissible, will also be very apt. Till Desika wrote the Dayaa-sataka there was no textual authority postulating the supremacy of Daya. It may not be an exaggerated claim to make that for the prameya (object of knowledge) of Daya, Daya Sataka is the pramaana,—(authority).

अपि निखिललोकसुचरितमुष्टिधयदुरितमूर्च्छनाजुष्टम् ।

संजीवयतु दये मामञ्जनगिरिनाथरञ्जनी भवती ॥ (१२)

Api nikhila loka sucharitamushtindhaya durita moorchanaajushtam Sanjeevayati daye maam anjanagirinaatha ranjanee bhavatee. (12)

Daya Devi! Acting in a manner very pleasing to the Lord of Anjanagiri (Lord Srinivasa), revive and restore me to life from a state of stupor into which I was plunged by my sins which are powerful enough to devour at one gulp all the virtuous deeds of the entire world.

From this sloka onwards the Poet addresses Daya and all the slokas are couched in the second person. Desika in this sloka says with a great sense of thankfulness that while he had swooned away under the vast load of his sins, Daya took pity on him and restored him to consciousness. To the devout, living in sin with no thought for God, is death. From that state Daya redeems human souls. Most modestly, Desika refers to himself as one such, so redeemed and restored to life. Sanjeevanam means giving life. The heavy load of sin smothers one’s own existence and brings about a state akin to death. Just as some famous oshadhis (herbs) bring back to life those who are almost dead, Daya revives us.

The sins committed by us must be felt by us to be big enough to devour, or to use a slightly different metaphor, consume, a good deeds done by all else throughout the whole world. Mudhaya signifies sipping from one's own fist or palm and swallow in one gulp, as Sage Agasthya did with the seven seas. Our sins are so vast that they can devour and reduce to nothing all the sukrita (good deeds) and all the sucharita (good conduct) of the whole world taken together. They reduce us to a state akin to death, and yet from that state of moorchana or stupor, we are revived by Daya.

There is a paata पाठ or reading for this sloka in which sanjyatu takes the place of sanjeevayati. In that paata the meaning is 'May Daya revive me.'

Daya is referred to in this sloka as anjanagirinaatha ran which means one who delights Anjanagirinaatha (Srinivasa). It may be that it is because she is so dear to the Lord that she is able to infuse life into our dead and dormant selves. Or it may be that she is so very dear to the Lord because she gives us life.

This sloka is regarded as a great Mantra. Acharyas have prescribed its 'aavritti' (repetition) to their disciples as a panacea for several ills that beset the latter in their progress, material and spiritual.

भगवति दये भवत्या वृषगिरिनाथे समाप्लुते तुङ्गे ।

अप्रतिघमज्जनानां हस्तालम्बो मदाघसां मृग्यः ॥ (१३)

*Bhagavati Daye! bhavatyaa Vrishagirinaathe samaaplute tu
Apratighamajjanaanaam hastaalambo madaaghasaam mrigyaha.*

Glorious Dayadevi! When even the high and lofty Lord of Virgi floats in the flood caused by you, my sins which inescapably drowned will have to seek in vain for a helping hand to come to rescue (and lift them up).

While in the preceding sloka the Poet dealt with his having been rescued and revived, in this he talks about the submergence (and consequent extinction) of his sins. Daya is likened to a flood, an analogy in which the poet revels often in the course of this Stotra. It is such a big and huge flood that it sweeps even the high-placed Lord off His feet. This sloka shows that the re-vivification brought about by Daya is not a mere resuscitation, but a complete re-creation.

Apratighamajjana refers to a submerging that cannot be wardeed off. Before Daya, sins cannot help perishing. Sins produce adverse effect on us, because of the Lord punishing us for them. But when the Lord Himself is drenched by Daya, He pardons all our sins and so, by failing to have effect,—in the only way they can ever have any effect,—they perish.

The Lord is Tunga or high-placed, lofty. If one at a great height is submerged what is to be said of others who are in the lower levels? They inescapably get drowned. That is the fate which overtakes our sins, since the flood level of Daya is sufficient to engulf the lofty Lord Himself. Hastaalamba is lending a helping hand. The punishing mood of the Lord being banished by the intervention of Daya, sins get no quarter and so are spoken of as getting drowned.

कृपणजनकल्पलतिकां कृतापराधस्य निष्क्रियामाद्याम् ।

वृषगिरिनाथदये त्वां विदन्ति संसारतारिणीं विबुधाः ॥ (१४)

Kripaṇa jana kalpalatikaam Kṛitāparaadhasya nishkriyaam aadyaam Vṛishagirinaatha Daye! tvaam vidanti saṁsaarataarineem

vibhudaaha. " (14)

O Daya of Vṛishagirinaatha! you are the Kalpaka Tree (capable of bestowing everything that is desired) to helpless persons (who have nothing to fall back on). You are the pre-eminent expiation for those who have committed heinous crimes. Therefore the learned realise that you are the sole aid to cross the sea of Samsara.

Having dealt with the capacity of Daya to restore us to life by ridding us from the evil effects of our sins in the previous two slokas, the poet in this sloka postulates the efficacy of Daya in redeeming us from Samsara.

The Kalpaka tree is a tree which is believed to be capable of granting all boons desired by those who go underneath it and ask for them. That mythical tree is in Paradise and is useful only to the Devas. But Daya is a similar tree on earth and is capable of fulfilling the desires of Kripaṇaas, helpless and wretched beings. The next idea brings out Daya's greatness even better. She is Nishkriyam aadyam. Nishkriya is atonement or expiation. A sinner to get cleared of a sin committed by him has to perform certain expiatory ceremonies. Daya effects the cleansing from sins without resort to such expiations, and so she is said to be the first and foremost, or rather, the pre-eminent and most potent; form of expiation.

Owing to these two great and helpful qualities of hers, Daya Devi is relied on as the sole refuge by those who seek release from Samsara; and that is what the latter half of the sloka says. Those well versed in Sastras have discovered and laid down that to the helpless, Daya is the only help, and to the sinner, Daya is the sole expiation. Therefore she alone can help us to cross the ocean of Samsara in which we are now drifting on a frail boat without a rudder. With her help we are sure of crossing that ocean.

वृषगिरिगृहमेधिगुणाः बोधबलैश्वर्यवीर्यशक्तिमुखाः ।

दोषा भवेयुरेते यदिनाम दये त्वया विनाभूताः ॥ (१५)

Vrishagiri grihamedhi gunaaha Boda balaiswarya veeryashakti mukaaha ।

Doshaa bhaveyurete Yadinaama daye tvayaa vinabhootaha. " (15)

The Gunas (attributes) of the great Householder residing in Vrishagiri (Tirumala), such as knowledge, strength, supremacy, prowess, energy etc.,—these will all become Doshaas or demerits if only you were not there; (i.e., if they are bereft of association with you).

Desika is very fond of referring to the Lord as a grihamedhi, a householder following the grihastaasrama dharma in the company of His wife. At the end of Raghuveera Gadya, Rama with Sita by Him is described as a householder with a huge family consisting of sons and grandsons like Brahma, Siva and so on. In the first sloka of his Yatiraja Saptati, Desika refers to Kamalaagrihamedhi (Sreenivasa) as the primordial guru or preceptor. Here we see him similarly describing Lord Sreenivasa of Vrishagiri as a grihamedhi.

It is a well known fact that all the three other aasramites,—the Brahmachari, the Vaanaprasta and the Sanyasi, have to look up to the Grihasta for help. So a grihasta must be one possessed of good, hospitable and protecting qualities. The Lord has innumerable qualities among which six are very well known and referred to as shad-gunaas as already noticed. This sloka tells us that all of them are gunaas only because of their being associated with Daya, and that if only Daya was not also an attribute of the Lord they will really be doshaas or blemishes in Him. The poet's intendment is clear. To us sinners, no attribute of the Lord is helpful except Daya. Looking up Daya, the other attributes save us and protect us. But left to function without Daya, all those qualities will engage themselves in acts prejudicial to us, because we are sinners. Knowledge will be useful to take note of all our transgressions. The other qualities will all help in securing for us the punishment we deserve. So from our point of view, instead of shining as bright and protecting qualities, they will act for our destruction and so to us they will appear as blemishes and not otherwise. It is only when those other qualities act as handmaids to Daya Devi, as described in the 11th sloka, we feel we are safe, and praise the Lord as a gunavaan, a good-natured person.

‘Doshaa’ also means night or darkness of the night. The suggestion evidently is that without Daya all the other qualities will be shrouded in darkness, and will not shine as they do in her presence.

Yadi-naama (if only) has been used to convey the idea that an impossible state of affairs is being envisaged. For, the Lord is always a God of Mercy and where is the chance of Daya being absent?

This sloka is the first of several others in this stotra which aim at postulating the supremacy of Daya over all the other qualities of the Lord, a supremacy that makes her ‘Guneswari’ (गुणेश्वरि) (in sloka 101 post) meaning ‘Empress among the gunaas’.

[Readers will have noticed how in all the first five slokas of this second decad the term used is uniformly ‘Daya.’ In the next five slokas it will be seen that the term ‘Karuna’ is invariably used in all of them. It will be a nice subject for study by scholars and savants what the exact meaning and connotation of each of the four words Daya, Karuna, Kripa, and Anukampa, which Desika employs in this stotra, are. We can give rough English equivalents for each of them thus Daya=Mercy; Karuna=Pity, Compassion; Kripa=Grace; Anukampa=Sympathy.]

आसृष्टिसंततानामपराधानां निरोधिनीं जगतः ।

पद्मासहायकरुणे प्रतिसंचरकेलिमाचरसि ॥ (१६)

*Aasrishti santataanaam Apraadhaanaam nirodhineem jagataha ।
Padmaasahaaya Karune Pratisanchara Kelimaacharasi. ॥* (16)

O! Daya of the Consort of Padmavati! With a view to put a stop to the sins and errors of the creatures of the world which have been continually committed ever since creation, you bring about pralaya (dissolution of the universe) in a sportful mood, even like the retreat of a danseuse from the front to the rear of the stage.

The full import of this sloka can be understood only by one well versed in Bharata-Shastra, or the science of dancing. sanchara means 'moving backwards.' As a Keli (play or sport) is referred to, the moving backwards during dancing is what the poet is alluding to. The dissolution of the world at the end of a Kalpa (a long period of time made up of several yugas) is a 'moving back'; hence the word 'pratisanchara' has come to denote pralaya itself.

This pralaya is described in this sloka as an act of Daya, or Mercy. In other words, it is an act of mercy on the part of the Lord. In the sloka, creation is going to be described as an act of mercy. But the Chetanas who are all given a body each at the time of creation and projected into the world for working out their redemption fail to do so. Instead they get into evil ways in thought and deed. If you give a person a boat to cross a stream and you find that instead of crossing the stream the man floats in the stream allowing himself to be carried along by the current, then, to prevent certain destruction, do you not wish that you had never given him the boat? So too Daya Devi who was responsible for giving souls a body for working out their redemption, finds that the help of the very body each soul is drifting into greater and greater depths of sinfulness and she cries halt to the whole process and brings about pralaya. This is the central idea of the poet in describing pralaya as a sport of Daya Devi.

In the analogy of dancing, a danseuse (ballet dancer) is engaged in the abhinaya of a particular Padam. But after a time she finds that things are not shaping as they ought to. The orchestra supplies the background music, the songster who has to sing the part, the drummer who is to keep time,—between them there is no coordination and no unison. Laya or symphony is disturbed. The dance goes out of hand. Stepping becomes faulty. The poor dancer knows when she discovers that the several discordant features cannot be mended to enable her to carry on her abhinaya according to the schedule, determines to end the same, and moves backward sanchara in as decent and respectable a style as possible. This is exactly what Daya Devi does when she brings about Pralaya. It is a matter for students of the science of Natya Sastra to see how the several words employed in the first half of the sloka convey special meanings or significances in that Sastra. If they do not and its significance as applied to pralaya. No one without a proficiency in all the sciences and arts can hope to fully understand Desika's works.

अचिद्विशिष्टान्प्रलये जन्तूनवलोक्य जातनिर्वेदा ।

करणकलेवरयोगं वितरसि वृषशैलनाथकरुणे त्वम् ॥ (१७)

Achidavisishtaanpralaye jantoon avalokya jaata nirveda ।

Karana kalebara yogam vitarasi Vrishasailanaatha Karune tvam. ॥ (17)

O! Daya of Vrishagirinaatha! Disgusted and depressed at the sight of creatures existing, during pralaya, in a state of non-differentiation from inert and senseless matter, you graciously associate them with (i.e., confer on them) sense organs and a body.

Kaaranam-tu-dhyeaha कारणं नु ध्येयः is the Upanishadic mandate. "Reflect upon that which is the ultimate cause." The Brahma Sutras start with defining Brahman as "That from which creation etc. emanate." Desika establishes in and by the previous sloka and this, the great and important part that Daya Devi plays in regard to Creation and Pralaya. Though it is usual to mention Creation or Srishiti before destruction or Pralaya Desika has deliberately sung about pralaya first because without mentioning that state one cannot fully understand the process of creation in the way Desika wants us to understand it—vide the use of the word 'pralaye' प्रलये meaning "during pralaya" in this sloka.

Jagat-kaaranatvam or being the cause of creation (of this world) is attributed to Daya in this sloka. Her deed it is in truth and fact, though to everyone it appears to be the Lord's (sloka 69 post). The suggestion is that the Lord creates the world only because he is impelled by Daya to do so.

During pralaya the entire world consisting of jeevas who are sentient beings and prakriti which is non-sentient matter is in a very subtle (sookshma) state. To all intents and purposes the jeevas are like achit (nonsentient matter). They cannot be distinguished from that achit. A sense of nirveda (disgust and consequent depression) creeps over Daya and she makes up her mind to put an end to that deplorable state of affairs and the result is creation.

What is creation but the union of a soul with a body and the sense organs? This union or yoga gives to each soul or jeeva a body and the sense organs. Karanam करणं primarily means acting, action; and so Karanaas are the instruments aiding one in action. They are thus the organs of sense which are the five Gna-nendriyas (The five Karmendhriyas are to be grouped with the body which is referred to in this sloka as Kalebara). Karana oftentimes denotes the three faculties of mind, speech and action मनोवाक्कायः.

When the jeeva is associated with a Karana and a Kalebara it gets the power to think and act. Daya invests the jeeva or individual soul with this power so that it may get out of the wretched state in which it was during pralaya and work out its own salvation by thinking, acting and functioning in such a manner that it is able to achieve redemption from the endless cycle of births and deaths by invoking the Lord's Daya in one of the prescribed modes (upayas) and attaining salvation. That is the purpose of creation.

On the surface it may appear that if pralaya or dissolution is Daya Karya or the work of Daya, srishti or creation cannot also be said to be the work of Daya—and vice versa. But a little reflection will show to us that by creation some jeevas will have been enabled to attain the goal of existence, i.e., salvation, though by far the majority of jeevas may by their failure to walk in the path of virtue, land themselves in sin and more sin. Then again even if we consider the case of sinners alone, by pralaya which is brought about after millions of years, their sinningness and the proclivity to go on sinning will be arrested. The potentiality for committing sin is like the momentum of a moving body. When motion is arrested the momentum disappears though the body remains. It is like imprisoning a truant boy within the house when on the pretence of going to school, he consistently misbehaves elsewhere. After a time the parents feel the punishment must have corrected him or at least removed his evil proclivity and send him to school again. That is creation properly understood and there is no inconsistency in pralaya and srishti both being the work of Daya.

As already hinted at, the use of the word Karuna in these slokas indicates that taking pity and compassion at our pitiable state, Daya Devi acts in that particular manner.

अनुगुणदशार्पितेन श्रीधरकरुणे समाहितस्नेहा ।

शमयसि तमः प्रजानां शास्त्रमयेन स्थिरप्रदीपेन ॥ (१८)

Anuguna dasaarpitena Sridhara Karune samaahita snehaa ।

Samayasi tamaprajaanam saastramayena stira pradeepena. ॥ (1

O! Daya of Sridhara! you dispel the darkness of your children by the constant and unflickering lamp of Sastras which consists a suitably knit wick (of threads) and is ever full of oil.

The poet employs Slesha-alamkara in this sloka to very effectively indicate the meaning he wants to convey. Slesha means pun or the employment of words conveying more meanings than on all of such meanings being intended. Thus the Shastras are referred to as a Lamp. For a lamp there must be a wick which burns and gives light. There must be a regular supply of oil which is drawn through the wick and made incandescent. Such a lamp will dispel darkness. A fond mother will light such a lamp and keep it lit for the benefit and safety of her children. This is one meaning.

The other one referring to Shastras is as follows:—Daya abounds in sneha or fondness towards all human beings (Prajaa). She lits the lamp of Shastra in the mind when it is in a proper and fit state (anuguna dasa). By this glowing lamp, avidya (ignorance) is dispelled. Shastras are 'stira pradeepas,' constant and one pointed, never swerving or flickering.

One upanishad says that the Lord first created the four-faced Brahma to project this world into being and at once gave to him the Vedas. This sloka refers to that. The Vedas are the lamps; the lamps of knowledge, without which the created beings will merely flounder like men thrown into a pitch-dark pit.

A lamp burns only because of the oil. It is a piece of consummate art on the part of Desika to describe Daya as the oil. She is the real and true inspiration to progress. Sneha means oil and also affection and love. Daya's affection towards us is well known and is described here as samaahita, full.

In sloka 46 post, the poet is going to refer to this Sastra-pradanaa by employing another analogy.

ll the four purusharthas which he can gather without effort. No wonder the Lord has been enjoyed by Nammalwar as ati-bhogya an exceedingly enjoyable personality in the second pathu (centurium) of his Tiruvoimozhi. So sweet to look on, so pleasant and so enjoyable, and at the same time so kind and gracious that in response to one anjali (folded hands) lifted towards His feet, he confers ll boons and benefits.

The word Vrishachalapate(h) must be taken to govern not only the Paade coming next to it, but also the words mukha-kanta and Kataaksha occurring in the sloka.

नयने वृषाचलेन्दोस्तारामैत्रीं दधानया करुणे ।

दृष्टस्त्वयैव जनिमानपवर्गमकृष्टपच्यमनुभवति ॥ (२०)

Nayane Vrishaachalendostaaraamaitreem dadhanayaa Karune । Dhristastvayaiva janimaan apavargam akrishta pachyam anubhavati ॥ (20)

Daya Devi! He who at the time of his birth is seen by you, who always carry with you the spontaneous and unaccountable love flowing from the eyes of that effulgent Moon (Srinivasa) shining on the Tirumala Hill,—such a person enjoys the bliss of Moksha without effort, even like a person who reaps a bumper harvest without tilling on the fields.

In the previous sloka the poet referred to all the phalaas or fruits obtainable from Daya including trivarga and apavarga as referred to in sloka 10 above. But Daya's great desire is to confer everlasting bliss on all her votaries and she is not satisfied with giving them only the smaller and impermanent benefits and pleasures. In this sloka Desika says that if a person is blessed with Daya's kataaksha at the time of his birth he is sure to obtain Moksha.

There is a Mahabharata Vakya (text) which says that if at the time of one's birth, one is blessed by the gracious glances of adhusoodhana that one becomes a satvika, a gnani and always thinks of attaining moksha. This is referred to in Sri Vaishnava Uppradaya as Jaayamaana Kataaksha. Desika here postulates that it is Daya Devi that impels the Lord to bestow that kataaksha on certain individuals, of course consistent with their fitness for the same achieved in previous births.

Tara Maitree is what is known as love at first sight. That is, there is no knowing why that love arises. Daya Devi, it is said here, carries that unaccountable love of the Lord towards the aspirant and blesses him with a glance from the Lord's eyes. The Lord it would have been noticed has been referred to here as a moon shining on the crest of Vrishaachala. A loving glance from a lovely Person. Bright and effulgent like the moon, Lord Srinivasa bestows His loving and affectionate glances, and the result is that the man or woman who is born under such auspices attain salvations without much ado. Apavarga is Moksha. Akrishtapachyam is crops for which one has not toiled. The toiler is someone else, and he is referred to in the next sloka, where we will enjoy the grandeur of this sentiment of Desika.

श्रीमते निगमान्तमहादेशिकाय नमः

श्री श्रीनिवास परब्रह्मणे नमः

॥ दयाशतकम् ॥

DAYAA SATAKAM

THIRD DECAD

[Slokas 21 to 30 are couched in the Oupachchandāsika metre first and third paadaas contain eleven aksharas while the second and fourth contain twelve. The general topic of this decad is Subhaga-tanuhu शुभसुभगतनुः which is the gist of the third surium of Nammalwar's Tiruvoimozhi, according to Desika. The very second sloka of this decad deals with the auspicious (Subhaga) and attractive and beautiful (tanuhu) body of the Lord. We shall enjoy it in its place.]

समयोपनतैस्तत्र प्रवाहैरनुकम्पे कृतसंप्लवा धरित्री ।

शरणागतसस्यमालिनीयं वृषशैलेशकृषीवलं धिनोति ॥ (२१)

Samayopanataistava pravaahaihi Anukampe! kritasamplavaa dharitree ।

Saranaagata sasyamaalineeyam Vrishasailesa Krisheevalam dhinoti." (21)

Lord's Sympathy personified! This (lady called) Earth gladdens (the heart of) that Farmer, who has Tirumala as His abode, by wearing (lands rows and rows of crops in the form of Saranaagataas, as a result of her being drenched (irrigated) by timely and copious showers of rains.

To a farmer there is no sight more pleasing than that of his fields covered as far as eyes can see by luxuriant and stoutstalked crops. Lord Srinivasa is the Farmer here. Crops cannot grow at all much less can they grow in abundance, unless there is plentiful rain at the proper periods in the course of the cultivation operations. Daya is the rain that pours in plenty (pravaaha) and at proper times (samayopanataihi). Ordinary rain helps crops to grow. The Lord of Daya is productive of Saranaagataas or Prapannaas—those who surrender themselves up to the Lord completely. The purpose of creation—bringing into being this earth with embodied souls—it is to give those souls a chance to redeem themselves. By realising their lack of gnana and shakthi and their consequent unfitness to pursue the prescribed path of Karmayoga, Gnanayoga and Bhakthiyoga, they or at least many of them resort to prapatti or Saranagati as a direct means for attaining moksha,—thereby a plentiful crop of prapannas and the Lord's heart rejoices at the sight. The process of Prapatti, which is described in great detail in the later slokas of this Stotra and postulated with a scientific accuracy as a potent means for the attainment of Moksha depends on the flow of Daya or mercy from the Lord. And it is pointed out in this sloka that Daya-pravaaha is really responsible for this bumper crop of prapannaas.

Not only should rain be plentiful but it must be seasonal and timely. A heavy downpour calculated to wash away the seedlings or to immerse the ripe crops in a deluge and prevent them from being harvested can hardly be called helpful rain. So the rain has to be samayopanata, making itself available at the proper time. That, Daya is here pointed out to be,—rendering timely help.

Samaya also means a system or school of thought, a Dasa. Sri Desika has very deftly employed the term here to suggest Sri Vaishnava Samaya—or to refer to it by another name, Ramanujasana. For it is only in this system Daya is relied on as the refuge of helpless beings, and Saranagati is laid down as a powerful force for securing salvation straight. In no other system of thought is prapatti regarded as Saakshan-mokshopaaya (direct and immediate means of salvation). One can certainly look up to Sri Desika as the first to propound this system of prapatti as a well-developed and scientifically verified means for moksha,—to show to us several details of this system which was adopted by the Acharya and demonstrated to the world through his own anushtaan and observance by that greatest Acharya of all times, Ramanuja. This sloka should therefore be understood as conveying to us the suggestion that Dayaapravaaha (or the flow of Daya) is productive of the greatest good only in this Samaya of Vaishnavism.

There is a peculiar aptness in the reference to the Lord's aspect as Vrisha-Saila here. A cultivator who has a large extent of land can have a look at the whole of it only by standing on a raised place.

Tirumala, being a hill, serves the purpose of being a good static from which to view the entire world below. A watchman of fields has to stand on a raised platform to see that the growing crops are not grazed by straying cattle.

Reading the 20th and 21st slokas together a very beautiful sentiment can be seen to be very naively dealt with by this peerless poet-philosopher. It was said in the 20th sloka that one who gets blessed by the kataaksha of Sreenivasa at the time of one birth enjoys the benefits of a bumper harvest without toiling for it. By referring to the selfsame Lord Srinivasa as a Krisheevala (farmer or cultivator) in this sloka, Desika shows that the needed cultivation is done by the Lord. There can be no crop without cultivation. In the pursuit of all other upayas (or means) for moksha, the aspirant is the cultivator or toiler. In prapatti, the Lord is the chief cultivator. That is why He is known as Siddhopaaya. Prapatti done by a mumukshu (aspirant) is only a sadhyopaaya. Human effort and divine grace are respectively the Sadhyopaaya and Siddhopaaya. Here is a dwandhva (a duality) which has always to go together to yield good results. Divine grace is always there, but for us to obtain its benefits we have to deserve them by doing something however small. It may be a mere vyaaja or pretext—it cannot be more—but if it is not there, the mercy of the Lord does not stay even like rain which runs away from a raised and hard surface. A clever man always digs a tank and keeps it ready so that when the rain comes, the water will stay in it and be available for his needs. His digging the tank does not create rain; but it helps to retain the rain when it comes. This अविनाभाव (inseparableness) between Siddhopaya and Sadhyopaaya is one of the very fine points expatiated upon by Desika in several places in his numerous works. All the nice points of Desika's system find beautiful poetical expression in the Daya Sataka.

कलशोदधिसंपदो भवत्याः करुणे सन्मतिमन्थसंस्कृतायाः ।

अमृतांशमवैमि दिव्यदेहं मृतसंजीवनमञ्जनाचलेन्दोः ॥ (२२)

Kalasodadhi sampado bhavatyaha Karune! sanmati mantha-samskrutaayaha [chalendoho." (22)

Amrutaamsam avaimi divya deham mrutasanjeevanam Anjanaa-

O! Mercy Divine! methinks the divine body of that bright Moon of Anjanaadri,—a body that has the capacity to revive and bring to life those that are dead,—is only the AMRUTA (nectar) obtained by churning you,—who are like a veritable milk-ocean,—with good intellect as the churning rod.

The Divya-mangala Vighrahas or Bhagavad-roopas or forms, with special reference to the Archa-moorti or Vighraha (image) of Lord Srinivasa is here spoken of as the quintessence of Daya. This vighraha is शुभ (auspicious) and also सुभग (beautiful) and so is known as Divyamangala Vighraha, Subhaasraya, Subhasubhagatanu, and so on.

As one of the chief propounders of the Alwar-cult, Desika is here seen postulating the excellence and supremacy of Bhagavad-vighraha. In certain philosophies God has no name and no form. He has no attributes either; He merely is. Ramanuja has refuted those philosophies and ably demonstrated that the Lord does possess names and forms which He takes on for the delectation of His devotees. No one need be afraid that thereby He is getting finitised. His infinity and transcendence are in no way affected by His assuming names and forms.

That there are five such forms or roopas, which the Lord takes on, is spoken of in the Agamaas (Paancharatra or Bhagavat-Sastra chiefly) and in the Alvars' outpourings. They are Para, Vyuha, Haarda, Vibhava and Archa. Para-roopa is the figure with which the Lord shines in Paramapada or Vaikunta for the eternal enjoyment of the Celestials, who are Nityas or Muktas. Vyuha roopa is the fourfold form—Vasudeva, Sankarshana, Pradyumna, and Aniruddha—assumed by the Lord for the benefit of dyaana by yogis. The roopa of Ksheerabdhinaatha, reclining on Adishesha in the middle of the milk-ocean, and the twelve forms of Kesava, Narayana, Madhava, Govinda, Vishnu, Madhusoodana, Trivikrama, Vaamana, Sreedhara, Hrisheekesa, Padmanaabha and Daamodara (Dwadasa Namaas) are also regarded as being in this category. The Haarda roopa also known as Antaryaami roopa, is the infinitely small form with which the Lord dwells in the heart of every chetana, sentient being. The forms of the Avataraas, strictly so called, like Rama and Krishna, are the Vibhava roopas. Lastly comes the Archaa-roopa, the form of idols or images of which the Saalagrama and the images in temples are the most prominent. These are all referred to later in this very stotra by Desika.

A great amount of ignorance and confusion prevails about the nature and function of the Archaaavatara. We are treated by several modern philosophers to theories like images being mere stepping stones to higher dhyana or contemplation and the ulti-

e realisation of the formless. Those who deny the validity of all forms have necessarily to deny the validity and potency of all Vigrahaas at least in the ultimate, though they also worship images in a condescending way as a concession to the "ignorance" of those who believe that the image is the God." The Alvars and the Aryas, like Ramanuja, Paraasara Bhatta and Desika, have spared no pains to refute such unlearned and ill-informed criticisms of their ways of thinking. This sloka is calculated to establish that images of the Lord are as valid, true and helpful as Daya, the Lord's Mercy, itself. Though the word 'Divya Deham' meaning divine body will take in all the five forms enumerated above, the reference to the Divya deha of Anjanaachala-Indu (Moon of Tirumala) shows that Desika is specially thinking of the Archa Vigrahaas of the Lord which by way of upalakshana will indicate the other forms also. We shall have occasion to refer to this topic again in commenting on several later slokas and so shall not further elaborate on the same here.

The Puranic churning of Ksheerabdi (ocean of milk) by inserting the Manthara mountain as the churning rod is in the poet's mind. That process is adapted here to suit the present point. In Upameya, Daya is herself the milk ocean. Being ever sweet and delectable she does possess all the fine qualities of the milk ocean. She is as such ocean churned by San-mathi or the intellect (desire) of those who answer to the Upanishadic definition of Sat: अस्ति ब्रह्मेति चेद् वेदः सन्तमेसंततो विदुरिति ॥ The rather general term San-mathi, without mentioning who that sat is, has been deliberately adopted by Desika to take in and suit the several forms of Sat such as Swayam Vyakta, Saiddha, Daiva, Maanusha etc., (see sloka 9 above). The idea is that in Swayamvyakta the Sat is the Lord Himself as it is His will or Sankalpa alone that is responsible for that aavirbhava or appearance. Similarly the particular Sat, Deva or human being respectively at whose invitation the Lord takes a shape or form must be the Sat in each of the cases of Swayam, Daiva and Maanusha respectively. Poigai Alvar's கந்தது எவ்வுருவம் அவ்வுருவம் தானே is the authority for this here. The desire of the devotee is the immediate cause, and it is Daya that is the fundamental cause for all Vigrahaas.

The use of the word Indu or moon to describe the Lord here is very apt. The moon is called amrita bindu because it is full of

In the Puranic churning several objects—good, bad and indifferent—were brought to the surface. There came out poison as well as nectar—and also the moon, elephants, horses, trees, etc. Lakshmi also came out as a result of that churning. All the other objects were distributed to others but the Lord took Lakshmi for Himself. Here the Lord's Divyamangala Vighraha is referred to as 'amrutaamsam' the quintessence of amruta. The Vighraha is the Lakshmi in this churning.

Avaimi—I understand; I realise. This predicate has been obviously employed here to show to us Desika's conviction that the Lord's image-forms are the quintessence of Daya. It is only when Desika wants that a rare and important Siddhanta or conclusion he has come to should be properly understood and followed by us he employs this word. Vedanta Desika's verdict on any topic has to be accepted by all right-thinking men.

जलधेरिव शीतता दये त्वं वृषशैलाधिपतेः स्वभावभूता ।

प्रलयारभटीनटीं तदीक्षां प्रसभं ग्राहयसि प्रसत्तिलास्यम् ॥ (२३)

Jaladheriva Seetataa Daye! Twam Vrishasailaadhipathes-swa-bhaavabhootaa ।

Pralayaarabhateenateem tadeekshaam Prasabham Graahayasi prasaththilaasyam. " (23)

Dayadevi! You who are of the essence of Lord Srinivasa's nature, even as coolness is the essential quality of the Sea, force His fearful and destructive looks (responsible for pralaya) into sweet and pleasant looks responsible for creation and protection, and thereby convert their frightful devil-dance into a sweetpaced and lovely Laasya (dance).

"It (Para Brahman) looked and said to Itself 'I shall become the many',"—so says the Upanishad. The Lord's looks as indicating His Sankalpa or will are there said to be the immediate cause of creation or projection of the world. Another and different natured eekshana or look must have been responsible for Pralaya or destruction. The looks that caused destruction are likened in this sloka to a dancer indulging in Aarabhati, a violent form of dance (aghora-tandava). At the time of Creation those very looks indulge in laasya—a soft and sweet dance. (These terms are again taken from Bharatasastra—vide sloka 16 above. Aarabhati normally is used for the 'taandava' of a male; laasya is the dancing mate realisation of the formless. Those who deny the vali of all forms have necessarily to deny the validity and potency vigrahaas at least in the ultimate, though they also worship Temples in a condescending way as a concession to the “ignorant men who believe that the image is the God.” The Alvars and Acharyas, like Ramanuja, Paraasara Bhatta and Desika, spared no pains to refute such unlearned and ill-informed criticisms and their ways of thinking. This sloka is calculated to establish that images of the Lord are as valid, true and helpful as Daya, Lord’s Mercy, itself. Though the word ‘Divya Deham’ meaning Divine body will take in all the five forms enumerated above, reference to the Divya deha of Anjanaachala-Indu (Moon of Timala) shows that Desika is specially thinking of the Archa Vighraha of the Lord which by way of upalakshana will indicate the other four forms also. We shall have occasion to refer to this too again in commenting on several later slokas and so shall not further elaborate on the same here.

The Puranic churning of Ksheerabdi (ocean of milk) by inserting the Manthara mountain as the churning rod is in the poet’s mind. That process is adapted here to suit the present point. In the upameya, Daya is herself the milk ocean. Being ever sweet and delectable she does possess all the fine qualities of the milk ocean. She is as such ocean churned by San-mathi or the intelligence (or desire) of those who answer to the Upanishadic definition of a Sat: अस्ति ब्रह्मेति चेद् वेद् । सन्तमेसं ततो विदुरिति ॥ The rather general term San-mathi, without mentioning who that sat is, has been deliberately adopted by Desika to take in and suit the several forms of archa such as Swayam Vyaktha, Saiddha, Daiva, Maanusha etc. (vide sloka 9 above). The idea is that in Swayamvyakta the Lord is the Lord Himself as it is His will or Sankalpa alone that is responsible for that aavirbhava or appearance. Similarly the particular Siddha, Deva or human being respectively at whose invitation the Lord takes a shape or form must be the Sat in each of the cases Saiddha, Daiva and Maanusha respectively. Poigai Alvar தமருக்கந்தது எவ்வுருவம் அவ்வுருவம் தானே is the authority for Desika here. The desire of the devotee is the immediate cause but it is Daya that is the fundamental cause for all Vigrahaas.

The use of the word Indu or moon to describe the Lord here is very apt. The moon is called amrita bindu or nectar drop.

the Puranic churning several objects—good, bad and rent—were brought to the surface. There came out poison as nectar—and also the moon, elephants, horses, trees Lakshmi also came out as a result of that churning. All the objects were distributed to others but the Lord took Lakshmi himself. Here the Lord's Divyamangala Vighraha is referred 'amrutaamsam' the quintessence of amruta. The Vighraha Lakshmi in this churning.

vaimi—I understand; I realise. This predicate has been wisely employed here to show to us Desika's conviction that the Lord's image-forms are the quintessence of Daya. It is only Desika wants that a rare and important Siddhanta or concept he has come to should be properly understood and followed. He employs this word. Vedanta Desika's verdict on an image has to be accepted by all right-thinking men.

जलधेरिव शीतता दये त्वं वृषशैलाधिपतेः स्वभावभूता ।

प्रलयारभटीनटीं तदीक्षां प्रसभं ग्राहयसि प्रसतिलास्यम् ॥ (२३)

aladheriva Seetataa Daye! Twam Vrishasailaadhipathes-svabhavaabhootaa |
'pralayaarabhateenateem tadeekshaam Prasabham Graahaya prasaththi!aasyam." (2)

Dayadevi! You who are of the essence of Lord Srinivasa's nature as coolness is the essential quality of the Sea, force His fearful destructive looks (responsible for pralaya) into sweet and pleasant responsible for creation and protection, and thereby convert the frightful devil-dance into a sweetpaced and lovely Laasya (e).

'It (Para Brahman) looked and said to Itself 'I shall become many',"—so says the Upanishad. The Lord's looks as including His Sankalpa or will are there said to be the immediate cause of creation or projection of the world. Another and different look must have been responsible for Pralaya or destruction. The looks that caused destruction are likened in the sloka to a dancer indulging in Aarabhati, a violent form of dance (aghora-tandava). At the time of Creation those very looks change into laasya—a soft and sweet dance. (These terms are again taken from Bharatasastra—vide sloka 16 above. Aarabhati is used for the 'taandava' of a male; laasya is the dancing of a female).

of a female. In the Yadhavabhyudaya (IV. 120) Sri Krishna dance on the hood of the serpent Kaliya is referred to as aarabhat. Daya is said to be responsible for changing the nature and character of the Lord's looks from the violent and frightful form into the soft and pleasing form. She is said to effect the conversion of force (prasabham).

She is able to effect this change because by nature the Lord is merciful, just as by nature the sea is cool. Though the sea may be rough and hot at times owing to currents and tides, its essential nature is coolness. So too mercifulness is the essential nature of the Lord, and His ferocity and fury which were responsible for the pralaya or destruction were really induced by external causes such as man's ingratitude and insubordination. When Daya Devi suggests to Him to create once again (see sloka 17 above) He very easily agrees to do so because His inherent nature is mercy.

Prasaththi means prasaada or anugraha. There is a paatantha (different reading) for this word as prasakti प्रसक्ति which has been taken to mean the process of creation.

Though some force was necessary on the part of Daya to change the Lord's inclination from pralaya to srishti, she succeeds not because of this force—for no one can force the mighty Lord to do anything against His nature, wish, or desire—but because inherently the Lord is merciful and the moment the suggestion emanates from Daya Devi the Lord eagerly accepts the same and brings about creation and protects the world so created. In sloka 16 above pralaya was said to be an act of Daya. That is the truth about it. But in a general way to the ordinary man pralaya standing for destruction is fearful, while creation is pleasant and agreeable. This sloka portrays this common viewpoint very artistically.

प्रणतप्रतिकूलमूलघाती प्रतिघः कोऽपि वृषाचलेश्वरस्य ।

कलमे यवसायचायनीया करुणे किंकरतां तवोपयाति ॥ (२)

Pranata pratikoolamoolā ghaatee Prathigha (h) Kōpi Vṛishāachaleswara.

Karuna! The anger of that peerless Lord of Vrishaachala attains the state of being your servant (as it gets employed by you) in the cause of rooting out and destroying the obstacles and barriers (in the way of the progress) of those who bow (by prostrating) before the Lord—even like removing grass (weeding) which grass is an obstacle to the adequate growth of paddy crop.

It was said in the previous sloka that the angry mood of the Lord which was responsible for the pralaya was changed into a favourable and benevolent mood in order to bring about creation and protection. Daya Devi, it is said here, does not allow all that anger to go to waste, but harnesses it all in a very proper cause, namely the removal of obstacles in the way of Pranataas or prapannas—those who have bent themselves suppliantly before the Lord, and totally surrendered themselves to Him.

The fierce dance known as aarabhati and referred to in the previous sloka must have been attended by a lot of anger. Daya cleverly changed the aarabhati into laasya. Anger got substituted by shanti and sweetness. Then Daya Devi thought, “why should all this anger be wasted?” It can be enlisted in a good cause and utilised to do away with the difficulties that the devotees of the Lord experience at the hands of the wicked. Anger is useful to destroy the wicked and for the wiping out of the evil doers (Dush-krit-vinaasa). The Lord Himself, it is said, took on anger (‘Kopam Aaharayat-teevram’—Valmiki) and killed His foe by the force of that anger (சினத்தினால் தென்னிலங்கைக் கோமானைச் செற்ற—Tiruppavai 12). The Lord Himself has no foes. He is alike to all—समोहं सर्वभूतेषु (Samoham Sarva Bhootheshu). The enemies of His devotees are alone His enemies and He comes into this world often for protecting the good, (for that purpose) destroying the wicked, and (thereby) establishing Dharma. Daya Devi helps in the process in two ways, one by egging Him on to protect the righteous, and another by making Him weed out the wicked. In order to bring about the latter, she has necessarily to make the Lord angry against the bad sort. This is what is referred to in this sloka by saying that the Lord’s anger is made to subserve Daya in the process of protecting the good.

The analogy makes the meaning clear. In the course of cultivation an important duty of the cultivator is to remove the weeds that grow alongside the crops and impede their proper growth.

Periodical weeding is very essential for the full and healthy grow of crops. So too Sadhus have to be protected by weeding of evil-doers. Daya Devi achieves this result by utilising the service of the Lord's anger. So that anger is said to become Daya Devi's servant.

क्रोधि is a word which indicates unequalled-ness and extraordinary-ness (In Tamil கோபு means an angry and irate person. I have a feeling that the word has been deliberately used here by the Poet who is a master of Tamil and Sanskrit and also Manipravala in a lighter vein, so that they who can see the trick may enjoy the fun of referring to கோபு Kōpi Vrishachaleswar's Kōpa (கோபு or anger.) Pratigha means anger, wrath.

The structure of the sloka is such that it talks of the Lord's anger becoming a slave to Daya, not of Daya making that anger her servant. When all good qualities are her anucharaas (followers) (sloka 11) anger also evidently desires to enlist itself in Daya's services. The Lord was referred to as a Farmer or Cultivator in sloka 21 above. That idea is developed in this sloka by referring to weeding operations.

अबहिष्कृतनिग्रहान्विदन्तः कमलाकान्तगुणान्स्वतन्त्रतादीन् ।

अविकल्पमनुग्रहं दुहानां भवतीमेव दये भजन्ति सन्तः ॥ (२५)

Abahishkruta nigrahaan vidantaha Kamalaakaanta gunaan svatantratadee

Avikalpam anugraham duhanaam Bhavateemeva Daye! bhajanti Santaha. (25)

Daya Devi! The truly learned and devout people who very well know that the attributes like uncontrolled independence possessed by the Consort of Kamala (Lord Srinivasa) do not eschew (but take in) punishment, rely only on you who uniformly (without any option or alternative) yield (nothing but) protection.

The idea contained in sloka 15 above is pursued here by pointing out how, while all the other attributes of the Lord are common to protectiveness and punishment, the attribute of Daya alone is productive of protection and protection alone. There the six well-known gunas Gnana, Bala etc., were set off against Daya and demonstrated to be useless,—even harmful,—to us in the absence of Daya. Here the other attributes of the Lord are going to make us

(not being dependent on, or subservient to, anyone else) are mentioned and it is pointed out that they are all useful to, and actually used, by the Lord both for protecting and for punishing. In other words they have not banished nigrāha or punishment from the scope and ambit of their activity. But Daya is exclusively there for the purpose of protection. She does not know what punishment is and is therefore uniformly and invariably productive of anugraha or protection alone. With her there is no scope for acting in one of two ways. Vikalpa is changing, option, alternation. The absence of it is avikalpa. Anugraha-duhaanaam—yielding protection even as a cow yields milk for the sustenance of its calf and the delectation of others.

Santaha—Here again the great sages and seers whom Upanishad celebrates as ‘those who alone are’ (vide comment on sloka 22 above) are referred to and their knowledge and behaviour are shown to us for being respectfully adopted and followed. They are also referred to as ‘vidantaha,’—knowing persons. What we know is that except Daya all the attributes of the Lord are capable of being used in punishing us as well as in protecting us: but when Daya comes into play only protection can be had. In a later sloka (64) of this Stotra. Desika goes further and demonstrates how Daya transforms what is intended by the Lord as punishment of a chetana, into that chetana’s protection and for his good.

कमलानिलयस्त्वया दयालुः करुणे निष्करुणा निरूपणे त्वम् ।
अत एव हि तावकाश्रितानां दुरितानां भवति त्वदेव भीतिः ॥ (

Kamalaanilayastvaya dayaaluhu Karune! nishkarunaa niroopane Ataevahitaavakaasritaanaam duritaanaambhavati tvadeva bheetihi

Karuna Devi! The Abode of Kamala or Lakshmi (Lord Srinivasa) becomes a dayalu or merciful person because of you; but on scrutiny (it turns out that) you are yourself really totally bereft of compassion (Karuna). Because of this only, the sins of those who rely on you for help are afraid only of you.

Daya is here described as nirdaya. Virodaalankara. Paradoxical as it may seem, contact with Daya makes the Lord a dayavan, merciful Being; but she herself has no daya or pity (towards certain persons). Here, the sins of the Lord’s devotees who rely on His Daya are personified and it is stated that they are really afraid only of Daya and not of the mighty Lord. For while the gnition from the Lord, they will not get any quarter from a Devi who mercilessly puts them down in protecting their rely on her.

To call a person merciless smacks of ninda निन्दा or abuse. The point of the abuse is to demonstrate how complete and firm Daya's protectiveness is in regard to her votaries. So this form of ninda-stuti (praise through apparent abuse).

Daya is itself an attribute or quality (guna) and hence it cannot have a guna or attribute. Therefore Daya makes of the sort of Sri a Dayaavan by being His guna or quality. But it cannot be an attribute of Daya itself and so Daya is bereft of that attribute of Daya or mercy, and this is very cleverly stated by referring to Daya having no Daya.

अतिलङ्घितशसासनेष्वभीक्ष्णं वृषशैलाधिपतिर्विजृम्भितोष्मा ।

पुनरेव दये क्षमानिदानमैवतीमाद्रियते भवयधीनैः ॥ (२७)

langhita Saasaneshvabheekshnam Vrishasailaadhipatir

vijrumbhithoshma

reva Daye! Kshamaanidaanaaihi Bhavateem aadriyate bhavayadheenaihi. (2

Dayaa! The Lord of Vrishasaila, who manifests great heat (anger) due to the perpetual transgressions (by people) of His mandates, turns to you (and relies on you) once again with consideration and respect for the forgiveness-inducing acts that are peculiarly ascribable to you.

Doshma, meaning heat or fever, and nidana, meaning pathology or diagnosis, are terms taken from Ayurveda, the science of medicine.

Angered by the increasing sinningness, and the transgression from the prescribed path, on the part of created beings, the Lord Himself, say, gets high fever. Daya Devi then begins to doctor Him with her prescriptions, administrations and applications allay the fever. And the Lord gratefully respects and honours her as His saviour.

This and the next sloka deal with the benefits that the Lord Himself derives from Daya Devi. Having postulated that the Lord has a Vigraha or body—the topic of this decade (vide sloka 26)—that idea is kept in mind in these two slokas (27 and 28). Bringing out the great truth that Daya Devi brings comfort and relief not only to us but to the Lord Himself.

The use of the term 'punareva' (once again) shows that only when Daya is forgotten by the Lord He gets into an a state at His creatures' sins, and thereby develops fever. W once again He turns to Daya, He feels relieved of the fever restored to normal.

Nidaanam means a primary cause, also a cause in general. causes that bring about forgiveness (Kshama) are of Daya D doing. So they are referred to here as Daya-adheena. It is when forgiveness is injected into the Lord by Daya Devi who correctly spotted the trouble (diagnosed the disease) that the Lc fever is said to subside. When she effects this cure, the Lo immediately pleased and He fittingly remunerates (honours) Doctor,—Daya Devi.

करुणे दुरितेषु मामकेषु प्रतिकारान्तरदुर्जयेषु खिन्नः ।

कवचायितया त्वयैव शार्ङ्गी विजयस्थानमुपाश्रितो वृषाद्रिम् ॥ (

Karune! duriteshu मामakeshu Pratikaaraantara durjayeshu khin Kavachaayitaya tvayaiva Sarngē Vijayastanam upaasrito Vrishaadrim.

Karuna Devi! That Wielder of the Sarnga (Kodanda:] grieved at the fact that my sins cannot be vanquished by any means, has fled to Vrishaadri and taken His stand there (as i invulnerable fort) as the place of His victory, covering Himself your helpful self as an armour.

In the previous sloka the analogy employed related to and the cure from it. In this sloka the poet employs the inci of warfare to bring out the idea he seeks to convey. The committed by me, the poet says, are like so many darts or a flung at His sweet and soft form. He cannot ward off those a by any of the usual means employed in warfare calculated to de them and prevent them from doing harm and inflicting wo The sins cannot be destroyed except by expiation (prayasc or enjoyment of fruits (anubhava) vide sloka 34 post. I do not feel repentant; how am I going to take to expiation? If I a get the punishment I deserve for those sins, even eternity w inadequate to see me punished for all my sins. They are so and so numerous. So the Lord is very much pained and (Khinnaha).

The only chance of victory that suggests itself to Him is to retreat to a place where He will not have to see my sins and sinful propensities. That place is Tirumalai. By its sacredness it destroys the sins of even such as me because I paid obeisance to it. Even on the heights of His victory-seat (Vijayastana) He encase Himself in an armour of Daya, just like a warrior donning the armour for protection from hostile attacks. Daya is thus the Kavachā or armour which the Lord puts on.

The description of the Lord as Saarngee (शार्ङ्गी) in this śloka is worthy of being enjoyed by all rasikas. This name of the Lord occurs in only one other śloka in this stotra—the 106th—where He is referred to as Saarnghadhanva. We shall enjoy its beauty and appropriateness there.

Here Desika has deliberately employed the term Saarngee (the wielder of that powerful bow known as Saarnga: சார்ங்கமென்றும் வில்லாண்டான் as Periyalwar has put it) to show that the Lord's failure to achieve victory, by means other than what involves the employment of Daya, is not due to His being a weak or powerless person bereft of the essential qualities of a warrior. He is in fact a Sarva-Shakta, a Mahaveera, and the most powerful of weapons, the Kodanda, is in His hands. He can put down, subdue and vanquish any one. As Valmiki has put it, if He makes up His mind to kill a person in war, there is no one strong enough to protect such a person—Traatum-na-Shaktaahayudhi-Ramavadhyam त्रतु न शक्ता युधि रामदध्य. That way of achieving victory however does not appeal to the Lord. His great desire is to quell and vanquish the sin in the sinner and not to kill and end the sinner himself. Has He not as Sri Rama given to us the correct definition of a Veera as Paapam Aaryena yo hanti saha veeraha पापं अयेन यो हन्ति स वीरः—He is the true veera who quells sin by righteousness. With His Saarnga He can only mow down millions as He did in the Ramayana. That however He does not reckon as victory. He with the Saarnga in His hands is thus helpless against my sins, since the Saarnga can only kill me but not my sins. Daya has therefore to come to His rescue as a protector against sins. And therefore with Daya as His armour He attains the seat of victory, Tirumalai, which, as explained in the commentary on the very first śloka of this Stotra, is itself capable of cleansing us of our Sins.

incidentally this शुभत्व (Subhatva) or auspiciousness of his Tirumeni (கிருமேனி) or glorious body is shown result of its intimate contact with Daya,—as intimate as an armour.

मयि तिष्ठति दुष्कृतां प्रधाने मितदोषानितरान्विचिन्वती त्वम् ।
 अपराधमणैरपूर्णकुक्षिः कमलाकान्तदये कथं भवित्री ॥ itishtati dushkrtaam pradhane mitadoshaan itaraan vichin aadhaganairapoornakukshihi Kamalaakaanta Daye! ka bhavitree

When I am here, the chief among evildoers, O! Daya! yo arch of others who have but limited sins to their credit. By s protecting those others you will not at all feel satisfied or I will feel like one whose stomach does not get its fill of feed.
 a! how are you going to thrive (live)?

The thought of his own huge load of sins which found me e previous sloka persists in this sloka too. There it was s the Lord Himself felt deeply pained and hurt at those t pains the Lord is pleasing to Daya, it is stated here.
 Daya react to sins in diametrically opposite ways. God w ns in human beings and feels hurt and wounded. Daya g sins and takes a pleasure and pride in excusing and forg
 u. This feature of Daya Devi is pictured here by refe ns as Daya's food by which her hunger gets appeased. I ers to protect sinners. Their sins therefore get consi daya. The larger the quantity she consumes the greater he degree of appeasement.

The poet in the intensity of his devotional fervour calls hi rch-sinner and the leader among sinners. This is a very re with all great acharyas. Nammalwar refers to himse யேன் and கொடுவினை யேன் (sinner with a vast loa ous sins) நவிலாத தீவினைகள் எத்தனை செய்தனன் t a lot of enormous sins have I committed) and s andar sings about himself as அமர्याத: ஆத: Amaryad idraha and so on showering on himself ten such epi owing in their wake Desika also very often refers to hi for the greatest and tallest among sinners. In that ma

The only chance of victory that suggests itself to Him is to retreat to a place where He will not have to see my sins and sinful propensities. That place is Tirumalai. By its sacredness it destroys the sins of even such as me because I paid obeisance to it. Even on the heights of His victory-seat (Vijayastana) He encases Himself in an armour of Daya, just like a warrior donning the armour for protection from hostile attacks. Daya is thus the Kavachā or armour which the Lord puts on.

The description of the Lord as Saarngee (शार्ङ्गी) in this śloka is worthy of being enjoyed by all rasikas. This name of the Lord occurs in only one other śloka in this stotra—the 106th—where He is referred to as Saarnghadhanva. We shall enjoy its beauty and appropriateness there.

Here Desika has deliberately employed the term Saarngee (the wielder of that powerful bow known as Saarnga: சார்ங்கமென் னும லிலவாண்டான் as Periyalwar has put it) to show that the Lord's failure to achieve victory, by means other than what involves the employment of Daya, is not due to His being a weak or powerless person bereft of the essential qualities of a warrior. He is in fact a Sarva-Shakta, a Mahaveera, and the most powerful of weapons, the Kodanda, is in His hands. He can put down, subdue and vanquish any one. As Valmiki has put it, if He makes up His mind to kill a person in war, there is no one strong enough to protect such a person—Traatum-na-Shaktaahayudhi-Ramavadhyam त्रतु न शक्ता यांश्च रामदध्य. That way of achieving victory however does not appeal to the Lord. His great desire is to quell and vanquish the sin in the sinner and not to kill and end the sinner himself. Has He not as Sri Rama given to us the correct definition of a Veera as Paapam Aaryena yo hanti saha veeraha पापं आयेन यो हन्ति स वीरः—He is the true veera who quells sin by righteousness. With His Saarnga He can only mow down millions as He did in the Ramayana. That however He does not reckon as victory. He with the Saarnga in His hands is thus helpless against my sins, since the Saarnga can only kill me but not my sins. Daya has therefore to come to His rescue as a protector against sins. And therefore with Daya as His armour He attains the seat of victory, Tirumalai, which, as explained in the commentary on the very first śloka of this Stotra, is itself capable of cleansing us of our Sins.

Incidentally this शुभत्व (Subhatva) or auspiciousness of the Lord's Tirumeni (திருமேனி) or glorious body is shown to be the result of its intimate contact with Daya,—as intimate as that of an armour.

मयि तिष्ठति दुष्कृतां प्रधाने मितदोषानितरान्विचिन्वती त्वम् ।

अपराधगणैरपूर्णकुक्षिः कमलाकान्तदये कथं भवित्री ॥ (२९)

Mayitisthati dushkrtaam pradhaane mitadoshaan itaraan vichinvatee tvam
Aparaadhaganairapoornakukshihi Kamalaakaanta Daye! katham bhavitree (29)

When I am here, the chief among evildoers, O! Daya! you are in search of others who have but limited sins to their credit. By saving and protecting those others you will not at all feel satisfied or happy but will feel like one whose stomach does not get its fill of feed. Poor Daya! how are you going to thrive (live)?

The thought of his own huge load of sins which found mention in the previous sloka persists in this sloka too. There it was stated that the Lord Himself felt deeply pained and hurt at those sins. What pains the Lord is pleasing to Daya, it is stated here. God and Daya react to sins in diametrically opposite ways. God winces at sins in human beings and feels hurt and wounded. Daya gloats over sins and takes a pleasure and pride in excusing and forgiving them. This feature of Daya Devi is pictured here by referring to sins as Daya's food by which her hunger gets appeased. Daya hankers to protect sinners. Their sins therefore get consumed by Daya. The larger the quantity she consumes the greater will be the degree of appeasement.

The poet in the intensity of his devotional fervour calls himself an arch-sinner and the leader among sinners. This is a very usual feature with all great acharyas. Nammalwar refers to himself as பாவியேன் and கொடுவினையேன் (sinner with a vast load of heinous sins) ஈவிலாத தீவினையுள் எத்தனை செய்தனன்கொல் (what a lot of enormous sins have I committed) and so on. Alavandar sings about himself as அமர்யாத் துட: Amaryadhaha Kshudraha and so on showering on himself ten such epithets. Following in their wake Desika also very often refers to himself as by far the greatest and tallest among sinners. In that mood he plaintively tells Daya Devi, “please turn your attention on me.

I promise you good and full food for you in the shape of sins. You are out to save sinners. By saving persons who have committed small sins you will not do justice to yourself and you will not feel satisfied. So I tell you, please turn toward me and do not waste your time searching for others whose sins will be nothing before my sins. If after such search you alight upon some of them and save them, you surely are not going to be satisfied. You will surely feel then like a hungry giant being fed on half a loaf of bread. And when I am here in the nature of a full and rich repast why turn your eyes on insufficient rationed food? I feel very much concerned to think of your semi-starvation. How are you going to live, to thrive, unless you take me on hand, protect me and feel happy that it has been given to you to achieve the redemption and protection of the greatest of sinners."?

The words used suggest that the poet takes pity and compassion on Daya Devi who is herself a storehouse of mercy.

अहमभ्यपराधचक्रवर्ती करुणे त्वं च गुणेषु सार्वभौमी ।

विदुषी स्थितिमीदृशीं स्वयं मां वृषशैलेश्वरपादसात्कुरु त्वम् ॥ (२०)

Ahamasmi aparaadha (aparaadhi) chakravarti Karune! tvamcha guneshu saarvabhaumee

Vidusheestitimeedrseem swayam maam Vrishasailesvara Paadaasat Kuru tvam. (30)

I am the emperor of crimes (or I am an emperor among criminals). You are an Empress among good qualities (attributes). Knowing this state of affairs it is up to you to tie me up to the feet of Vrishasailesvara on your own initiative.

The poet who called himself "dushkrtam-pradhaanaha:" or "chief among wrong-doers" in sloka 29 refers to himself here as an emperor of crimes (or, in the paata 'aparaadhichakravarti' as, "the emperor among criminals." He refers to Daya Devi as an Empress of gunaas or good attributes. The glory of an Empress will go up if she enslaves an emperor and imprisons him. Therefore Daya Devi is requested in and by this sloka to capture Desika as a prisoner -of-war and to imprison him at the feet of the Lord of Vrishasaila. Being Swaadheena-Vrishagireesa (sloka 11), i.e., having Lord Srinivasa Himself under her sway, she is called upon by the poet to make him His vassal.

aparaadna-chakravartee may also be split u ra-vartee, meaning thereby one who lives move a paraadha, i.e., fault, crime, sin and so on.
 vortex of crime. Round about me everywhere there is nought but aparaadha. I am the cent ple build forts and ramparts for their safety and I am living in such a state in the midst of si io are an Empress backed up by strength, valou as (sloka 11) to besiege me, blast the rampart t and to come in and capture me and enslav nplish this task. You know full well this sta cries out for redress.

‘swayam’ can be taken along with ‘vidu which case tvam coming at the end of the slok for the predicate Paadasaat kuru; or tvam m th vidhushee and the sloka read as ‘swayam paad by yourself and without any move from me ex
 If you expect me to move in the matter, I may o of your own accord.

decad thus winds up with a prayer to Daya to of the Lord. The vigraha of the Lord is so bea that the moment one learns about it one haste an enjoyment is to be obtained only by falli t can be done only if Daya Devi takes pity on u so.

ly it may be noted that in the first sloka of this s used. Then regularly Karuna and Daya have alternate slokas.

I promise you good and full food for you in the shape of sin. You are out to save sinners. By saving persons who have committed small sins you will not do justice to yourself and you will not feel satisfied. So I tell you, please turn toward me and do not waste your time searching for others whose sin will be nothing before my sins. If after such search you alight upon some of them and save them, you surely are not going to be satisfied. You will surely feel then like a hungry giant being fed on half a loaf of bread. And when I am here in the nature of a full and rich repast why turn your eyes on insufficient rationed food? I feel very much concerned to think of your semi-starvation. How are you going to live, to thrive, unless you take me on hand, protect me and feel happy that it has been given to you to achieve the redemption and protection of the greatest of sinners."?

The words used suggest that the poet takes pity and compassion on Daya Devi who is herself a storehouse of mercy.

अहमभ्यपराधचक्रवर्ती करुणे त्वं च गुणेषु सार्वभौमी ।

विदुषी स्थितिमीदृशीं स्वयं मां वृषशैलेश्वरपादसात्कुरु त्वम् ॥ (३०)

Ahamasmi aparaadha (aparaadhi) chakravarti Karune! tvamcha guneshu saarvabhaumee

Vidusheestitimeedrseem swayam maam Vrishasaleswara Paadaasat Kuru tvam. (30)

I am the emperor of crimes (or I am an emperor among criminals). You are an Empress among good qualities (attributes). Knowing this state of affairs it is up to you to tie me up to the feet of Vrishasaleswara on your own initiative.

The poet who called himself "dushkrtam-pradhaanaha:" or "chief among wrong-doers" in sloka 29 refers to himself here as an emperor of crimes (or, in the paata 'aparaadhichakravarti' as, "the emperor among criminals." He refers to Daya Devi as an Empress of gunaas or good attributes. The glory of an Empress will go up if she enslaves an emperor and imprisons him. Therefore Daya Devi is requested in and by this sloka to capture Desika as a prisoner-of-war and to imprison him at the feet of the Lord of Vrishasaila. Being Swaadheena-Vrishagireesa (sloka 11), i.e., having Lord Srinivasa Himself under her sway, she is called upon by the poet to make him His vassal.

The term aparaadha-chakravartee may also be split up as aparadha-chakra-vartee, meaning thereby one who lives moves and has his being in aparaadha, i.e., fault, crime, sin and so on. I am literally in the vortex of crime. Round about me everywhere, and ever and anon, there is nought but aparaadha. I am the centre of sin. Some people build forts and ramparts for their safety and live within them. I am living in such a state in the midst of sin. I beseech you who are an Empress backed up by strength, valour and other anucharaas (sloka 11) to besiege me, blast the rampart walls, shatter my fort and to come in and capture me and enslave me. You can accomplish this task. You know full well this state of affairs which cries out for redress.

The word 'swayam' can be taken along with 'vidushee' (you know) in which case tvam coming at the end of the sloka will be the subject for the predicate Paadasaat kuru; or tvam may be taken along with vidhushee and the sloka read as 'swayam paadasaat kuru'—Please by yourself and without any move from me enslave me at His feet. If you expect me to move in the matter, I may not. So please do so of your own accord.

The third decad thus winds up with a prayer to Daya to take us to the Feet of the Lord. The vigraha of the Lord is so beautiful and attractive that the moment one learns about it one hastens to enjoy it. Such an enjoyment is to be obtained only by falling at His feet. That can be done only if Daya Devi takes pity on us and makes us do so.

Incidentally it may be noted that in the first sloka of this decad Anukampa was used. Then regularly Karuna and Daya have been employed in alternate slokas.

श्रीमते निगमान्तमहादेशिकाय नमः

श्री श्रीनिवास परब्रह्मणे नमः

॥ दयाशतकम् ॥

DAYAA SATAKAM

FOURTH DECAD

THE third Decad started with a sloka in which the word 'Maaline' finds a place. The fourth decad employs the Malinee metre. It is a metre with fifteen aksharaas in a paada. Its lilting rhythm is a very pleasing feature of this metre.

As the stotra proceeds, the incorporation in it of the thoughts and ideas of the Dramidopanishad becomes more and more apparent. The topic of the fourth 'Paththu' (பத்து) of Tiruvoimozhi is the Sarva-bhogyaatisaayitvam of the Lord. That is, His enjoyableness and the delectation He affords to His devotees, excel every other enjoyment known to man: against them the other enjoyments pale into nothingness. In the second decad the atibhogyabhava or high degree of enjoyability was enjoyed. After knowing about His beautiful Roopa in the 3rd paththu, Nammalwar postulates that no other enjoyment can come anywhere near the enjoyable quality of the Lord and thereby demonstrates how He excels (अतिशय) all other joys. This fourth decad of Daya Sataka deals with this trait of the Lord very pointedly as we shall see.

While singing the very first sloka of this decad it is obvious that the poet is thinking of the gist of the first verse of Nammalwar's fourth Paththu “காலம்பெறச்சிந்தித்து உய்மிடுனா” ‘Betake yourselves betimes to thinking of Him and thereby save yourselves.’ The idea of this 31st sloka is, while there is strength in the body and while the karanaas are properly functioning let me go up the Tirumalai Hill and take my residence there to obtain the grace of the Gracious Lord of that Hill.

अश्लिथिलकरणेऽस्मिन्नक्षतश्वासवृत्तौ

वपुषि गमनयोग्ये वासमासादयेयम् ।

वृषगिरिकटकेषु व्यञ्जयत्सु प्रतीतै-

र्मधुमथनदये त्वां वारिधाराविशेषैः ॥

(३१)

Asithila Karanesmin Akashta-shwasa vritttau

Vapushigamana yogye vaasam aasadayeyam ।

Vrishagiri-kataakeshu vyanjayatsu prateetaihi

Madhumathana Daye! tvaam varidhaara viseshaihi ॥ (31)

O! Daya of the slayer of (the asura) Madhu! while these karanaas of mine are unenfeebled, while the breathing function (in my body) is uninjured and unhurt, and while my body is still fit to freely go about. I desire to live (have my residence) on the sides (slopes) of Vrishagiri (Tirumala Hill), the famous waterfalls of which reveal and demonstrate (to us) your own flow.

Like all hills, the Tirumala Hill is also famous for its falls, such as Akasha-ganga, Paapa-vinaasa, and so on. The majestic flow of water in those falls remind Desika of the flow of Daya, how from the heights of the mighty and majestic Lord, Daya flows down and down, lower and lower, till she bathes the lowliest of the low in her beneficent waters. He therefore refers to the falls as demonstrating and visibly illustrating to us the pravaaha or flow of Daya. Vaari is water, and dhaara is a downward current, a descending stream.

Life on the Tirumalai Hill is prayed for for the reason that by seeing the water falls which are there in plenty one will ever and anon be reminded and kept in mind of Daya.

In the days of the Alvars and of Desika there were no ghat roads and no vehicles to take people up the Hill. Ascent of the Hill was a very difficult and laborious process. It could not be accomplished unless one had a sound, strong and sturdy body. The powers of sight, hearing etc. (Indhriyas) should be keen and unimpaired. The lungs must be functioning properly so that the difficult ascent involving a great strain on breathing may not have any adverse effect on the breathing process. The body itself should be capable of free and easy movement. The wise man therefore will like to accomplish the climbing of the Tirumala Hill while his faculties are unimpaired and intact, and will not postpone

What Daya Devi achieves with a view to protect us is a matter for wonder and admiration for Sridevi and Bhoodevi. Protection of persons like us who are ignorant of our own yoga and kshema cannot be an easy task. If at heart we know what is good for ourselves,—what we should get which we do not now have, and what we should safely retain out of those we have—it will be something to proceed upon. Daya has to think for us and find out what will be for our ultimate and lasting good, and what will surely bring about ruin, and then proceed to gather the former and eschew the latter. Tirumangai Alwar in one place refers to the Lord as one ‘ who thinks for me and then extends His mercy towards me ’ தான் எனக்காய் நினைந்து அருள் செய்யும் அப்பன்.

The second epithet ‘ Aatmanaabhigyam ’ (unaware of my own true self) really is explanatory of the first. It is only if I know myself properly that I can find out what is good and what is bad. If I know myself as the human body I crave for food and for all the pleasures of the flesh. If I know myself as a deva I want Amrita for my sustenance, and so on. Prone as I am to identify myself with the body bestowed on me according to my karma, I am not able to see through it and understand my true self as a soul whose very nature is Seshatva towards the Lord.

Added to the two defections, I have nothing of good in me. Guna-lava-rahitam. Bereft of the smallest particle of goodness. And yet undaunted by these shortcomings and frailties in me Daya desires to protect me. (The poet refers to this as a ‘ saahasa ’ सहस or a bold and audacious, if not rash, act on the part of Daya in Sloka 71). Having made up her mind to protect one like me, Daya has to resort to several clever tactics to achieve that result viz., winning over the Lord and getting Him to protect me. By clever arguments and winsome ways, she annexes the Lord who willingly puts Himself in her hands and readily does what she wants Him to do.

Sri Devi and Bhoo-Devi the two Consorts of the Lord ever present by His side see what Daya does and how cleverly she achieves the redemption and rescue of sinning souls. They feel very glad and happy and admire Daya Devi’s inordinate skill and adroitness and look upon her with admiration and esteem. For is not Daya doing what they so keenly desire to do?

फलवितरणदक्षं पक्षपातानभिज्ञं

प्रगुणमनुविधेयं प्राप्य पद्मासहायम् ।

महति गुणसमाजे मानपूर्वं दये त्वं

प्रतिवदसि यथार्हं पाप्मनां मामकानाम् ॥

Phala vitarana daksham pakshapaataanabhigyam

pragunamanuvidheyam praapya padmaasahaayam ।

Mahati guna samaaje maanapoorvam Daye! tvam

prativadasi yathaar-ham paapmanaam maamakaanaam ॥

Daya Devi! (with a view to defend me against my sins) you to the Court presided over by Srinivasa with Padmavathi by His : Srinivasa who is reputed for His skill in conferring (on human b the (proper and appropriate) fruits of their action, who does not what partiality is, and who is (regards Himself as) bound b laws of Manu, and before the august assembly constituted b great gunas (of the Lord), you by quoting and referring to pran (authority and precedent) very cleverly reply to the argumen my sins who prosecute me (before that Court).

Vedanta Desika's Sarva-tantra-swatantratva (mastery all the arts, crafts and sciences) is illustrated by this sloka v shows to us his great and intimate knowledge of the working Courts of Justice. It is really marvellous to see how intim acquainted he must have been with the theory and practice of and of the fundamentals of jurisprudence. This sloka desc a Sessions Court and its workings in meticulous detail.

The Court is presided over not by a single judge but by a Be The word Padmaa-Sahaayam has been deliberately used to de that the Judge is Sreenivasa, the Consort of Padma, and also He has the sahaya (help) of Padmavati in deciding cases. A Be of two judges even today is preferred to a single judge beca where there are two judges there is no scope for any one to comp of individual caprices or idiosyncracies coming into play. E will act as a corrective to the other.

Then the three requisites of a great and upright judge indicated. A judge must have the capacity to sift the right fr the wrong and to pass the proper judgment or sentence in e case. His conclusion must be backed up by sanction or the fo of authority. In other words not only must he be clever and capa the matter of proper adjudication, but he must be powerful enough to effectuate and carry out his own decrees and dictates. The words phala-vitarana-daksham refer to these aspects. Vitarana only means giving, but also effectively giving the phala or fruit as the result of actions.

The next qualification of a judge is his utter impartiality in hearing and adjudging causes. It may be noted how the poet does not say 'impartial' but says ignorant of partiality. The judge must not know to be partial or one-sided: it must have no bias in his constitution or make up. He must dispense justice to one and all.

Dispensation of justice according to law is the third aspect stressed by Desika here. Manu stands for laws, ordinances, rules and regulations. Praguna-Manu refers to the great and noted Manu-Dharma Shashtra. The judge must obey law: he must be 'vidheya,' subject to and controlled by it, namely law. We require justice according to the strict legal principles and doctrines stressed. In Padmaa-sahaayatva, we have the combination of the other principle of justice being tempered with mercy. Padma Lakshmi is the embodiment of Mercy and Her association assures us of Mercy, whereas the submissiveness to law (Manu-ayatva) assures us of justice according to law. It is really difficult even for a modern student of the science of law or jurisprudence to find fault with Desika's concept of a Judge or in any way to improve on it. So much for the sentiments incorporated in the first half of the sloka.

The second half shows that the Court is a criminal court where a man is tried for offences alleged to have been committed by him, not a civil court where the rights of parties are adjudged. We have prosecution, defence and what is more, a jury. The sins are the prosecutors, the guna samaja or assemblage of gunas is the jury and Daya Devi is defence counsel. So minutely indeed is the case worked out in this sloka. It is said that Daya Devi (like a lady in the Merchant of Venice) comes into a Court peopled by sinners and pleads. Guna is masculine gender. Before that assembly convenes. Daya, a lady, boldly comes and pleads on my behalf,—and she very touchingly says. Luckily there is a lady on the Bench—Lakshmi. The jury is to advise the judge in regard to conclusions

फलवितरणदक्षं पक्षपातानभिज्ञं

प्रगुणमनुविधेयं प्राप्य पद्मासहायम् ।

महति गुणसमाजे मानपूर्वं दये त्वं

प्रतिवदसि यथार्हं पाप्मनां मामकानाम् ॥

(३३)

Phala vitarana daksham pakshapaataanabhigyam

pragunamanuvidheyam praapya padmaasahaayam ।

Mahati guna samaaje maanapoorvam Daye! tvam

prativadasi yathaar-ham paapmanaam maamakaanaam " (33)

Daya Devi! (with a view to defend me against my sins) you repair to the Court presided over by Srinivasa with Padmavathi by His side—Srinivasa who is reputed for His skill in conferring (on human beings) the (proper and appropriate) fruits of their action, who does not know what partiality is, and who is (regards Himself as) bound by the laws of Manu, and before the august assembly constituted by the great gunas (of the Lord), you by quoting and referring to pramaana (authority and precedent) very cleverly reply to the arguments of my sins who prosecute me (before that Court).

Vedanta Desika's Sarva-tantra-swatantratva (mastery over all the arts, crafts and sciences) is illustrated by this sloka which shows to us his great and intimate knowledge of the workings of Courts of Justice. It is really marvellous to see how intimately acquainted he must have been with the theory and practice of law and of the fundamentals of jurisprudence. This sloka describes a Sessions Court and its workings in meticulous detail.

The Court is presided over not by a single judge but by a Bench. The word Padmaa-Sahaayam has been deliberately used to denote that the Judge is Sreenivasa, the Consort of Padma, and also that He has the sahaya (help) of Padmavati in deciding cases. A Bench of two judges even today is preferred to a single judge because where there are two judges there is no scope for any one to complain of individual caprices or idiosyncracies coming into play. Each will act as a corrective to the other.

Then the three requisites of a great and upright judge are indicated. A judge must have the capacity to sift the right from the wrong and to pass the proper judgment or sentence in each case. His conclusion must be backed up by sanction or the force of authority. In other words not only must he be clever and capable in the matter of proper adjudication, but he must be powerful enough to effectuate and carry out his own decrees and dictates. The words phala-vitarana-daksham refer to these aspects. Vitarana not only means giving, but also effectively giving the phala or fruit or result of actions.

The next qualification of a judge is his utter impartiality in judging and adjudging causes. It may be noted how the poet does not say 'impartial' but says ignorant of partiality. The judge must not know to be partial or one-sided: it must have no place in his constitution or make up. He must dispense justice alike to one and all.

Dispensation of justice according to law is the third aspect stressed by Desika here. Manu stands for laws, ordinances, rules and regulations. Praguna-Manu refers to the great and noted Manu-Dharma Shastra. The judge must obey law: he must be its 'vidheya,' subject to and controlled by it, namely law. We see here justice according to the strict legal principles and doctrines being stressed. In Padmaa-sahaayatva, we have the combination of the other principle of justice being tempered with mercy. Padma or Lakshmi is the embodiment of Mercy and Her association assures us of Mercy, whereas the submissiveness to law (Manu-vidheyatva) assures us of justice according to law. It is really difficult even for a modern student of the science of law or jurisprudence to find fault with Desika's concept of a Judge or in any way to improve on it. So much for the sentiments incorporated in the first half of the sloka.

The second half shows that the Court is a criminal court where a man is tried for offences alleged to have been committed by him, and not a civil court where the rights of parties are adjudged. We find prosecution, defence and what is more, a jury. The sins are the prosecutors, the guna samaja or assemblage of gunas is the jury and Daya Devi is defence counsel. So minutely indeed is the idea worked out in this sloka. It is said that Daya Devi (like Portia in the Merchant of Venice) comes into a Court peopled by men and pleads. Guna is masculine gender. Before that assembly of men. Daya, a lady, boldly comes and pleads on my behalf,—Desika very touchingly says. Luckily there is a lady on the Bench—Padmavathi. The jury is to advise the judge in regard to conclusions

Lord such as the shad-gunaas referred to in sloka 15 above, the gunas like swaatantrya (independence) etc. indicated in sloka 25, and the gunaas like vaatsalya (tenderness and affection)—all of them together constitute the consultative body—the Jury in this trial of the human soul.

The sins themselves are the prosecutors. There are as many prosecutions, charges and charge-sheets as there are sins alleged to have been committed by the accused. Daya Devi counters and refutes all of them in the process of defending the accused at the bar. Some commentators have said that the gunaas are the prosecutors. It is however submitted that the words paapmanaam-prativadasi (you argue against sins) clearly indicate that the sins are the prosecutors and Daya Devi argues contra. In another place Desika employs the same analogy of a wakil pleading as against sins “Durvaara-teevra-durita-prativaavadookaihi” (Dehalee-sastuti) and there also the reference is to arguing against sins.

On what basis does Daya Devi repel the prosecution arguments—by pointless rhetoric or arguments ad hominem? No, Maanapoorvam. Based on authority,—both the written law and the interpreted law in the shape of precedents. Daya Devi’s defence arguments are all submitted in strict accordance with law. No beating about the bush and humming and hawing without relevant or substantial material. Desika seems to give tips even to lawyers.

The word pragunamanuvidheyam has been split up into pragunam and anuvidheyam by some commentators. Pragunam means excellent; anu-vidheyam means amenable to every one. Both these are to be taken as adjectives of Padmaashayam. This interpretation though possible does not appear to be more apt and appropriate than the one adopted above, which fits in with the lofty conception and full description of a judge which Desika seems to aim at in the sloka.

अनुभवितुमधौघं नालमागामिकालः प्रशमयितुमशेषं निष्क्रियाभिर्नशक्यम् ।
स्वयमिति हि दये त्वं स्वीकृतश्रीनिवासा शिथिलितभवभीतिः श्रेयसे जायसे नः॥(३४)

Anubhavitum aghaugham naalam agaami

Kaalaha Prasamayitum asesham nishkriyabhir nasakyam ।

Swayamitihi Daye! tvam sweekruta Sreenivasaa

Shithilita bhavabheetihi Shreyase Jayase naha ॥

Daya Devi! seeing that all time to come will not suffice for my working out the multitude of my sins, and that those countless sins can never be totally extinguished by the performance of suitable praayas-chittas or expiations, you of your own accord come into being for our welfare, annex Lord Srinivaasa, and convert Him to your view point, and thereby loosen and destroy our frightful shackles of samsara.

It looks as if one very convincing argument of Daya Devi as our defence counsel is given by way of illustration or specimen in this sloka.

The sins committed by us rise up as our prosecutors and clamour for the appropriate punishment being accorded to us for those sins. Daya Devi argues thereupon thus; "Well, be it so. But has any one thought of this? Even granting that this accused ceases committing any further sins from this moment, what length of time will be taken up in his working out all his untold multitude of sins committed during ages on ages! In all time to come he will be undergoing punishment. Time may cease but the sentences for the crime committed by him will not have run out. How then is anyone going to properly and adequately punish him and see that he serves the periods of all sentences of punishment for his sins. This is on the assumption that he ceases to sin from this moment—an impossible assumption. In fact he is going on committing in the fraction of a second (kshanaardha) crimes and sins which will qualify him for all the hell-fires for all eternity. If it is impossible to punish him fully for all his sins, and only a portion of his sins is capable of being punished, where are you going to draw the line? If you are going to excuse and quash a portion of his merited punishment, why not excuse and quash the whole?"

Finding it difficult to meet this very pertinent argument, the question of working out the sins by expiatory ceremonies is raised by some one in court, either by some member of the jury or from the Bench. Daya Devi readily retorts 'you do not know this accused person as well as I know him. He never commits sins for which expiations are prescribed. He makes it a point to commit only such sins as are classified as 'heinous' and for which no one can ever lay down a course of expiation. And if ever there is an act for which expiation is laid down and he were to adopt it, in the course of that very process of expiation he commits gross apacharas which constitute fresh crimes in addition to working out expiation itself useless. So one has to draw a blank here also. So, what is left but to pardon? Thus arguing Daya melts the heart of the Lord. In other words Daya takes birth in the Lord's heart. That is shown by the use of the word Jayaase, you are born. For our Shreyas or glory and benefit you are born. Swayam you take birth of your own accord, not even at our request or prayer. Unsolicited, you take shape and work for our good by capturing Sreenivasa; and thereby our fears in regard to release from samsara or the cycle of birth and death get loosened and ultimately lost. Even for me there is thus hope of safety and security.

अवतरणविशेषैरात्मलीलापदेशै-

स्वमतिमनुकम्पे मन्दचित्तेषु विन्दन् ।

वृषभशिखरिनाथस्त्वन्निदेशेन नूनं

भजति शरणभाजां भाविनो जन्मभेदान् ॥ (३५)

Avatarana viseshaihi atmaleelaapadesaihi

Avamatim anukampe! mandachitteshu vindan

Vrishabhashikari nathaha tvannidesena noonam

Bhajati Sharana bhaajaam bhaavino janmabhedhaan " (35)

Anukampa! the great Lord of Vrishabha Hill, at your behest and on your command, takes on several different births in this world, which series of births should really be undergone by those who have become His Saranaagataas. And He pretends to do so out of His sportive instinct; (far from being praised for this vicarious act of nobility) He receives nothing but disregard disrespect and contempt at the hands of the foolish.

Every deed must receive its reward or punishment. So where the several and countless janmaas (births) of the individual soul which that soul must have taken in order to enjoy the fruits of its actions, are wiped out by the gracious intervention of Daya, someone must in the place of that soul take those births. Daya ordains that the Lord Himself should do so. And in obedience to that command the Lord takes several births or avataaraas in this world. As He does so on the initiation and at the instigation of Daya, these avataaraas of the Lord are Daya-kaarya, or the work of Daya. They are also dictated by Leela or sport. The Lord is born not because of karma but out of His own sweet will and pleasure.

And He enjoys His births and avataaraas. So they are also due to the sportive instinct in Him. But as the immediate cause of the avataara is Daya, sport becomes a secondary and auxiliary cause and so is referred to here as an apadesa—pretext. It redounds to the Lord's greatness that He takes those several janmaas in spite of the fact that fools (referred to as मूढाः in the Gita) do not understand Him aright—(अवजानन्ति) but begin to abuse and despise Him. That is referred to in this sloka by the words Avamatim and vindan.

The lives to come for those who give themselves up to the Lord (Sharana-bhaajaam) are undergone by the Lord at the dictate of Daya. In their case it would have been a punishment and a banishment; but in the case of the Lord it is a leela, sport.

By the use of the word 'noonam' the poet signifies that it is really so, and incidentally indicates that it is an utpreksha—nice poetical fancy.

परहितमनुकम्पे भावयन्त्यां भवत्यां

स्थिरमनुपधि हार्दं श्रीनिवासो दधानः ।

ललितरुचिषु लक्ष्मी भूमिनीलासु नूनं

प्रथयति बहुमानं त्वत्प्रतिच्छन्दबुद्ध्या ॥ (३६)

Parahitam Anukampe! bhaavayantyaam bhavatyaaam

Sthiram anupadhi haardam Sreenivaso dadhaanaha!

Lalita ruchishu Lakshmee Bhoomi-Neelasu noonam

Prathayati bahumaanam twatpratichchandabudhya" (36)

Devi Anukampa! Lord Sreenivasa who bears permanent and spontaneous love towards you who always think of the welfare and well-being of others, displays great regard towards His Consorts Lakshmi Devi, Bhodevi and Neeladevi of attractive brilliance and glory, only because He thinks that they are reflections (images) of you.

Lest the reader should get the idea that the Lord may get vexed with Daya Devi for compelling Him to suffer the indignities of avataara as indicated in the previous sloka, the poet hastens in this sloka to postulate the great regard that He has towards Daya. And he does it with remarkable effect by pointing out that the Lord's great regard for, and love towards, His Consorts are really the outcome of His noticing and appreciating the great quality of

The Lord's fondness towards Daya is anupadhi, unconditioned not due to any cause; spontaneous. Daya by nature is ever anon mindful of para-hitam or the welfare and well-being of others. Para will indicate not only others but also enemies. It is Daya's great quality that she will think of, and act for, the welfare of even enemies of the Lord. As her name employed in this sloka Anu-kampa (sympathy) indicates, she shudders over in line with the sufferer. That the Lord's Haardam, love or fondness, is also eternal, permanent, is indicated by the word sthiram.

Ruchi is kanti or lustre. Lalita-ruchi is charming or elegant and pleasing lustre. The Lord's consorts—Lakshmi, Bhoomi and Neela—possess charm and lustre in a preeminent degree. In fact Lakshmi stands for Soundarya, Laavanya and all auspicious forms. But it is pointed out here, the Lord likes them most not because of that quality of theirs but because in His opinion, to His eyes, they appear to be reflections of Daya Devi. The Lord looks upon His consorts as images (prati-bimbhas) of Daya and therefore He manifests prathayati His bahumaanam or high esteem towards them. In the first decad of this stotra we saw Desika dealing with these three Consorts of the Lord in Slokas 6, 7 and 8 and demonstrating how they really help in the redemption of the human soul which is Daya's special merit.

Daya being an attribute has really no body of her own. Lakshmi, Bhoomi and Neela have lustrous roopa or form. And yet the Lord's great love towards them is traceable not to their beauty and elegance but to their possessing in common with Daya the trait of redeeming souls in distress. That is why the Lord's fondness for Daya is said to be anupadhi—causeless, and it is at the same time pointed out that Lakshmi and the other two consorts are held in high esteem because of their emulating Daya in the process of divinising human souls. The use of the word 'noonam' meaning 'indeed' shows that the poet is again indulging in an utpreksha.

वृषगिरिसविधेषु व्याजतो वात्सभाजं

दुरितकलुषितानां दूयमाना दये त्वम् ।

करणविलयकाले कान्दिशीकस्मृतीनां

स्मरयसि बहुलीलं माधवं सावधाना ॥

(३७)

*Trishagiri savidheshu vyaajato vaasa bhaajaam durita kalushitaanaam dooyamaanaa Daye! tvam !
Tarana vilayakaale Kaandisheekasmruteenaam
smarayasi bahuleelam Maadhavam saavadhaanaam* (37)

Daya Devi! Being distressed by the plight of persons stained by sins who happen to reside in the proximity of Tirumala Hill on some pretext or other, you with great care and attention remind the ever portful Madhava about them when they are in extremis, bereft of thought and memory, and when their faculties have all faded away.

Having described in the previous four slokas what the Lord does at Daya's behest for us, in this and the next three slokas, the poet proceeds to indicate how Daya helps us in the process of redeeming us. This sloka describes how during our last moments, when death is creeping over us, Daya reminds the Lord about us and secures for us His grace and bounty.

Based on the Gita Sloka beginning यं यं वापि स्मरन् 'Yam Yam Vaapi maran' (VIII—6) a theory has been adopted in several quarters that unless a man thinks of the Lord when he quits this body, he cannot attain Moksha. One can easily envisage how owing to several reasons a man may be unable to think of God at that particular moment. Vide the Mukunda Mala Sloka in which that poet seeks to take shelter at the feet of the Lord here and now, since it may become impossible later when kapha vaata and Pitha rush the body and make smarana or remembrance impossible. Periyalvar has also sung to the same effect by saying—'I may not be able to think of you when I leave this body and therefore I mention you even now in advance.' This antima-smriti (or remembrance of God during the last moments of our life) as it is called, is regarded as a sine qua non for the attainment of Mukti. In this sloka Desika refers to this and very nicely reconciles the divergent viewpoints about it. Antima smriti literally means remembering at the very end. His remembrance may be the individual soul's or it may be the Lord's. In the Varaha Purana it has been said by the Lord Himself

तवस्तम् प्रियमाणन्तु काष्ठपषाण सन्निभम् ।

अहं स्मरामि मद्भक्तं नयामिपरमां गतिम् ॥

When my bhakta is about to die and lies prostrate and inert like stone or log of wood. I remember him and lead him to the antimadasa, or last moment, of the chetana. There has been some difference of opinion whether antima smṛiti, meaning thereof the chetana's remembrance during his last moments, is necessary even in the case of a prapanna. Some say that it is totally unnecessary. Others say that the Lord will infuse into the prapanna a thought of Him during the last moments and thereby satisfy that condition for the attainment of mukti. This problem is very nicely solved, or rather dissolved by Desika here, by saying that we can be certain of His remembering us during our last moment. And any day His remembrance of us is likely to be more effective and fruitful than our remembrance of Him.

This sloka tells us that Daya Devi it is that is responsible for making the Lord remember us in our last moments. He is a bahuleela—one interested in several sports or activities. He is prone to forget. But Daya Devi with great care reminds Him about us at the psychological moment and makes Him remember us.

But this blessing in the shape of the Lord's thinking of us at that moment (ஆவிசரிந்து போய் போது as Nammalwar has put it) will be available only if we happen to pass into eternity in some place near Tirumala Hill. In spite of being tainted by sins, if a man resides in the vicinity of Tirumala, thereby he becomes the object of Daya Devi's care and affection. When Daya finds him in that state with his memory gone, his faculties lost, just existing as a log of wood or stone, her compassion for him is roused and at once she reminds the Lord and makes Him remember the poor man in that wretched plight. That she does it with great care and attention is shown by the word 'saavadhaanaa'—with diligent attention.

The two references to the Lord here are 'bahuleelam' and 'Maadhavam'—multisportive, and Consort of Sri. While He is engrossed in His jagat-vyaapaara or world-management, Daya Devi succeeds in drawing His attention to one poor mortal who is about to breathe his last. And He is Madhava, the Lord of Sri. Together He and Lakshmi take care of the soul of the dying man and lead it safely to eternal bliss.

दिशि दिशि गतिविद्धिर्देशिकैर्नीयमाना स्थिरतरमनुकम्पे स्त्यानलम्भा गुणैस्त्वम् ।
परिगतवृषशैलं पारमारोपयन्ती भवजलधिगतानां पोतपात्री भवित्री ॥ (३८)

disidisigatividbhihi Desikayarneeyamaanaa Sthirataaram Anukampel styaaanalagnaagunaistvam arigata Vrishasailam paaram aaropayantee bhavajaladhidi gataanaam potapaatree bhavitree "

(38)

Anukampa Devi! you are like a boat carrying mortals immersed in the ocean of Samsara safely to the shore. Like the boat that is reered by persons well-acquainted with the routs over the seas in all directions, you are led by Acharyas who know all the means prescribed by the Sastras. Like the boat that is tightly fastened together by sturdy ropes, you are entwined steadfastly with the great gunas of the Lord. Like the boat that takes people through the water to the shore, you take those struggling in the ocean of Samsara to the shore known as Lord Srinivasa in (near) Vrishasaila.

As in sloka 18 ante. Sri Vedanta Desika employs sleshaalamkara in this sloka. Daya devi is likened to a boat. The boat is navigated by desikas. The term 'desika' connotes one who is familiar with paths and places, also a guide. Desika of course also means a guru, an Acharya, a preceptor. In the case of the ordinary boat, it has to be, and is safely navigated by experienced persons who know the way intimately and can be relied upon to guide the boat in every necessary direction—disi disi. In the case of Daya she is likened to individuals by Acharyas who are well-acquainted with the several paths prescribed for spiritual progress.

Taking the constitution of the boat, a boat is made of planks firmly bound together by strong ropes. Guna means a rope. It also means an attribute. Daya is firmly tied to the other gunas of the Lord. This has been already pointed out in Slokas 11 and 5. The close association of Daya with the other attributes of the Lord is once again emphasised by the poet here.

A boat is needed for carrying persons across the water. Those who stand in need of Daya are persons desiring to cross the ocean of samsara. In fact they are persons struggling in the sea and their craving for a boat to take them to land must be more keen than the desire of persons to cross the sea from one shore to another. Paaram means shore. Here the shore of safety to the chetana drowned in Samsara is only the Lord. This shore of Srinivasa is parigata vrishasaila, i.e., one who has come to Vrishasaila. Normally a boat can land only at a place level with the water. Where Daya devi is the boat she can not only make us land in safety, but also raise us to high places like Tirumala. The term aaropayantu if given its full meaning will indicate not only getting out of water into the land slightly higher, but also elevating a person to great heights.

The term Vishnupota must be very familiar to students of Mukundamala. Andal has also referred to the Lord as a உதாமி—a Tamil word conveying the same meaning as the Sanskrit word pota (a boat, a vessel, a ship). Here Desika refers to Daya as the boat and the Lord as the shore to be reached with the aid of the boat.

That Daya is accessible and available only to those who obtain the blessing of a Guru or Acharya is very nicely suggested by the first paada of the sloka.

परिमितफलं ज्ञात्वाग्निः किंपचना
निगमविपणिमध्ये नित्यमुक्तानुषक्तम् ।

प्रसदनमनुकम्पे प्राप्तवत्या भवत्या

वृषगिरिहरिनीलं व्यञ्जितं निर्विशन्ति ॥ (३९)

*Parimīta phalasangaat praaninah kimpachanaaha nigama vipanimadhye nityamuktaanushaktam
Prasadanam Anukampe! praaptavatyaa bhavatyaa
Vrishagiri Harineelam vyanjitam nirvisanti* * (3)

Devi Anukampa! To the small-minded beings, desirous of obtaining low and limited enjoyments, at the vast market place called the Vedas, you, ever full of favour and good disposition (towards them) show (point out) the great blue Sapphire shining in close association with pearls; and highly pleased with it they enjoy it.

Beautiful sloka. The Vedas constitute a vast and expansive market place in which one can purchase anything one wants. It is not given to everyone to go in for superior and valuable articles. Most of us are content with objects yielding small and evanescent pleasures. If while strolling through that big bazaar we happen to get into touch with lofty and noble minded persons, they change our tastes for the better and take us to shops therein where we can get valuable and precious goods. This analogy is pressed in service by the poet here. The Vedas postulate several objects of human desire and lay down rules and regulations for attaining each one of them. Alpa phalaas and asthiraphalaas—small fruits and evanescent cent fruits—are there in plenty. There is also the peerless pleasure of Divine enjoyment for which the Vedas show the way. We have been too long associated with the body and the senses and we have begun to believe that only the pleasures of the body and the senses are pleasures worth having. We therefore get attached to those parimita phalas, or fruits limited in enjoyment. The word kimpachaanaah denotes our niggardliness even in regard to desires. Not being able to look aloft, we hanker for silly and stupid things. If perchance while going round the bazaar we come across a great personality imbued with a desire to cure us of our small-mindedness and to make us desire for the lofty things of the Spirit, he will take us to another portion of the bazaar where the wares exhibited will be attractive and elevating articles. Taken there we begin to crave for those articles and the pleasures they can afford us. The desire for small things disappears and the taste for great things is roused in us. This is exactly what happens to one who seeks the aid of Daya Devi to obtain the proper goods at the market place of the Vedas. She is always prasadanam praptavyaa—imbued with a tendency to shower favours on us. If we go to her and ask for her help to obtain some small pleasures, she corrects our desires and sublimates them into a hankering for eternal communion with the most beautiful and gracious Lord. The Lord is referred to as the blue sapphire in this sloka—Hari-neela. Neela is blue sapphire. The term Hari has several meanings. Here it is given the meaning Indra. Harineela means Indraneela—a blue sapphire nonpareil (without equal). This sapphire shines supreme amongst a setting of pearls. The words nitya-muktanushaktam means eternally combined with pearls. It also means living jointly with nityas and muktas who are celestial beings residing in Paramapada—the abode of eternal Bliss.

In the 37th sloka Daya's help in reminding God about us was referred to. In the next sloka her rescuing us from the sea of samsara and landing us safely at the feet of the Lord was referred to. In this sloka the poet deals with that superior trait of Dayadevi which cleanses us of low thoughts and ideas and helps us to desire for God Himself. Incidentally Vrishagiri is equated with Paramapada and the Hari or Vishnu of that place shown to be a nityaamuktanushakta or One eternally served by nityas like Ananta Garuda and Vishwaksetna as also by the Muktas or souls released from bondage, i.e., chetanas who once were wallowing in Samsara but have now become celestials by the Grace (Daya) of God.

त्वयि बहुमतिहीनः श्रीनिवामानुकम्पे जगति गतिमिष्टान्यां देवि संमन्यते यः ।
स खलु विबुधसिन्धौ संनिकर्षे बहन्त्यां शमयति मृगतृष्णावीचिकाभिः पिपासाम् ।

Tvayi bahumatiheenah Sreenivaasaanukampe !

Jagati gatim ihaanyaam Devi! sammanyate yaha !

Sakhalu vibudha sindhau sannikarshe vahantyaam

Samayati mrigatrishnaaveechikaabhih pipaasaam ॥ (40)

Anukampa of Srinivasa! Devi! He, who, in this world, having no regard for you, thinks highly of other means (or ends) will be quenching his thirst by the waves of the mirage when the celestial Ganges flow nearby.

The excellence of the Lord which surpasses all else—(sarva bhogyaatisaayee)—was very well brought about by the previous sloka. It is emphasised here once again by pointing out the stupidity of a person who accepts smaller things when He is willing and ready to make Himself available through the intervention of Daya

A particular idea is sought to be impressed on the reader by eminent poets and philosophers both positively and negatively which is known as the anvaya method and vyatireka method respectively.

It was pointed out in the previous sloka that by contacting Daya one's desires themselves become ennobled and the aim and goal of human life get pitched high. In this sloka is described the true state of a person who rejecting Daya's help, craves for other ends or for help from other quarters. He is likened to one seeking to quench his thirst by the waters of the mirage. Mirage as is well known is an apparition which gives the impression of water flowing at a distance. It is a mere optical illusion caused by the refractive effect of hot and cold air at a distance, very often simulating the appearance of water. It is called mrigatrishnika because animals stags and deer, are wont to be deceived by this illusion and run after the imagined water to quench their thirst.

A man is terribly thirsty. Within a few feet from where he is, the divine Ganga flows majestically with plenty of water, a mouthful of which will quench his thirst. But he will not go to the Ganga the distant mirage attracts his eyes, and he runs towards it, lured by the wavy waters that he imagines to exist there. That is an exact description of the state of one who rejecting the certain benefit benefits to be obtained from other sources. The bounty of Daya Devi is certain and is sure to obtain for us everlasting good. It is up to us therefore to approach her and obtain those benefits. Let us not emulate the man whose pitiable mentality is so forcefully portrayed in this Sloka, who will not touch the water that is available, but will run after water that does not exist.

The decad thus ends by emphasising the cussedness and stupidity of persons who will not accept the help proffered by Daya, and the merit and cleverness of those who with her help obtain the highest pleasures that a human soul can ever crave for. This idea grows into the next decad as we shall see.

श्रीमते निगमान्तमहादेशिकाय नमः

श्री श्रीनिवास परब्रह्मणे नमः

॥ दयाशतकम् ॥

DAYAA SATAKAM

FIFTH DECAD.

AS the Stotra grows in intensity and fervour, the metres employed for each decad can also be seen to grow in volume and cadence. From the fifth to the ninth decad the five different metres employed in them are all 17 lettered. We start with MANDAA-KRAANTA in this decad.

The topic also grows. SREYASTADDHETU DAATA is Desika's topic for the fifth centurium of verse in Nammalwar's Tiruvoimozhi. The ninth sloka in this decad starts with the word "SREYASSOOTIM" definitely and unambiguously indicating the adoption of the said topic for this decad. Let us see what that "SREYAS" is, and what it is that furnishes us the means to attain the same.

आज्ञां ख्यातिं धनमनुचरानाधिराज्यादिकं वा

काले दृष्ट्वा कमलवसतेरप्यकिंचित्कराणि ।

पद्माकान्तं प्रणिहितवतीं पालनेऽनन्यसाध्ये

साराभिज्ञा जगति कृतिनः संश्रयंते दये त्वाम् ॥ (४१)

Aagnaam Khyaatim dhanam anucharaan aadhiraajyaadikam vaa

Kaale drishtvaa Kamalavasterapi akinchit karaani ।

Padmaakaantam pranihitavateem paalane ananyasaadhye

saaraabhignaah jagati kritinah samsrayante Daye! tvaam ॥ (41)

Dayadevi/ Seeing (realising) that power, fame, wealth, retinue and even kingdoms even though they are of the Deviden in the future blessed and the fortunate in this world, who know the essence of things, resort to you, who enjoin Srinivasa to take to the act of protection—an act which no one else can perform or take to.

In sloka 39 above Desika referred to ‘Parimitaphalas.’ This sloka refers to Brahma the Creator and points out how the power, fame, wealth etc., appertaining to his position are all impermanent, certain as they are to come to an end at some point of time. The highest Sthana or place in the cosmic hierarchy is that of Brahma. If his position itself is precarious, what about ours? Aagnaa refers to position and power-wielding influence,—exercising command and enforcing obedience. Khyaati is fame. Dhanam is of course wealth. By the term Anucharaan is indicated the large retinue of servants and others ready to obey the commands and carry out the behests of the person in power. Aadhirajyam connotes a great empire, the ruler of which will have several kings and kingdoms under him. Several devas and several men can claim to possess all these vestiges of sovereignty. By indicating that all these, even if they appertain to Brahma, get reduced to nothing on certain occasions and at certain times, the poet wants us to understand that, if this be the case with Brahma, how much more impermanent, nay, how much more evanescent, will be the power, fame and wealth of others lower down in the hierarchy.

Power, fame wealth etc., may be alluring and attractive to the majority of men and women in the world. But they fail to make any impression upon the Kritinah, the blessed among men. Because they are Saaraabhignaaha, persons who have analysed things for themselves and found out the true Saara or essence. The great saints of this country like Prahlada and Nammalwar are evidently in Desika’s mind here. Scorning all the wealth of all the worlds, Prahlada prayed only for Bhakti towards the Lord. Nammalwar in one place says that power and position pertaining to high places in this world or the next, will not be cared for by great persons who have inordinate love towards the Lord’s feet. Even if mastery over all the three worlds is offered to such great souls, they will never regard that offer as worth considering (கொள்நவது எண் ணுபேர).

Kaale-akinchitkarauni-drishTVaa—Seeing how at times they become worthless. We find from the Puranas, how Brahma was robbed of the Vedas and all his other wealth by Asuras like Madhu and Kaitapa. Even without that, as there is not the positive content of divine enjoyment in the enjoyment of the Brahmapati or the titular greatness of Brahma, there is nothing that can tempt the true devotee of God. For all these reasons the 'Kritina' never set their mind or eye upon pomp and splendour.

What is it that they do? They seek you. Why? Because you have the power to enjoin the great Lord who is the Consort of Sri to afford true and lasting protection to your, and therefore His, devotees. That protection or Paalana is Ananyasaadhya not available with any one else. Srinivasa alone is the able protector of all the worlds. Saranaagata-Rakshana or the protection Saranaagatas is in the exclusive province of Lord Srinivasa. The wise rely on His Daya or mercy and the protection He extends to those who look up to Him for help.

प्राजापत्यप्रभृतिविभवं प्रेक्ष्य पर्यायदुःखं

जन्माकाङ्क्षन्वृषगिरिवने जग्मुषां तस्थुषां वा ।

आशासानाः कतिचन विमोस्त्वत्परिष्वङ्गधन्यै-

रङ्गीकरं क्षणमपि दये हार्दतुङ्गैरपाङ्गैः ॥

(४२)

Praajaapatyaprabhriti vibhavam prekshya paryaayadukham

Janmaakaankshan vrishagirivane jagmushaam tastushaam vaa ।

Aaasaasaanah katichana vibhoh tvatparishvanga dhanyaihi

Angeekaaram kshanamapi Daye! haardatungairapaangaihi ॥ (

Daya Devi! Realising that the glory of Prajaapati (Brahma and others) is really a synonym for grief, the (fortunate) few desirous of securing, albeit for a fleeting moment, the Lord's love-laden Kaitasha blessed by your embrace, crave for existence as an animate or inanimate object in the forests of Vrishagiri.

Talking about the Saarabdhigna in the previous sloka brought to the mind of the poet the rare mystic experiences of such great souls as Kulasekharalwar, who prayed for existence in Tirumala in some form or another, animate or inanimate. The uselessness of Brahmapadavi as realised by those Kritinah (blessed men) reiterated in the opening paada of this Sloka, where the vibhava or glory of Brahma and others is equated to dukkham or misery. Spurning those so called high positions they yearn for some fulfilment on the Tirumala Hill. They are not keen about any partic-

Hill they are thoroughly indifferent to the nature of the connection or contact. Jagmushaam is mobile, moveable, Tasthusaam is immobile, immoveable. Whether as moveable objects like a bird, a fish, a human being or champaka plant, or immoveable objects like a pathway, a hill crest, or a step (படி) Kulasekhara has sung about his desire for existence in Tiruvengadam. The indifference to the form is reflected in the penultimate verse of that impassioned decad of this Alwar in praise of Tirumalai where he exclaims எம்பெருமான் பொன்மலைபோல் ஏதேனும் ஆவேனே (I shall like to become anything on the golden Hill of my Lord.)

Why is it that such great men evince this sort of desire? Desika explains it by pointing out that they are prompted by their great desire to be the recipient of one gracious glance or Kataaksha issuing out of those merciful and beautiful eyes of the Lord. Apaanga means a glance, a look. That look is haardatunga—affection-laden. Even a more beautiful sentiment given expression to here about the Lord's glances or Kataaksha is found in the words Tvatparishvanga-Dhanyaihi—meaning ennobled by your embrace, referring to Dayadevi. This is a very favourite theme with Vedanta Desika. Innumerable are the places in his stotras where he refers to the benign Kataaksha of the Lord as at once sanctified and beautified by close contact with Daya or mercy. In the Gopala Vimsati the Lord's apaangas are referred to as lotuses blossoming in the stream of Anukampaa (annukampaasarit ambujairapaangaihi). In the Dehalisa Stuti they are referred to as Dayaabharitairapaangaihi. It is ativela dayottarangam in Devanayaka Panchasat.

Renouncing the seeming glory and splendour of all other forms of existence including the status of Brahma, Siva, Indra, and so on, the great devotees of the Lord crave for some form of life connected with the sacred Hill of Tirumala just for the purpose of being able to receive, albeit for a short while, even for a fleeting moment, the gracious Kataaksha emanating from the lovely eyes of Lord Srinivasa. Readers would have noticed pointed reference having been made to Lord Srinivasa's Kataaksha in several earlier Slokas such as 19 and 20. We shall take the opportunity towards the end of the decad, where in two successive slokas Desika refers to the same Kataaksha, to look deeper into the significance of the several references.

नाभीपद्मस्फुरणसुभगा नव्यनीलत्पलाभा

क्रीडाशैलं कमपि करुणे वृण्वती वेङ्कटाख्यम् ।

शीता नित्यं प्रसदनवती श्रद्धधानावगाह्या

दिव्या काचिज्जयति महती दीर्घिका तावकीना ॥ (४३)

Naabhee padma sphurana subhagaa Navyaneelotpalaabhaa

Kreedaa-sailam Kamapi Karune! vrinvatee venkataakhyam ।

Seeta nityam prasadanavatee sraddadhaanaavagaahyaa

Divyaa kaachit jayati mahatee deerghikaa taavakeenaa ॥ (43)

Devi Karuna! A long and lovely lake belonging to you shine: glorious and effulgent in (your) pleasure-mountain, called Venkatadri. It is beautified by a lotus in its navel. It has the attractive beauty of just blossomed blue lilies. It is ever cool. It is ever clear and pellucid. It is capable of being bathed in by those who have sraddha or faith. It is celestial and big.

‘Sreyas’ meaning bliss or beatitude is described in this and the succeeding sloka in two different forms. Its attractiveness is dealt with in this sloka, and its superiority over all other pleasures, in the next one. The Lord who is that ‘Sreyas’ is likened to a long and lovely lake. The simile or upama is carried into minute details. A lake is beautified by lotus flowers in its centre. Naabhee meaning navel indicates centre. Applied to the Lord, the lotus sprouting from His navel (naabhee padmam) beautifies the person of the Lord. The beauty caused by the effulgence of that lotus makes the Lord’s form lovely and attractive. Like the lotus, the blue lily also is a water flower and such flowers abound in lakes. Lord Srinivasa’s beautiful form is blue like the blue lilies. The words ‘navya neeloipalaabhaa’ indicate the lustre of fresh blown blue-lilies. The freshness is as precious as the blueness to the devotee. The freshness added to the blueness increases the devotees’ enjoyment. The aptness of the term ‘navya neelotpalaabhaa’ will be enjoyed by every devotee of Lord Srinivasa who is privileged to worship Him on a Friday evening after Abhishekam and alankaram. He will simply be stunned at the freshness and loveliness of the Lord. Ever fresh and lovely, He will appear more fresh and lovely than usual then. Valmiki describes Rama in one place as “Prabuddha Neelotpala tulya darsanaha.” The Always very often grow mad over the freshness and loveliness of the Lord’s blue form. All that enjoyment is compressed by Desika into the one beautiful phrase Navya Nceloptalaabhaa.

The next attribute describing the beauty of the lake on the one hand and of the Lord on the other in the form of Slesha is seetaa nityam (शिता नित्यम्),—ever cool. Just like a man who has walked a long distance in the hot midday sun loves to take a plunge into the cool waters of a neighbouring lake, we mortals, scorched by the taapatraya, or threefold heat, look forward to a dip into the cool and refreshing reservoir that is Lord Srinivasa. In the Devanayaka panchasat Desika sings about ग्रीष्मे तटाकमिव शीत मनुष्येण ” greeshme tataakamiva seetamanupravishtaa.”

The word ‘nityam’ can be annexed not only to the word ‘seeta’ that precedes it, but also to ‘prasadanavatee’ that comes after. ‘Prasadana’ in reference to the lake means clearness, transparency. In reference to the Lord it connotes His quality of being pleased and gracious. Lord Srinivasa is described by this term as being ever kind and gracious.

The next epithet is sraddadhaanaavagaahyaa,—capable of being bathed in by those who desire to do so with faith and fervour. The Lord similarly is to be enjoyed by those who have sraddhaa or faith in His Grace, and who feel attracted by His beauty. This epithet seems to be a literal translation of the expression கீரடப் போதுயிர் போதுமினோ in the first verse of Goda’s Tiruppavai. Those words mean, “those who are desirous of taking a bath, please come forward.” The bath, she is referring to, is the same as what is being described in this sloka by Desika.—a bath in the Hari-saras (Hari-tank) as Mukundamaalaa will have it. No qualification or condition precedent need be acquired or fulfilled to approach God; only there must be a keen and intensive desire to immerse oneself in God.

Three one word epithets follow—divyaa, kaachit, and mahatee—each of them applicable to the lake and to the Lord alike. ‘Divya’ means excellent as applied to the lake, and divine or celestial as applied to the Lord. ‘Kaachit’ implies indescribability, which applies equally to the lake the poet is thinking of, as also to the Lord whom he is praising. ‘Mahatee’ means big. This also applies both to the lake and to the Lord.

Deerghikaa;—a lake, a longish lake usually. This idea of describing the Lord as a huge reservoir has been expressed by several devotees. Nammalwar, in one of his impassioned songs, prays to the Lord to come walking towards him like a தாரகா நீர் வாசத்தடம் a long lotus-bearing and fragrant tank, or lake. He describes in full detail such a tank; and Desika follows that method here. The Mukundamala sloka beginning with the words 'Karacharana saroje' also describes in meticulous detail the several aspects or parts of the Harisaras or Vishnu tank. Needless to cite other similar passages. Great souls revel in similar sentiments and even identical language at times.

Desika refers to this saras or deerghikaa as Daya devi's property or possession. The Tirumala Hill is her pleasure-resort,—kreedaa-sailam. This deerghikaa, or lake, is part of that hill and is shown here to be the exclusive property of Dayadevi.

A very beautiful sloka, scintillating with literary beauty and divine fragrance. Who will not feel attracted after reading this sloka to visit Tirumala and to immerse himself in the ever fresh, the ever-fragrant, and ever cool beauty and grace of Lord Srinivasa?

यस्मिन्दृष्टे तदितरसुखैर्गम्यते गोष्पदत्वं

सत्यं ज्ञानं त्रिभिरवधिभिर्मुक्तमानन्दसिन्धुम् ।

त्वत्स्वीकारात्तमिह कृतिनः सूरिवृन्दानुभाव्यं

नित्यापूर्वं निधिमिव दये निर्विशन्त्यञ्जनाद्रौ ॥ (४४)

Yasmin drishte taditarasukhaih gamyate goshpadatvam

Satyam gnaanam tribhir avadhibhirmuktam aanandasindhum

Tvatsveekaaraat tam iha kritinah sooribrindaanubhaavyam

nityaapoorvam nidhimiva Daye! nirvisanti Anjanaadrau " (44)

Daya Devi! The blessed, by being the recipient of your favours, enjoy Him like a great treasure even here on the Tirumala Hill—Him, by seeing whom all other pleasures get likened to a small puddle (as contrasted with the ocean); Him, who is satyam (Truth), gnaanam (knowledge), who is free from the threefold limitations, who is an ocean of Bliss (Ananda), who is being enjoyed by groups of Nityasooris, and Who is ever new and fresh.

The Roopa or Divyamangala Vighraha of the Lord was described in the previous sloka. The Svaroopam (the fundamental nature) of the Lord is described in this sloka. The words employed are

The main purport of the sloka is that those whom Daya devi takes up for protection, are privileged to enjoy the infinite Lord with all His infinite qualities even while on this earth. The Upanishadic “amrita iha bhavati.” (He becomes immortal even in this world) is elaborated here. The very opening words of the sloka “Yasmin drishte” are reminiscent of the Upanishadic mantra “Tasmin drishte paraavare.” They also remind one of Rukmini Devi’s classical expression in her epistle to Lord Sri Krishna—“roopam drisaam drisimataam akhilaartha laabham.” The infinite Bliss that one attains by having a glimpse of the Para Brahman far surpasses all known pleasures. This sentiment is expressed by saying that all known pleasures dwindle into a very small puddle when set off against Brahmaananda, which is like a vast ocean.

Goshpadatvam—the state of being as small as the space occupied by a cow’s foot. Goshpada has also come to mean the small quantity of water needed to fill the impression of a cow’s foot on loose soil. Compare goshpadee krita vaaraasim sung in praise of Hanuman. Goshpada has thus come to signify a small puddle.

Taittiriya Upanishad has defined the Para Brahman as Satyam Gnaanam and Anantam. The first two words of the second pada of this sloka are taken from there and indicate those two Parabrahma-lakshanas or the indicia of Parabrahman. The next epithet ‘tribhir avadhibhir muktam’ is explanatory of the significance of “Anantam” and indicates freedom from the three kinds of limitations, known as limitation as to space (Desa parichcheda) limitation as to time (Kaala parichcheda) and limitation as to matter (Vastu parichcheda).

Next comes “Aanandasindhum”—the ocean of Ananda or bliss. This refers to the aanandamaya of the Upanishad, referred to in the 13th sutra of the Brahma-sutras. As the term Aanandamaya has been variously interpreted, (and even misinterpreted) by various commentators, an unambiguous word is employed here by the poet to show that the Parabrahman is an ocean of Bliss or Ananda, and not devoid of content as some will have it. Incidentally it will be noticed that whereas the body of the Lord was referred to in the previous Sloka as a lake or reservoir, the Svaroopam is indicated here to be an ocean. This sloka deals with the divyaa-tmasvarupa of the Parabrahman. The previous sloka dealt with His Divya Mangala Vighraha.

Having described the essential nature or quality of the Supreme Godhead in and by the first half of the sloka, the poet proceed in the latter half of it to show how that Being becomes the object of enjoyment of the chosen few, even while on this earth. Here also the Upanishadic way of stating things is adopted. “Iha nirvisanti” gives the meaning of the Upanishadic words “Amrita iha bhavati.”

Who are they that obtain such a lofty enjoyment even in this world? The answer is furnished by the words “tvat-sveekaaraat kritinaha”—those blessed by your adoption of them as your chosen favourites. They rely on you for everything and you therefore bestow on them the highest bliss,—the enjoyment of celestial pleasure on earth. This is indicated by the words “Sooribrindaanubhavyam” and “iha.” Sooris are the celestials in Paramapada or Vaikunta. They are either Nityas or Muktas as shown above (Sloka 39). Brinda means a crowd or large gathering. What is capable of being enjoyed by such groups is given to be enjoyed here (iha) by the denizens of this world.

Nityaapoorvam points to yet another special excellence of the Lord. Ever new and ever fresh, He never becomes stale and so every moment’s enjoyment is but a prelude to the next moment’s enjoyment. There is no satiation, though there is immense satisfaction. Though He is a Puraana-purusha, old personality, He is ever fresh. Koorattalvaan sings about this as “Sadaatanatvepi tadaatanatvavat” (though ever existing, fresh like one just come into existence). Desika has cryptically put it here as “Nityaapoorvam.” Apoorvam is what was not before. Eternally the Lord is capable of being enjoyed as one who was never before, but has just come into being freshly just now. The Alvar’s expression of this sentiment is contained in the following words அப்பொழுதெல்லா முறைக்கப்பெறாதுது என் ஆரா அமுதநீம (from time to time, ever and anon, my unsatiating nectar). The nearest Sanskrit word to Aaraavamudam is “aasechanaka,”—ever charming, always drenching you in enjoyment. That is Nityaapoorva.

The Kritinah or the blessed ones who are the recipients of Daya Devi’s favour are thus enabled to enjoy in Anjanaadri (Tirumala) the bliss of the celestials.

“Anjanaadrau-nidhim-iva-nirvisanti—This reminds us of another Upanishad which describes the great Lord as a Nidhi or Treasure concealed underneath a place over which one walks frequently without ever being able to visualise it. It is believed that some are anjana (black paste known as collyrium used to adorn the eyes) enables one to discover such hidden treasures. Here we have an Anjanaadri,—a whole hill of such anjana, and no wonder people get that anjana by Daya's grace and discover the great nidhi or treasure that is Parabrahman in the form of Lord Srinivasa. The Divya Mangala Vighraha of Lord Srinivasa is the anjana that helps one to discover and fully comprehend the Divyaatmasvaroopam of that great Lord. This idea of the Archa form acting as an aid to the discovery and realisation of the svaroopam or nature of the Lord, which even the srutis describe as ununderstandable in several places, is dealt with by Desika in sloka 28 of his Varadaraja Panchasat, where the same simile regarding nidhi and anjana is also employed.

This and the previous sloka have postulated Parabrahman as having a form and as having attributes, and as capable of being enjoyed,—a thorough contrast to the Brahman of the Advaitins, which is nameless, formless, and attributeless in the ultimate, though on the vyaavahaaric plane names and forms and attributes are conceded to that Brahman itself.

Desika also shows here what true Jeevanmukti or the realisation of the highest mokshananda is. Though that term is employed only by the Advaitins to describe the state of a released soul before he sheds his body, the full meaning of the term is realised only by realising the state of great souls like Nammalvar who have put themselves in tune with the great God. By attunement to His will and at-one-ment with Him they become mukatas even while living on this earth. No wonder therefore that the Alvars never made much of ascending to Heaven, as they made this world itself the highest Heaven by co-ordinating their karanas in enjoyment of Him. And Desika, true follower of the Alvar's cult as he is, boldly swore that He had no desire, speaking for himself, to go to Vaikunta. 'Satyam sape Vaaranasailanaatha! Vaikuntavaasepi na me abhilashah'. That is in Varadaraja Panchasat. He is going to wind up this Stotra by praying to Daya Devi to confer on him mokshananda here itself. That is in the hundredth sloka of this stotra.

सारं लब्ध्वा कमपि महतः श्रीनिवासाम्बुराशेः

काले काले घनरसवती कालिकेवानुकम्पे ।

व्यक्तोन्मेषा मृगपतिगिरौ विश्वमाप्यायन्ती

शीलोपज्ञं क्षरति भवती शीतलं सदुगौवम॥ (४५)

am labdhvaa kamapi mahatah Sreenivasaamburaseh kaale kaale ghanarasavatee kaalikeva Anukampe tonmeshaa Mrigapatigirau visvam aapyaayantee eelopagnam ksharati bhavaatee seetalam sadgunaugham " (45)

Devi Anukampa! Having extracted the excellent essence from the vast ocean-like Srinivasa, you shine like an array of clouds on the top of Simbachala (another name for Tirumala) and with the idea of watering the entire Universe you shower at proper times torrentially in the shape of cool and beneficent qualities like sauseelya.

Having postulated the svaroopā, roopā, guṇa etc., of the Highest Being is at once the Absolute of Philosophy and the God of Religion, Desika proceeds to show how amongst those high and sublime qualities Daya or Mercy is really of the essence of that Being. In the process, the glory, grandeur and sublimity of the Lord induce in the devotees a sense of frustration caused by the thought of their own lowliness as contrasted with His greatness. Very frequently they are apt to exclaim அவன் எவ்வகிடத்தான் நான் யார் (Who is He and what am I?) My smallness is in direct proportion to His greatness.

How can I ever hope to reach Him? This heart-rending cry has risen from many a devout heart. But the ever-kind Lord does not allow His devotees to be seized by this sort of panic. He gently conceals from them His paratva or transcendent glory and attracts them by His sauseelya, saulabhya, vatsalya and similar qualities. This becomes possible for the Lord only because He is Himself a yaavaan a compassionate and merciful Person. Desika very aptly describes in this sloka how Daya is the quintessence of the Lord's agavat-svarupa, and how Daya enables us to enjoy the qualities of sauseelya that make for the redemption of human souls.

The sloka starts with the word "saaram" meaning essence. Srinivasa is like the vast and expansive sea, deep and fearful. Like the clouds that plunge into that sea, extract fresh water therefrom, rise aloft into space and hang about the crests of mountain peaks, devi, who is here likened to such a cloud, extracts the essence f Srinivasa, rises up into space and stations herself in Simhachala. Trigapati means the king of animals and therefore refers to a lion. Simhachala is one of the names of the sacred Tirumala Hill.

Kaalika is a multitude of rain-laden clouds, and gets that name because of the dark colour. The analogy is intended to suggest that while the water in the sea, however plenty, is unfit for use and consumption, the waters that come from the clouds which drank of that very sea are veritably life-giving. In the upanishads the suggestion is that Daya extracts the best essence of the Parabrahmasvaroopam and showers the same on us. This essence or saaram is referred to as kamapi saaram, a great and wonderful essence. If the ocean of Srinivasa is immense, the essence derived herefrom by Daya is kamapi—indescribably great.

That only clouds containing water in large quantities will be dark is shown by the words “ghanarasavatee” and “kaalikaa.” This cloud of Daya rains and pours in plenty only at the proper seasons,—kaale kaale,—and thereby pleases the cosmos,—visvam apyaayantee.

What is it that Daya rains upon men and women of the land? The clouds pour cool water by raining. Dayadevi rains Srinivasa’s cool and auspicious qualities in shoals. Before Daya blesses us with all those great and auspicious qualities of the Lord, she first manifests herself to us, even like the dark cloud that gladdens us by gathering aloft in the sky promising a down pour of rain.

Dayadevi has been likened before to the tree, to a boat and so on. Here she is likened to a cloud. As the stotra proceeds we shall see her being likened to several other objects such as the Ganges, the Yamuna, and the Sarasvati and so on. The expression “ksharati sadgunaugham” (pours good qualities) once again emphasises the supremacy of Daya among the gunas of the Lord. One may safely assert that this is the central theme of Dayasataka.

भीमे नित्यं भवजलनिधौ मज्जतां मानवाना-

मालम्बार्थं वृषगिरिपतिस्त्वन्निदेशात्प्रयुङ्क्ते ।

प्रज्ञासारं प्रकृतिमहता मूलभागेन जुष्टं

शाखाभेदैः सुभगमनघं शाश्वतं शास्त्रपाणिम् ॥

(४६)

*Bheeme nityam bhavajalanidhau majjataam maanavaanaam
 Aalambaartham Vrishagiripathihi tvannidesaat prayunkte Pragnaasaaram prakritimahataa moolabhaugena jushtam saakhaabhedaihi subhagam anagham saasvatam sasstrapaanim* "(46

For rescuing human beings who are ever sinking in the fearful ocean of samsara, Lord Srinivasa, at your behest, extends the faultless and eternal helping-hand of Saastra, whose essence is wisdom, which is by nature great, which is associated with the pranava, and which is lovely on account of the several branches (scriptures). (Note the absence of any address as Daye, Karune etc.)

After having described the nature of 'sreyas,' the highest bliss which is Parabrahman in the form of Srinivasa, Vedant Desika goes on to deal with the other part of the theme viz., taddhutaata in the second half of this decad which begins with the sloka.

Like the trained elephant which affords all aid for the mahout to get upon it, the Lord furnishes to us the means to attain Him. The first of such help is Saastrapradaana or the promulgation of the Saastras. Readers will remember how in sloka 18 an it was pointed out that Saastras are given to us like lamps to dispel the darkness of our ignorance. In this sloka the poet advert to the same topic to indicate the inner purpose of the Saastra. Saamaanya Saastras were the Subject of that sloka, whereas here the Visesha Saastras are indicated.

The purpose of creation is to afford us an opportunity for redeeming ourselves from samsara; it is here pointed out how the saastras help in that process of redemption. They act like the hand proffered to lift a man sinking in water. Here the upama is worked into fine details as is usual with the poet. Mortals sinking in the vast and terrific ocean of samsara are referred to as being helped out of it by the proffered hand of the Lord which is Saastra. Veda. The hand is beautiful, long, stout at the root (shoulder) and having charming branches in the shape of fingers. In addition the hand is accustomed to help and so does not possess the fault of unhelpfulness. It is also eternal. Applying those same words to the Saastras which are the upameya in the Upama, the Saastras are said to be pragnaasaaram—having wisdom as their essence. They are moolabhaugena Jushtam—connected with Pranava, which

Just as the hand is beautiful because of its fingers, the Saastras are charming because of their several saakhaas or branches (traditional recensions). Saastraas are also anagha (faultless) and saasvata (eternal).

Who is it that proffers this helping hand of the Saastraas to beings sinking in samsaara? It is Vrishagiripati, Lord Srinivasa. And He does so impelled by Daya, as shown by the words tvannidesaat (by your command). Dayadevi directs the Lord to go to the help of suffering humanity and He does so by extending His hand to lift them up, thereby furnishing to them aalambam or support. A karaavalamba is thus the subject-matter of this sloka.

Incidentally it may be noticed that this sloka does not contain any word referring to Daya by name. This sloka has to be taken with the next one for reasons which we shall set out there.

विद्वत्सेवाकानिकवैर्वीनपङ्काशयानां

पद्माकान्तः प्रणयति दये दर्पणं ते स्वशास्त्रम् ।

लीलादक्षां त्वदनवमरे लालयन्विप्रलीप्सां

मायाशास्त्राण्यपि शमयितुं त्वप्रान्नप्रतीपारु ॥

(४७)

Vidvat-sevaa-katakanikahsaihi veetapankaasayaanaam

Padmaakaantaha pranayati Daye! darpanam te Svasastraam ।

Leeladakshaam tvadanavasare laalayan vipralipsaam

Maayaasastraanyapi samayitum tvatprapannaprateepaan ॥ (47)

Daya Devi! Lord Srinivasa, the Consort of Padma, promulgates two kinds of saastraas. One of them which He promulgates (in association with you) serves as a mirror to you and acts for the benefit of the pure-minded persons who have eschewed sinful thoughts by constant and intimate contact with the truly learned. It is His own Saastra (Sva-saastra). In your absence, however, fondling the desire to deceive induced by His sportive instinct, He produces MOHA-SAASTRAS for putting down the foes of your votaries.

After dealing with Saastra-pradaana generally in the previous sloka, in the present sloka the poet refers to the Pancharatra saastra and the mohasaastras both of which have been promulgated by the Lord, and points out the difference between them. Desika has established the validity and supremacy of the Pancharaatra-saastra also known as Bhagavat-saastra, following his illustrious predecessor Ramanuja, who established its authoritativeness in the Sri Bhashya. Desika has written a treatise called Pancharatraraksha. In the opening sloka of Yatiraja Saptati he refers to the Lord as “Vaktaa pancharaatrasya yas-svayam” (वक्ता पंचरात्रस्य यः स्वयम्). The words Svasastrum in this sloka must therefore be taken as referring to this paancharatra Saastra. Not only is it His own Saastra, but it reflects the glory and grandeur of Dayadevi and therefore is like a mirror (darpana) to her. This Saastra is devoted exclusively to the glory of Lord Srinivasa and it is stated here by Desika that it has been promulgated solely for the benefit of the pure-minded persons in whose hearts there is no place for sin. They are described as veetapankaasayaaha वीतपङ्कशः (Persons with minds cleansed of sin). Panka is mud and is indicative of sin and ignorance. How that mud is removed is explained by the phrase ‘vidvatsevaakatakanikashaihi.’ Kataka is the clearing-nut which is used for making water clear. It is known as தேக்கதா கடுகா டுடை in Tamil. The kataka that effects the removal of mud and dirt in the hearts of men is referred to as ‘vidvatsevaa’ here. It means the worship of vidvans (the learned men) who have acquired true knowledge. ‘nikasha’ means a whetstone. Kataka-nikashaihi means by whetting or rubbing of the clearing nut. Desika points out that the surest way of dispelling ignorance from one’s mind is to closely associate with, and follow in the footsteps of, the truly learned men.

Darpanam te—By referring to this Saastra as Dayadevi’s darpana (mirror), Desika emphasises the fact that it is only this saastra that fully reflects Daya Devi. The Saastras referred to in the previous sloka are also Daya-karya or the work of Daya. But Daya is seen to fulfil herself only in the Pancharatra Saastra. Referring to Ramanuja’s great works, Desika sings in his Yatiraja Saptati “Lakshmickanta-sphatika-mukuro Lakshmanaaryopadesaha” लक्ष्मीकान्तस्फटिकमुकुरौ लक्ष्मणार्योपदेशः Mukura is mirror and Ramanuja’s works are said to be the mirror reflecting truly the glory of Lakshmikanta (Srinivasa). It is only when Srinivasa looks into that mirror that He can see Himself as He is. The idea evidently is that His face and form get distorted out of recognition in other Siddhantas. Similarly the greatness of Daya devi is fully seen only in the Paancharatra Saastra.

There is another set of sastras that the Lord has promulgated o the spirit of the Vedas. They are referred to here as Maya or Mohasaastras (false or deceiving saastras). How the Lord comes to be the promulgator of those saastras also is mentioned in the latter half of the sloka. The Lord, it is stated, has two wives or Consorts. Mithah-Kalaha-Kalpanaa-Vishamavritthi-Leela-Daya-Parigrahana - Sankalpa Suryodaya I-67). One is Daya and the others is Leela. Daya is grace and Leela is sport. Behind Daya's back and in the presence of Leela the Lord gives Himself up to Vipralipsa or desire to deceive. In that mood He promulgates the Maya saastras. This is the gist of the second half of the sloka. But even here the Lord's protecting instinct is perceived. For, the Mohasaastras, only result in putting down the foes of Daya's votaries, by enticing those foes away from the field of activity of the followers of Daya. That way, the devotees of the Lord are left alone to pursue the path of saranaagati in peace, and attain the highest bliss.

'Api samayitum'—'Api damayitum' is a different reading. The meaning is the same.

दैवात्प्राप्ते वृषगिरितटं देहिनि त्वन्निदानात्

स्वामिन् पाहीत्यवशचने विन्दति स्वापमन्त्यम् ।

देवः श्रीमान्दिशति करुणे दृष्टिमिच्छंस्त्वदीया-

मुद्धतेन श्रुतिपरिषदामुत्तरे ॥ निमुख्यम् ॥ (४८)

Daivaat praapte Vrishagiritatam dehini tvan-nidaanaat

'Svamin! Paahi' ityavasavachane vindati svaapam antyam ।

Devas-Sreemaan disati Karune! drishtim ichhan tvadeeyaam

Udghaatenā srutiparishadaam uttarena aabhimukhyam ॥ (48).

Devi Karuna! When a human being, as a result of casual good deeds done by him by your help, reaches the slope of the Tirumala Hill (by your help) happens to breathe his last, uttering (by your help) while in a state of mental stupor, the words 'O Lord protect me,'—the great God, who is Srīman, anxious to secure your (approving) glances, confers his favourable-ness (or presence) uttering, by way of reply the word (Om) which occurs at the commencement of all the Vedas.

The sentiment given expression to in Sloka 27 above is again dealt with here but in a different manner. It was stated there that those who have taken residence on the sacred Hill obtain the grace of Daya by the very fact of their residence there, and that when they are in extremis Daya gently reminds the Lord about them. Here reference is made to a casual visitor who reaches the slope of the Hill by a stroke of good luck caused by Dayadevi, ever watchful of human interests, and happens to die there. Daya makes him utter the words 'svaamin, paahi.' (My Lord! protect) The words are not uttered willingly or even consciously. It is an 'avasavachana'—a word uttered in spite of himself. To such a man who dies with those words on his lips, the Lord extends His favour.

'Aabhimukhyam' denotes presence as also a favourable attitude. The Lord who confers that aabhimukhya is referred to by two expressions 'devaha' and 'Srimaan.' Devaha means : shining God. He is a Sriman—eternally associated with Sri. It is as Sriman He confers aabhimukhyam upon His votaries.

Why does He do so? "Tvadeeyaam drishtim ichchhan,"—anxious to secure your (approving) looks. The desire on the part of Srinivasa to fulfil Daya's desires, do her behests, obey her commands, has been referred to in several places in this stotra and is re-stated here in a nice way. The whole world is anxious to secure the Lord's glances. The greatest men have been shown to long for some sort of life on the Tirumala Hill in order to be the recipient of a single kataaksha from those lovely and loving eyes (sloka 42). That Lord, in turn, is anxious to secure the loving glances of His consort Dayadevi. He likes it. He takes a pleasure in it. This is indicated by the use of the word 'devaha'—the sportful person. At the same time He is also Sriman. That is to say, Lakshmi also likes the Lord to render such help to human beings and become the recipient of Daya's approval as indicated by her looks.

In the Saranaagati Deepika, Desika prays to the Lord to make him a fit receptacle for the Lord's bounty and the Lord is requested thereby to qualify Himself for being the object of Lakshmi's loving glances.

How the Lord gives expression to His aabhimukhyam is set out in the last paada. He promises succour to the dying man who has called for His protection, by saying 'Yes.' The sacred word 'ॐ' OM also means 'Yes,' and expresses assent. ॐ OM is also the pranava. Here Desika indulges in a very round about expression to indicate Om. Instead of referring to that single letter as such he has said that the Lord confers aabhimukhyam by replying with the word "which constitutes the beginning of the Vedas." That word undoubtedly is pranava. There must be a purpose with which Desika refers to Om in this manner. The Lord's assent to the dying man's desire for protection is backed up by all the Vedas. If His ॐ (yes) turns out to be false, it tantamounts to all the Vedas becoming false and useless. उद्गात is beginning. Sruti-parishad is the synod of the Vedas.

The purport of this sloka is that Dayadevi brings about a situation where the Lord Himself with His consort is ready to assure human beings of His protection. This is a step much in advance of the Saastrapradana, promulgation of the saastra, referred to in the previous two slokas.

श्रेयःसूतिं सकृद्यपि दये संमतां यः सखीं ते

शीतोदारामलभत जनः श्रीनिवासस्य दृष्टिम् ।

देवादीनामयमनृणानां देहवत्त्वेऽपि विन्दन्

बन्धान्मुक्तो बलिभिरनघैः पूर्यते तत्प्रयुक्तैः ॥ (४९)

Sreyassootim sakrt api Daye! sammataam yas-sakheem te seetodaaraam alabhata janas-Sreenivaasasya drishtim Devaadeenaam ayam anrinataam dehavtvepi vindun bandhaanmukto balibhir-anaghaihi pooriyate tat prayuktaithi " (49).

Dayadevi! That being who obtains at least once the kataaksha of Srinivasa, which yields (causes) beatitude, which is cool and bounteous, and which is your PRIYA-SAKHI (very dear friend), gets relieved of all debts which he owed to the devas and others, even while connected with the body; and on his release from bondage (samsara) he is worshipped by those very devas and others who load him with offerings in the shape of faultless oblations.

The opening word of this sloka 'sreyas-sootim' indicates the topic dealt with in this decad. The central idea of this sloka is that the Lord's benign kataksha is the cause of one's attaining sreyas (beatitude). That kataksha is seeta (cool) and therefore calculated to banish all taapa (heat). It is udaara (generous) and it is Daya's sammataa sakhee (chosen friend and companion). The intimacy between the Lord's kataaksha and Daya is once again emphasised. (See commentary on sloka 42).

The recipient of that kataaksha gets released from the three-fold debts with which everyone is said to be born, viz., debts due to the sages, the gods, and the manes of the ancestors. This state of relief from indebtedness is attained by him even when his connection with the body continues. When that connection ceases the position gets reversed. The very devas etc., who were propitiated by that being begin to propitiate him during his ascent to heaven. bandhaat muktaha—released from all bondage. balibhihi—by those oblations proffered by the devas etc. The word ‘anaghahi’ meaning blemishless used in connection with balibhihi (oblations) is intended to emphasise the fact that the offering is spontaneous and voluntary and not in expectation of repayment in one form or another. Pooryate—is filled with. Being the recipient of the Lord’s divyakataaksha is thus shown to make all the difference in the status of a man. His indebtedness is wiped out; he becomes free from all liability. Not only that, but the very persons whom he served before begin to serve him.

In sloka 20 above, jaayamaana kataaksha was referred to. That is the kataaksha received by a being at the time of his birth. It was pointed out there that he develops a desire for moksha which is fulfilled without much effort on his part. Pursuing the same topic here the poet points out a very important stage in the progress of that soul blessed with jaayamaana kataaksha. The next sloka develops this idea.

दिव्यापाङ्गं दिशसि करुणे येषु सद्देशिकात्मा

क्षिप्रं प्राप्ता वृषगिरिपतिं क्षत्रबन्धवादयस्ते ।

विश्वाचार्या विधिशिवमुखाः स्वाधिकारोपरुद्धाः

मन्ये माता जड इव सुते वत्सला मादृशे त्वम् ॥ (५०)

Divyāapaangam disasi Karune! yeshu saddesikaatma kshipram praaptaa Vrishagiripatim Kshatrabandhvadayaste । Viswaacharyaavidhisivamukhaas-svaadhikaaroparuddhaha manyē maataa jada iva sute vatsalaa maadrise tvam ॥ (50).

Devi Karuna! Those,—Kshatrabandhu and others,—on whom you, in the form of a good Acharya, bestow divine glances, attain Lord Srinivasa very quickly, while Brahma, Siva and other world-teachers are bound down by their office (position). I therefore think

In sloka 48, Daya's drishti (glance) was referred to. In sloka 49 Lord Srinivasa's drishti was mentioned. In this sloka Divya-apaanga (divine glance) has been very deftly used in such a way as to be capable of being interpreted as Lord's apaanga or as Daya's apaanga, though both really are one. This kataaksha—be it the Lord's or Daya's—is bestowed by Dayadevi who assumes the form of a Sat Desika, a good and pure Acharya, and bestows on us her beneficent glances (or secures to us the Lord's kataaksha). It has been said that the Lord's good will is one of the causes that secure to us Acharya-praapti (contact with an Acharya). Acharya-praapti is a sine qua non for obtaining moksha. There is a famous Purana sloka which says that sinners like Kshatrabandhu, as well as meritorious men like Pundarika, obtained moksha only by having an acharya.

“पापिष्ठः क्षत्रबंधुश्च पुण्डरीकश्च पुण्यकृत् ।

आचार्यवत्तया मुक्तौ तस्मादाचार्यवान् भवेत् ॥

So Acharya-praapti is a hetu (cause) for sreyas (bliss). This is the last of the causes that contribute to one's attainment of bliss referred to in this decad.

In the next decad Desika is going to deal with saranaagati (surrender). As a prelude to it, one of the very essential concomitants thereof, viz., Acharya Sambandha is spoken about here. As the Purana sloka quoted above says, every one has to become an 'Acharyavaan'—possessed of an Acharya, before attaining moksha. The Upanishad mantra also is to the same effect—Acharyavaan purusho veda आचार्यवान् पुरुषो वेद (Only that man who has an Acharya knows). The importance of the sentiment contained in this sloka cannot be overestimated.

Whatever the Lord does for the benefit of humanity is attributed to Daya as being her work.

साक्षान् नारायणो देवः कृत्वा मर्त्यमयीं तनुम् ।

मग्नान् उद्धरते लोकान् कारुण्यात् शास्त्रपाणिना ॥

(Taking the human form (of an Acharya) the Lord out of mercy rescues sinking humanity by proffering the hand of saastra). This deals with the Lord's assumption of Acharya-roopa or form. The word 'Kaarunyaat' in this sloka indicates that this is an act of Daya. And that is why Daya is here said to have taken the form of an Acharya (Desikaatmaa).

Those who are the recipients of the 'Divyaapaanga' attai Lord Srinivasa quickly (kshipram). The reference to Kshatrabandhu shows that the poet is thinking of the sloka extracted above and is drawing our attention to the importance of Acharyasambandha, by which even great sinners are capable of attaining beatitude. (Kshatrabandhu was a great sinner, but had the good fortune to come into contact with a sage who took pity on him and became his Acharya, weaned him from his sinfulness, and ultimately secured for him everlasting bliss).

This benefit which Daya secures to us is sought to be contrasted with the plight of great beings like Brahma, Siva and so on, who as a result of their meritorious actions (satkarma) hold high posts and act as world-acharyas, jagatgurus. They are tied down to their posts and do not get release. They are themselves holding acharya-posts. The poet appears to suggest here that while acharyas continue in bondage, those who rely on acharyas get released.

Thinking of this difference, Desika exultingly thinks of the measure of protection extended to us and says that Daya Devi like all mothers is more concerned with the welfare and well-being of deficient and mentally incapacitated children than with those who are the clever and capable. A mother is fond of all her children but when one of them is unable to take care of itself, her concern for that child makes her ever think of it and help it in all ways so that it may be safe and happy. So too Daya Devi the mother of all chetanas is more concerned with the welfare of persons like us who are unable to take care of ourselves and who are helpless in the extreme. The helplessness or kaarpanya is what earns for us speedy release and the next decad with Saranaagati as its topic starts with the words 'atikripa' meaning exceedingly wretched and helpless.

श्रीमते निगमान्तमहादेशिकाय नमः

श्री श्रीनिवास परब्रह्मणे नमः

॥ दयाशतकम् ॥

DAYAA SATAKAM

SIXTH DECAD.

THIS decad is the centre of this stotra. There are five decads preceding it and four full decads and eight extra slokas following it. It undoubtedly enshrines the central theme of the Daya Sataka viz., Saranaagati. This doctrine, one may say without fear of contradiction, is Vedanta Desika's gift to world-thought. Earlier Acharyas had adopted Saranaagati as a direct means for the attainment of Mukti. But they had all left it to Desika to scientifically systematise it and propound it to the world as a sakshat-mokshopaaya, a direct means for moksha. From Svetasvatara Upanishad which said "Mumukshur vai saranam aham prapadye," through Nammalwar who said புரவொன் றெவொ அடியென் உன்னடிச்சீழ் அரர்க்கு புகுக்கேனை, to Ramanuja who gave to us the Saranagati Gadyam, it was all anushtaana or practice. It was Desika who first synthesised the several relevant texts and laid down in and by his numerous works that Prapatti or Saranaagati is an independent and self-sufficient upaya or means. For that reason he is known as பரதனகல ஜன்மஜடதி: 'Prapadana-kalaa-janma-jaladhihi' and கஞ்சுப்பா கதிபகம் கந்தநன் றெவொன் That doctrine is the topic of this decad. Prapadana-sulabhatva (பரதன சுலபத்வ) of the Lord is the subject of the sixth pattu பத்து of Tiruvoimozhi.

The metre employed for this decad is 'Nardataka.' There are seventeen syllables to a paada in this also. Suka-brahmam adopted this metre while singing the Sruti Geeta.

अतिकृणोऽपि जन्मुरधिगम्य दये भवती-

मशित्विलधर्मेसेतुःदवीं रुचिरामचिरत् ।

अमित-होर्पिजलमतिरङ्घ्र्य भवागुनुनेधि

भवति वृषचलेशपदपत्तननित्यधनी ॥

(५१)

*ripanopi janturadhigamya Daye! bhavateem
asithiladharmasetu padaveem ruchiraam achiraat | amahormijaalam atilanghya bhavambunidhim bhavati Vrishachalesapadapattananityadhanee* " (51)

Dayadevi! Even the most wretched and helpless being, by resorting to you who are like a beautiful; and at the same time strong and powerful; bridge-way, quickly crosses the ocean of samsara full of terrible huge and mighty wave-groups, and attains eternal wealth in the city of Lord Srinivasa's Feet.

Note how the sloka begins with atikripana and ends with nityadhanee. This change from dire distress to undiminishing wealth is what Daya alone can bring about.

Asithila is unbreakable, unslackening. Asithila dharma is nagati dharma, as defined by Valmiki through Sitadevi in words "Viditassahi Dharmagnyaha Saranaagata Vatsalaha" (समाह्वयमेतः शरणगतस्तलः equating dharma with saranaagata-salya. Setu is bridge or dam across water. Here Daya likened to a bridge across the ocean of Samsara and even a very insignificant man can use the bridge and the pathway (padavee) aided by it to cross over. The 'amita' (countless) and 'maha' (and mighty) 'oormijaala' (wave-groups) tossing in the ocean do not affect him in any manner, as he uses a safe bridge far above waves to cross over. The words 'amitamahormijaalam' reminds us of 'madanapavanoddhootamahormimala' of King Isekshara in the Mukundamaala.

Once he goes to the other side, what is it he sees? The great glorious lotus-feet of Lord Srinivasa which shine like a spacious glorious city—padapattana. Pada is foot and pattana is city. Anta Desika who is known for his outstanding vairagya, as much as for his great gnana, shunned towns and cities. But there are two towns to reach which, and reside in which, he had great liking. One is Vrishachalesa-padapattana; and the other is chakravarti-pada-padma-pattana. The extra word 'padma' in the case of Sri Bhashyakara speaks for itself. Desika's Divya Bhakti is excelled only by Desika's Ramanuja-bhakti.

Nityadhane—eternally rich man. No more the vicissitudes of fortune making a person a millionaire today and a pauper to-morrow, but ever safe and secure at the feet of the Lord (Srinivasa).

after rich for ever and ever. By his good fortune which made him resort to Daya as his saviour, he becomes the possessor of a vast and undiminishing fortune.

ruchira meaning lovely and charming indicates the attractiveness of saranaagati-marga as contrasted with the other paths which are difficult and troublesome. The words adhigamya and atilanghya are very significant. Reaching Daya means and involves crossing the samsaric ocean.

achiraat—in no time. It is another very significant expression. Because it is only a prapanna that quickly attains mukti, whereas all the other upaasakaas following the karmayoga gnanayoga and bhaktiyoga paths have to abide their time.

अभिमुखभावसंपदभिसंभविनां भविनां

कचिदुपलक्षिता कचिदभङ्गु गूढगतिः ।

विमलरसावहा वृषगिरीशदये भवती

सपदि सरस्वतीव समयत्यघमप्रतिघम् ॥

(५२)

Abhimukhabhaavasampadabhisambhavinaam bhavinaam

kvachidupalakshitaa kvachid abhanguragoodhagatihi ।

Vimalarasaavaha Vrishagireesadaye! bhavatee

.sapadi Sarasvateeva samayati agham apratigham."

(52)

O Daya of Vrishagirinatha! Like the Sarasvati river, with its course visible in some places, and invisible—yet unbroken—in other places, and with pure rasa (water) you quickly destroy by your flow the irremovable sins of those wallowing in samsara, who possess that rare wealth of being favourably inclined towards you.

The previous sloka ended with a reference to dhana, riches. This sloka starts with a sampath or wealth. It is abhimukha-bhaavasampath, the wealth of aubhimukhya towards Daya. Though Daya is there ever ready to come to the rescue of the weak and the helpless, people do not easily take to her. Some, however, have the good fortune to adopt an attitude of aabhimukhya, a favourable and favour-soliciting disposition towards Daya. That is referred to here as a sampath or wealth.

The sloka is couched in the form of a slesha for Daya and the river Saraswati. Saraswati is one of the three rivers that contribute to the Triveni or confluence of three rivers. But unlike the other two—the Ganga and the Yamuna—it is not visible at the place of sangama or union. It is antarvahini, flowing underground. The river is therefore referred to here as having a visible flow in places and an invisible underground current in other places. Even where the current is goodha (hidden), it is abhangura (unimpeded). It bears pure and pellucid water—vimalarasaavahaa. Rasa is water. And it has the power of banishing unpardonable sins of those mortals who think of it fervently. It destroys sins by mere aabhinukhya or fervent and faithful attitude towards its purifying powers even without a bath in its waters.

So too Daya. Her flow is also visible to some and on some occasions, and invisible and hidden to others and on other occasions; but ever and anon she flows unimpeded and without obstacles. She invariably bears vimalarasa, pure and faultless affection and friendship towards her votaries. And in respect of those who put themselves in an attitude of fervour and faith in regard to her she wipes out their sins which are otherwise apratigha (unassailable)

For ‘bhavatee’ there is another reading ‘vahasi’ meaning you flow.

‘Sapadi’ means quickly, at once. The moment one looks up to Daya for protection, immediately she rushes to his rescue and quells his sins and defections which are obstacles to his progress. Note the word ‘achiraat’ in the previous śloka.

Sriman V. V. Srinivasa Iyengar who was a literary artist of a very high order, in addition to being a great Desika-bhakta, very beautifully suggested that the Sarasvatee referred to in this śloka will take in not only the river Sarasvati, but also Yateesvarasarasvatee, or the utterances of the great Yatiraja, Ramanuja. This idea has thrilled several scholars and pandits deeply learned in the Sri Bhashya. Every epithet in this śloka fits in with that great and immortal work as it does with the river and with Daya.

अपि करुणे जनस्य तरुणेन्दुविभूषणता-

मपि कमलासनत्वमपि धाम वृषाद्रिपतेः ।

तरतमतावशेन तनुते ननु ते विततिः

परहितवर्ष्मणा परिपचेलिमकेलिमती ॥

(५३)

api Karune! janasya Tarunenduvibhooshanataam api Kamalasanatvam api dhaama Vrishaadripatehe taratamataavasena tanute nanu te vitatihi parahitavarshmana paripachelimakelimatee."

(53)

Karunadevi! By spreading yourself out sportfully with the sole purpose of bringing about the welfare of others, you confer upon people either the status of Paramasiva adorned with the young moon, or the position of being a Kamalaasana (Brahma) or Paramapada of Lord Srinivasa according to the well-marked difference noticeable in them.

This sloka deals with sarva-phala-pradatva (the capacity to bestow all desired fruits) of Daya to those who resort to her for the realisations of their desires. Contrasting the sentiment contained in this sloka with that in slokas 41 and 42 above, one must be surprised at Desika dealing with the aspect emphasised in this sloka, viz., that Dayadevi helps one to attain Brahmapada or Rudrapada. But Desika has to postulate the efficacy of saranagati as a means to all desired ends for persons who are not qualified to obtain the same by normal means. One of the most important pramaanas (authority) in favour of saranagati as a potent upaya is the charama sloka of the Bhagavad Gita. It is from that sloka among others that Desika derives authority for the efficacy of Saranagati. Desika has summed up the meaning of that sloka in the following kaarika which occurs in Srimad Rahasyatrayasara:

सुदुष्करेण शोचैद्यः येन येनेष्टहेतुना ।

ससः तस्याहमेवेति चरमश्लोकः सङ्ग्रहः ॥

From this it is clear that with whatever end in view one resorts to Prapatti or saranagati due to one's inability to secure the same by the prescribed means, the Lord fulfils his desire by substituting Himself as the Siddhopaya in the place of the prescribed means. Thus saranagati is a means not only for mukti but for all proper ends. If therefore a person fixes his mind upon the greatness of Mahadeva and desires to attain that position, Dayadevi helps him to realise that desire. Her very form (varshma) is 'parahita.' (Vide sloka 26 above). So too in regard to the position of Chaturmukha Brahma or Sri Vaikuntha of Lord Srinivasa. The spread of Daya knows no limitations. The word Vitati meaning spread reminds us of the likening of Daya to the river Saraswati and to similar comparisons with the other rivers to follow. The word 'kel' means sport or pastime. Daya's sport lies in conferring hita on others, (parahita). That the hita or good varies from person to person; and from stage to stage in the same person; is indicated by the use of the word 'taratamataavasena,'—according to difference.

It must be noted how Desika refers to Siva and Brahma. Siva is described as 'Tarunenduvibhushana' (a lovable person adorned by the crescent moon). So too Brahma is referred to as 'kamaalasana' (the one with the lotus-seat). Not only is there a total absence of any want of respect towards those high personages but they are also described in attractive and sweet language.

धृवभुवना दये त्रिविधगत्यनुकूलतरा

वृषगिरिनाथपादपरिरम्भवती भवती ।

अविदितवैभवापि सुरसिन्धुरिवातनुते

सकृदवगाहमानमपतापमपापमपि ॥

(५४)

Dhritabhuvanaa Daye! trividhagatyānukoolātaraa

Vrishagirinaathapaadaparirambhavatee bhavatee ।

Adviditavaibhavaapi Surasindhurivaatanute

sakrit avagaahamaanam apataapam apaapam api. "

(5)

Dayadevi! Like the Sura-sindhu, divine river, you support (protect) the whole world; you have also a threefold flow; you also embrace the feet of Vrishagirinatha; even if your greatness is not understood, you make a person who immerses (takes refuge) in you relieved from heat and sin.

Having likened Daya to the river Sarasvati in the previous sloka but one, the poet proceeds to compare Daya with Ganga and also the Yamuna. This sloka and the next have been interpreted by every commentator as referring to the Ganga only. Without any disrespect to those commentators I shall take leave to point out that either this or the next must refer to the Yamuna. It is not Desika's genius to refer to only some of a group. The Ganga, the Yamuna and the Sarasvati are a well-known triad. Further it is very rarely, if ever, that Desika repeats the same sentiment in the same manner in successive slokas. Scrutinising the words employed in this and the next sloka from this viewpoint leads to the conclusion that in this sloka Yamuna is referred the words as referring to the Ganga. The three attributes common to Daya and the Ganga are: 1. Dritaabhuvanaa (धृतिभुवना) 2. Trividhagatyanukoolataraa (त्रिविधगत्यनुकूलतरा) and 3. Vrishagirinaathapaadaparirambhavatee (वृषगिरिनाथपादपरिरम्भवती) Dhritabhuvanaa when applied to the Ganga means carrying water. (Bhuvana means water). Applied to Daya it means protecting the world (bhuvana meaning the world). Trividhagatyanukoolataraa means favourable for the threefold flow—meaning flowing in three regions—the sky, the earth and the paatala. In regard to Daya it means helpful in regard to the three fold pursuits—aisvarya, kaivalya and moksha. Daya helps an aisvaryakama (a seeker after wealth), a kaivalyarthi (he who runs after kaivalya or the enjoyment of the individual soul alone as distinguished from the paramatma), and the Moksharthi (seeker after bliss). This is another form of Daya's sarvaphalapradatva (capacity to confer all desired fruits).

The Ganga flows from the feet of the Lord and is referred to here as embracing it. Dayadevi similarly takes her origin from Lord Srinivasa's paada. (vide Rooda-Vrishachalapateh-pande, sloka 18 above).

In the second half of this sloka it is pointed out that a person who takes a plunge into the fountain of Daya as much as a person who takes a dip in the Ganga, though he may not be aware of the greatness and glory of Daya or Ganga, gets rid of (heat) तप (sin). That one plunge is sufficient is indicated by sakrit avagaaha.

A knowledge of the greatness of the Ganga in regard to its purifying effect is not necessary for the bather, for even without that, by bathing in the Ganga the person feels relieved from a sense of heat and gets cleansed of sins. So too in the case of Daya though we cannot fully understand her mahimaa (greatness) still if we take refuge in her, she makes us free from the taapatraya and free from all our sins. Fire will not fail to singe the hand that touches it because it is not known to be fire.

Let me now respectfully place before the reader the interpretation of the words which will make the sloka refer to Yamuna. Without the Yamuna the Triveni will not be complete. The threefold flow must be taken to mean the flow of the rivers needed to constitute a Triveni. The attribute 'paadaparirambhavatee' seems to be far more apt if it is taken with the Yamuna than the Ganga. 'Pariramba' is embrace. The Ganga took its origin from the toe of the Lord, but it has nowhere been said that waters of the Ganga embraced the Lord's feet; whereas the Yamuna is well-known for having frequently embraced the feet of the Lord when He came down as Sri Krishna. When Sri Krishna was carried by His father Vasudeva from Muttra to Gokula, the waters of the Yamuna are said to have risen up and embraced the feet of the infant Krishna before permitting Vasudeva to cross it. On the numerous occasions on which Lord Krishna had jalakrīdā in the Yamuna with the Gopis, her waters lovingly embraced the divine and lovely feet of Krishna. It was because of this that the poet refers to the Yamuna as தாய் பெருநீர் யமுனை. This attribute in this sloka seems to indicate, beyond doubt, that the Yamuna is in the poet's contemplation. Nor is there anything against this interpretation in the third paada where the word 'surasindhu' occurs. Probably there is a suggestion (dhvani) here that the Yamuna is a river whose glory is not (as) well-known (as the Ganga). Surasindhu may well refer to any holy river not necessarily the Ganga. Desika has sung in one place of the Sarasvati having the Yamuna status (Krishnaanwayena dadhateem Yamunaanubhaavam... Sarasvateem—Godastuti). கண்ணன்வயேன தததிம் யமுநாநுபாவம் தீயை: ய வளவா மரஸ்திம் தே । He is quite capable of singing of the Ganga as Yamuna. I submit these considerations for what they are worth.

நியமசமாஸ்ரிதா நிஸிஹலோகசமூத்திரீ

மஜதத்கூலமுதுஜகதி: பரிதபஹிதா ।

புரகதிஹ்ஸ-மத்யகமத'யவநாரஸதா

விபுதஸரி ச்ஞ்ரீ வுஷகிரிஸதயே வஹஸி ॥

(95)

Nigamasamaasritaa nikhilalokasamriddhikaree

bhajadaghakoolamudrujagatihi paritaptahitaa

Prakatita hamsa matsya kamataadyavataarasataa

Vibudhasarichhriyam Vrishagireesa Daye! ahasi "

Daya of Vrishagireesa! You possess all the glory of the Ganga for you are praised by the Vedas; you bring about copious and plentiful prosperity to all the worlds; your force destroys the sins (both) of those who praise you; you are a source of comfort to those strikers of the Lord's feet; and on your feet the Lord's forms of Hamsa (swans), Ma-

Daya is compared to the Ganga in this sloka which is in the form of a slesha.

Nigamasamaasrithaa—The Ganga finds mention in the Vedas and Daya is dealt with in the Vedas.

The Ganga by fertilising tracts and irrigating millions of acres results in plentiful production and the world is thereby in possession of plenty. Daya also promises and procures plenty to her votaries in the world.

By strong and swift current the Ganga destroys shores and bunds that are calculated to curb its flow. So too in the case of persons whose spiritual progress and welfare are cribbed, cabined, and confined by their sins, Daya's flow shatters those bunds and barriers and sets them free.

In the Ganga there are several swans, fish, tortoises and hundreds of other such creatures. Daya is responsible for the Lord's assumption of the form of Hamsa (swan), Matsya (fish) and Koorma (tortoise), etc. Daya is responsible for these avataaras or incarnations of the Lord. (See sloka 35 above and sloka 82 post), and so she is spoken of here as publishing (prakatita) those forms which are numerous, sata (a hundred) being an upalakshana for numerous.

जगति मितं च त्वदितरा तु दये तरला

फलनियमे विज्ञा भवति संतपनाय पुनः ।

त्वमिह निरङ्कुशप्रसक्तनादिविभूतिमती

वितरसि देहिनां निरवधिं वृषशैरुनिधि । ॥ (५६)

Jagati mitamapchaa tvad itaraa tu Daye ! taralaa

Phalanyamojjhita bhavati santapanaaya punaha

Tvamih nirankusaprasakanaadivibhutimatee

vitarsi dehinaam niravadhim Vrishasailanidhim " (56)

Dayadevi! In this world, other dayas (the mercy and grace of others except Lord Srinivasa) except you, are all niggardly and inconstant, without certainty of yielding fruit, and calculated to bring in pain and distress again. In this respect you alone have the support of untrammelled power (sakti) etc. and confer on men the boundless wealth of Vrishasaila, Lord Srinivasa.

Having compared the Daya of Srinivasa with the sacred rivers like the Ganga and the Sarasvati, the poet proceeds to contrast her with the Daya of others. Daya or compassion is possessed in some degree or other by every one. Even a man in distress may himself feel imbued with sympathy and compassion toward another being in greater distress; but that sort of daya helps no one. Compassion and sympathy must have strength and power at the back to be effective. This truth is brought home to us by this sloka:

The Daya, mercy or compassion, of every one except Lord Srinivasa, i.e., all Dayas except the Daya in whose praise the stotra is sung (tvaditarāa)—are productive of small fruits (mitha phala). They are further taralāa (fickle, unsteady and transient). There is no certainty that they will yield even the benefits that are within their capacity. And their gifts to the extent they go are calculated to inflict pain again; for they are powerless to banish pain for ever.

In your case, however, no one can attribute any of these defects or shortcomings to you; for you have the glory of being backed up by nirankusa (unchecked and unrestrained) qualities such as sakti etc. (See sloka 10 above). The great gunas, gnana, sak etc., are your vibhuti (wealth) and contribute to your splendour and magnificence. Hence your gifts are all lofty, permanent, certain of yielding fruit, and eschew all possibility of sorrow or pain ever recurring. Therefore you are able to confer on your votaries the great bliss which is that nidhi situated in Tirumala-Lord Srinivasa.

This sloka may be said to be an elaboration of Nammalwar அவ்வருளல்லன் அருளுமல்ல. The Daya of Lord Srinivasa is the only Daya—the other Dayas are really not Dayaas at all. Unless one obtains this nischita buddhi, definite knowledge, he is likely to waver, and his faith in the Lord's Daya will not be strong and steadfast one. It is really this faith that impels Daya to take up the task of protecting us.

सकरुणलौकिकप्रभुपरिग्रहनिग्रहयोः

नियतिमुपाधिचक्रपरिवृत्तिपरम्परया ।

वृषभमहीधरेश्वरुणे विनरङ्गयतां

श्रुतिमितसंपदि त्वयि कथं भविता विशयः ॥ (५७)

Sakarunalaaukikaprabhuparigrahanigrahayoh

niyatim upaadhichakraparivrittiparamparayaa

Vrishabhamahadharasvarune vinarangayatam

Karuna of Vrishagireesa! Those who have carefully looked into the matter and noticed that the favours and frowns of the lords of this world are conditioned by (due to) the rotating causes in the nature of friendliness or hostility (towards them), they will not entertain any doubts about you whose greatness is measured (dealt with) by the Vedas.

Having dealt with the uniqueness of Daya, the poet now proceeds to show that no reasonable man can ever come to doubt her powers of protection. Do we not see about us that the great and rich men of this world (laukikaprabhus) imbued by sympathy and grace (sa-karuna) shower benefits on those of their followers who act in accordance with their wishes, expressed and unexpressed, and do we not also see those prabhus frown upon, renounce and punish those that act against their directions and inclinations? In other words, the favours and frowns of those lords of this world are the result of aanukoolya (favourableness, friendliness), and praatikoolya (hostility) respectively, in the persons rewarded or punished. With the change in the cause (upadhi) the result too varies. Aanukoolya or praatikoolya is said to come up alternating as in the whirling of a wheel (chakraparivritti)

By a proper study and analysis of, and reflection on, the ways of the worldly lords, we thus come to definitely understand the foregoing, viz., that protection follows aanukoolya (favourableness) and punishment follows praatikoolya (hostility); of course the master (prabhu) must have karuna in his composition. He must be a sa-karuna; else he will never know what protection or reward is.

If that is the manner in which a lordly person with karuna acts, how can any one doubt the power of Karuna herself to protect those who bear aanukoolya and aabhimukhya towards her? Visaya—(विषयः)—doubt, katham bhavita—(कथं भवति) how can it arise? Your fame and glory is dealt with by the Vedas. The laukika nyaya or worldly rule is sure to be more correctly applicable to the Vedic aspect borne by you. This question is really an answer to the doubt that some may entertain about Daya's willingness to come to our rescue. How can we expect Daya who never evinced any interest in us all these ages on ages suddenly come to our rescue?—so one may feel. The answer is furnished by this sloka. All these ages or years you never thought of the Lord's Daya; you never looked up to her for help. So you were not protected. Now that you have learnt of her greatness and goodness and have appealed to her for help, she takes care of you and protects you.

That she has the capacity to protect us has been established by several previous slokas including the last one. That she will certainly be inclined to protect us if we look up to her is shown in this sloka by reference to worldly conduct.

वृषगिरिऋणमेघजनितां जनितापहरां

त्वदभिमतिं सुवृष्टिमुपजीव्य निवृत्ततृषः ।

बहुषु जलाशयेषु बहुमानमपोह्य दये

न जहति सत्यं जगति चाकवत्कृतिनः ॥ (५८)

Vrishagirikrishnameghajanitaam janitaapaharaam

tvadabhimatim suvrishtim upajeevya nivrittatrishaha ।

Bahushu jalaasayeshu bahumaanam apohya Daye!

Na jahati satpatham jagathi chatakavat kritinaha " (58)

Daya Devi! The blessed ones who depend entirely on the good showers (rain) in the shape of your good will, having its origin in the dark cloud that has its seat on Vrishagiri, and having the capacity to do away with the heat engendered by birth (and death), have their thirst quenched, and like the chaataka bird give up all thought of tanks and reservoirs in the world, and never stray from the good path (akasa).

Having established in and by the previous sloka that Daya is sure to bestow her favours on those who resort to her, Desika proceeds in this sloka to mention the benefits derived by those who depend on Daya. As usual he resorts to upama. The chaataka is a bird which depends solely on rain water for quenching its thirst. It is said that there is a hole in its throat which prevents it from drinking from ponds and pools with its beak down. It has its mouth open, always lifted upwards and opened wide, so that when the rain falls, the rain water gets into its body. The devotee of Daya is compared to that chaataka bird.

In sloka 45 Daya was likened to the clouds drawing water from Srinivasa, the water of Grace, and showering it on her devotees. In this sloka Srinivasa is said to be the cloud which rains rain as clouds hold water, this cloud is full of Karuna. This description recollects to one's mind Bhoja's beautiful description in the Champu Ramayana:

सन्तापेन सकलजगतां शार्ङ्गवाग्भिरामं
लक्ष्मीविद्युललितं अतसीगुच्छसच्छायकायं ।
वैकुण्ठारुख्यं मुनिजनमनश्चातकानां शरण्यं कारुण्यापं त्रिदशपरिषट्कालमेघं ददर्श ॥

Desika has adopted this in the Hamsasandesa also where he sings

लक्ष्मीविद्युललितवपुषं तत्र कारुण्यपूर्णं मनैषीस्त्वं मरुतशिलमेचकं वीक्ष्य मेघं ।

In the Tattva Teeka Desika refers to the Lord of Kanchi as “Karisaila Krishnajanadaha kaankshitavarshhee” कश्चिन्मैलकृष्णजलधः कञ्चित्तवर्षा and in the same strain sings in the Yatiraja Saptati “Karisaila Krishnajanadaha Kaankshaadhikam varshati.” कश्चिन्मैलकृष्णजलधः काङ्क्षाधिकं वर्षति

Here it is Vrishagiri Krishna Megha. From that megha comes down a suvrishiti (सुवृष्टि) (good and helpful downpour), not ativrishiti (अतिवृष्टि) excessive downpour, nor anaavrishiti (अनावृष्टि) no downpour at all. It is Janitaapahara, it dispels the taapa of samsara (birth and death). It consists in your (Daya's) abhimati (अभिमति) or prasada (favour). This is the sole support and sustenance to the kriti (blessed person) even as rain water is to the chaataka bird. By drinking in this grace of Daya, the kritinaha (blessed and fortunate persons) become nivrittatrishaha (निवृत्तत्रिषः) relieved of thirst. Thereafter they do not descend or condescend to look at the several jalaasayaas (जलशयः) water reservoirs, like tanks, lakes or even rivers.

And they soar in space and never swerve from the path of rectitude (satpatham). Vedanta Desika is never tired of emphasising the need for right conduct. He can never bring himself to condone lapses from moral conduct at any stage in life. After prapatti or saranagati is gone through, there is a tendency in the prapanna or saranagata to feel free from the “shackles of right conduct.” The last paada of this sloka shows that such a tendency in the prapanna should be curbed and he must never swerve from the right path.

त्वदुदयतूलिकाभिरमुना वृषशैलजुग

स्थिरचरशिल्पिनैव परिकल्पितचित्तधियः ।

यतिपतियामुनप्रभृतयः प्रथयन्ति दये

जगति हितं न नस्त्वयि भरन्यसनादधिकम् ॥ (1)

*Tvadudaya-toolikaabhiramuna Vrishasailajusha-stirachara silpinaiva parikalpita chitradhiyaha ।
Yatipatiyaamunaprabhitayaha pratayanti Daye
jagati hitam nanastvayi bharanyasanaadadhikam ॥*

Daya Devi! That king among ascetics (Ramanuja) and Yacharya, and others like them, who had their beautiful minds (nicely sketched by this great painter residing in Vrishasaila (Ti with capacity to paint immovable (unmoving) as well as (moving) objects with the help of His (Painter's) brush d (the liquid paint that is) you,—have laid down that there is no or more potent means (for salvation) than surrender to you.

A very beautiful sloka as lofty in its poetry as in its sense. The central idea contained in this sloka is that this Saranagati has been laid down to be the easiest and safest means of salvation by great acharyas. Two of them are mentioned by name, Yati and Yaamuna. The rest are indicated by the " etc." (prabhritayaha). Yatipati or chief among Sanyasins is of course the great Saranagata Acharya Ramanuja (1017—1137 A.D.) author of the Sri Bhashya (commentary on the Brahma Sutras). Yaamuna is Ramanuja's preceptors' (he had five of them) preceptor more popularly known as Alavandar among Vaishnavas. Alavandar was the grandson of Nathamuni, the first of the acharas. Saint Satakopa (Nammalwar) in the heirarchy. In his Stotra Ratna Alavandar has sung of Saranagati in several places. Ramanuja has referred to Saranagati as the only means of winning the Lord's heart—Tat-vaseekaranam tat-saranam (तद्वशीकरणं तच्छरणार्गतिरेव) and has shown in his Satakatam and by his Sata Gadya (another work of his) the efficacy of Saranagati as the direct means of salvation. As Ramanuja is mentioned first then Yaamuna, and the word etc., follows, we have to take into consideration the fact that the word etc. is used to indicate the rest of the preceptors like Nathamuni.

Why should so much importance be attached to their ideas and sentiments and conduct? The answer to that question is furnished by the first two lines of the sloka where it is pointed out that they are persons specially blessed by the Lord with knowledge and insight. This is described in a remarkably artistic manner by resort to the analogy of one of the arts—the art of painting. They are exceptional men because their minds—intellects—have been shaped by the Lord Himself. They are Chitra-dhiyaha, men with beautiful intellects, painted or sketched by the Lord Himself, that Lord who has His seat in Vrishasaila, the Tirumala Hill. He is referred to as a silpi or painter. Unlike ordinary painters who can paint and reproduce on canvas only static and immovable objects this Painter can paint not only such stira objects but also chara (moving) objects. He is thus a stira-chara-silpi painter of both kinds of objects, mobile as well as static. He it was that sketched the beautiful intellect of those acharyas. So they are not capable of error or ignorance. The word “parikalpita” shows the extra love and care that the Lord must have bestowed in shaping and sketching their intellects.

The opening words of the sloka point to yet another and a very important and significant reason why those acharyas’ upadesa and anushtana are worthy of acceptance by all right thinking men. They are Tvat-udaya-toolikabhihi—which govern the word “parikalpita.” Toolika is the painter’s brush, that with which he sketches on the canvas. Here the brush used by this Silpi (Lord Srinivasa) is one which exhudes Daya. Udaya is dawn, appearance. At the tip of the toolika (brush) there is Daya with which the minds of those acharyas have been sketched. In other words Daya is the paint, the water colour that is utilised to sketch the hearts of those great acharyas.

The full beauty and significance of the language employed in this sloka and the sentiment enshrined in it can be understood only if we remind ourselves of another sloka of this poet, (the ninth sloka in the 1st Canto in his beautiful kavya, Yadhavabhyudhaya) at the beauty and suggestiveness of which the great Appayya Deekshita was himself very much struck.

क्रिडतूलिकया स्वास्मिन् कृपारुषितया स्वयं ।

एको विश्वमिदं चित्तं विभुश्रीमानजीजनत् ॥

त्वदुदयतूलिकाभिरमुना वृषशैलजुग

स्थिरचरशिल्पिनैव परिकल्पितचित्रधियः ।

यतिपतियामुनप्रभृतयः प्रथयन्ति दये

जगति हितं न नस्त्वयि भरन्यसनादधिकम् ॥ (५)

Tvadudaya-toolikaabhiramuna Vrishasailajusha-

stirachara silpinaiva parikalpita chitradhiyaha ।

Yatipatiyaamunaprabhitayaha pratayanti Daye

jagati hitam nanastvayi bharanyasanaadadhikam ॥

Daya Devi! That king among ascetics (Ramanuja) and Yaa charya, and others like them, who had their beautiful minds (intelligently) sketched by this great painter residing in Vrishasaila (Tiruvannamalai) with capacity to paint immovable (unmoving) as well as moving (moving) objects with the help of His (Painter's) brush dipping (the liquid paint that is) you,—have laid down that there is no greater or more potent means (for salvation) than surrender to you.

A very beautiful sloka as lofty in its poetry as in its sentiment.

The central idea contained in this sloka is that this Saranagati has been laid down to be the easiest and safest means of salvation by great acharyas. Two of them are mentioned by name, Yati and Yaamuna. The rest are indicated by the “ etc.” (prabrutaya). Yati or chief among Sanyasins is of course the great Sri Vannava Acharya Ramanuja (1017—1137 A.D.) author of the famous Sri Bhashya (commentary on the Brahma Sutras). Yaamuna is Ramanuja's preceptors' (he had five of them) preceptor. He is more popularly known as Alavandar among Vaishnavaites, and was the grandson of Nathamuni, the first of the acharyas at Tiruvannamalai Saint Satakopa (Nammalwar) in the hierarchy. In his famous Stotra Ratna Alavandar has sung of Saranagati in several places. Ramanuja has referred to Saranagati as the only means of captivating the Lord's heart—Tat-vaseekaranam tat-saranagatireva (तद्वासीकरणं तच्छरणगतरेव) and has shown in and by his Saranagati Gadya (another work of his) the efficacy of Saranagati as a direct means of salvation. As Ramanuja is mentioned first and then Yaamuna, and the word etc., follows, we have to take it that the poet is thinking of earlier acharyas like Nathamuni and Nammalwar.

Why should so much importance be attached to their ideas and sentiments and conduct? The answer to that question is furnished by the first two lines of the sloka where it is pointed out that they are persons specially blessed by the Lord with knowledge and insight. This is described in a remarkably artistic manner by resort to the analogy of one of the arts—the art of painting. They are exceptional men because their minds—intellects—have been shaped by the Lord Himself. They are Chitra-dhiyaha, men with beautiful intellects, painted or sketched by the Lord Himself, that Lord who has His seat in Vrishasaila, the Tirumala Hill. He is referred to as a silpi or painter. Unlike ordinary painters who can paint and reproduce on canvas only static and immovable objects this Painter can paint not only such stira objects but also chara (moving) objects. He is thus a stira-chara-silpi painter of both kinds of objects, mobile as well as static. He it was that sketched the beautiful intellect of those acharyas. So they are not capable of error or ignorance. The word “parikalpita” shows the extra love and care that the Lord must have bestowed in shaping and sketching their intellects.

The opening words of the sloka point to yet another and a very important and significant reason why those acharyas’ upadesa and anushtana are worthy of acceptance by all right thinking men. They are Tvat-udaya-toolikabhihi—which govern the word “parikalpita.” Toolika is the painter’s brush, that with which he sketches on the canvas. Here the brush used by this Silpi (Lord Srinivasa) is one which exhudes Daya. Udaya is dawn, appearance. At the tip of the toolika (brush) there is Daya with which the minds of those acharyas have been sketched. In other words Daya is the paint, the water colour that is utilised to sketch the hearts of those great acharyas.

The full beauty and significance of the language employed in this sloka and the sentiment enshrined in it can be understood only if we remind ourselves of another sloka of this poet, (the ninth sloka in the 1st Canto in his beautiful kavya, Yadhavabhyudhaya) at the beauty and suggestiveness of which the great Appayya Deekshita was himself very much struck.

क्रीडतूलिकया स्वास्मिन् कृपारुषितया स्वयं ।

— श्री कृष्णार्जुनसंवादे श्रीभगवद्गीता —

There also Lord Srinivasa—referred to there as Sreem is described as a painter, the sole and unaided painter of this cosmos. The brush He employs in the painting is Kreedā (sport) and paint, Kripa, i.e., Daya. The suggestion is that though I and Daya are both responsible for creation, Daya is the shaft and potent force, not leela or sport. In the painting we do not see the painter or the brush used by him; we see only the paint utilized to sketch the several objects painted. So too in creation it is Daya that is the shaping power and not sport, though no doubt it has its part in the process of creation. Whereas the Yadhabhyudaya sloka refers to the painting of the entire cosmos, this Daya Sata sloka refers only to the painting of the minds of the great acharyas. There is a total absence of Leela or sport in this painting. In sloka 47 above we saw how Daya is responsible for the production of helpful shastra and Leela for bringing out deceptive shastras. So too in ordinary creation where there is a mixture of sport or leela with Daya or mercy, we find good and bad mixed together. But where Daya alone is, or prevails, nothing but mixed good will result. There is no scope for Rajas and Tamas; it is pure Satva. This is the excellence attributed to the intellect of the great acharyas. They are therefore able to think out and expound truth unaffected by contact with ignorance, confusion and such other imperfections that intellect is prone to. The Siddhanta or theory is therefore free from all blemish and defect and must be followed by others.

What is their conclusion? It is that in this world there is no greater or more potent means of realising one's desires than seeking the help of Daya by surrendering ourselves to her in thought, word and deed and placing ourselves unreservedly in her able and loving hands.

मृदुहृदये दये मृदितकामहिते महिते

धृतिबुधे बुधेषु विततात्मधुरे मधुरे ।

वृषगिरिः सर्वानामदयिते मयि ते महि ।

भवुकनिधे निधेहि भवमूलहरां लहरीम् ॥

(६०)

Mrudu hridaye! Daye! Mridata-kama-hite! mahite!

Dhritavibudhe! budheshu vitataatmadhure! madhure!

Vrishagiri Saarvabhauma Dayite! mayi te mahateem.

Bhavukanidhe! nidhehi bhavamoolaharaam lahareem ॥

(1) Soft-hearted (2) Daya Devi! (3) ever watchful of the intensity of those who have quelled and subdued sense-desires, (4) celebrated by one and all, (5) supporter of the true gnanis, (6) entrusting your protecting burden to the great and learned ones (7) sweet by nature (8) ever beloved of that great Emperor of Vrishagiri; and (9) store house of all auspiciousness! pray turn towards me your immense flood capable of uprooting samsara (life and death).

Having talked about the efficacy of Saranagati and the part that Daya Devi plays in regard to this safe, certain and efficacious means of gaining one's desired end, Vedanta Desika in this sloka adopts that upaya (means) by praying to Daya to do away with his Samsaric ties, release him from the bondage of samsara (bhava) ஈவ. This is the sloka in and by which Desika seeks refuge in Daya. It contains the nyasa or Saranagati—the chief part of it, known as the angi. The five angas or essential component parts are found distributed in the slokas of this decad thus:

Sloka 52 and 57 Aanukoolya Sankalpa

Sloka 57 Pratikoolya varjana

Sloka 56 and 59 mahaavisvaasa

Sloka 51 Kaarpanya

Sloka 60 Goptrutva varana as well as the angi Saranagati.

This is the last sloka of this decad. Here again we see Desika following Nammalwar closely. It was by the last verse of the sixth பத்து pattu that Nammalwar performed prapatti at the Feet of Lord Srinivasa of Tiruvengadam. That verse is as follows:

அகலகில்லேன் இறையும் என்று அலர்மேல்மங்கைஉறைமாற்பா!
நிகரில் புகழாய்! உலகம் மூன்றுடையாய்! என்னை ஆள்வானே!
நிகரில் அமரர் முணிக்கணங்கள் விரும்பும் திருவேங்கடத்தானே!
புகல்ஒன்றில்லா அடியேன் உன்னடிக்கீழ் அமர்ந்து புகுந்தேனே.

Tiru. VI. X. 10.

The Alwar's verse is addressed to the Lord of Tiruvengadam (திருவேங்கடத்தானே). Desika's sloka is addressed to Daya Devi. There four other Sambodanaas (addresses in the vocative case) for Tiruvengadathan. Here there are eight other sambodanas to Daya Devi; including Daye! (nine).

(1) Mrudu-hrudaye! Soft-hearted! This is the essence of Daya. She is always compassionate and sympathetic (as one of her names Anu-kampa denotes) and her heart melts at the sight of pain and distress suffered by others and she rushes to their relief.

(2) Daye! The usual address in this stotra.

(3) Mridita-kama-hite! Kama is desire, desire for world pleasures. Mridita-kaamaas are those who have crushed and quelled such desires. Daya takes charge of the true welfare (hita) of such persons and so she is addressed here as Mridita-Kama-hite!—Those whose hita or true welfare she has at heart are those who have crushed desires, and not those whom desires have crushed. The term Mridita-kama reminds us of the a-kaama-hata of the Anandavalli of Taittiriya Upanishad. Several gradations of ananda (bliss) are talked of there in geometrical progression—starting from human ananda and ending with Brahmananda. But immediately after naming each particular ananda there is a refrain running through this part of that Upanishad to the effect that that pleasure or ananda pertains also to a Shrotriya who is an akamahata. श्रीत्रियश्चाकामहतश्च

The word akaamahata means one who is not destroyed by Kama. The Upanishad does not say a-kama, desireless, but akaamahata, not killed by desire. Desire there must be, but not for the small and evanescent pleasures yielding parimita-phalas (vid. sloka 39 above). Desire for them will end in naasa नाश or destruction. The Kama must be for the Lord Himself. परमत्मान्योरक्तः विरक्तः अपरमात्मनि—One who has a desire for Paramatma will have no desire for other things i.e., will have quelled and subdued all those other desires. And thus he becomes a mriditakama whose welfare Daya looks after.

(4) Mahite! means honoured, esteemed, revered, renowned. This whole Stotra must be taken to be explanatory of this term.

(5) Dhrita-vibudhe! supporting the truly learned! Those who are truly learned have postulated that there is no greater and potent force for their protection than Daya Devi. And Daya Devi in her turn supports and protects such persons without putting them to the necessity of shifting for themselves.

(6) budheshu-vitata-aatma-dhure! you who have spread out your burden of protection with (or among) the wise acharyas! This is a very beautiful epithet employed by Desika to indicate that Daya Devi entrusts the safety and protection of those who

to her for help and succour, to the great Acharyas who are of the Lord, so beloved as to make Him refer to them in gavat Geeta as His Atma, (gnanee-tu-atmaiva-me-matam) very dear to Him (Sa-cha-mama-priyaha). The gnani of ta is here referred to as Budaha (बुधः). Their greatness cated in the previous sloka by the words Vrishagiri-jushahra-silpinaiva-parikalpita-chitra-dhiyaha. As they are reposit f Daya's protective qualities, ordinary men and women rely on them for redemption. This is known as the Acharya-arm of Saranagati.

Madhure! Sweet! By nature Daya Devi is sweet and e, even as a mother is to the baby.

Vrishagiri-sarvabhauma-dayite! Beloved of the Emperor agiri! Daya is one of the Consorts of Lord Srinivasa. een said before that the other Consorts like Sri, Bhoo and Devis are dear to the Lord because the Lord sees Daya in them. (Sloka 36).

Bhavuka-nidhe! Storehouse of all mangalam (auspicious- The very first description of Daya in this Sloka was as an na-nidhi (treasure-house for the helpless). That nidhi or is here pointed out to be a bhavuka-nidhi, a treasure of usness.

er having thus called Daya in nine different ways, Sri Desika nown to her his prayer in the words "mayi-te-mahateem-oola-haraam-lahareem-nidhehi,"-pray divert towards me ghty floods capable of uprooting this great tree of Samsara. to say, please destroy my connection with Samsara and on me the beatitude of the Highest Bliss. The nature and tent of that Bliss have already been described in detail in a decad.

as the sixth decad of this Stotra concludes with the perfor of prapatti by Desika even as the sixth Centurium of Verse malwar's Tiruvoimozhi ends with the Alwar's anushtaana e) of prapatti. The effect of this anushtana or practice of is seen in the following decads. The twofold aspect of that Daya renders to prapannas, viz., Anishta-nivritti and aapti (Removal of undesired fruits and realisation of desired spectively) is described in detail in the succeeding decads.

Anu-kampa denotes) and her heart melts at the sight of pain & distress suffered by others and she rushes to their relief.

(2) Daye! The usual address in this stotra.

(3) Mridita-kama-hite! Kama is desire, desire for world pleasures. Mridita-kaamaas are those who have crushed & quelled such desires. Daya takes charge of the true welfare (hita) of such persons and so she is addressed here as Mridita-Kamahite!—Those whose hita or true welfare she has at heart are those who have crushed desires, and not those whom desires have crushed. The term Mridita-kama reminds us of the a-kaama-hata of Anandavalli of Taittiriya Upanishad. Several gradations of ananda-bliss are talked of there in geometrical progression—starting from human ananda and ending with Brahmananda. But immediately after naming each particular ananda there is a refrain running through this part of that Upanishad to the effect that that pleasure ananda pertains also to a Shrotriya who is an akamahata श्रोत्रियश्चाकामहतश्च

The word akaamahata means one who is not destroyed by Kama. The Upanishad does not say a-kama, desireless, but akaamahata, not killed by desire. Desire there must be, but not for the small and evanescent pleasures yielding parimita-phalas (viśloka 39 above). Desire for them will end in naasa नाश or destruction. The Kama must be for the Lord Himself. परमत्मनोरक्तः विरक्तः अपरमात्मनि—One who has a desire for Paramatma will have no desire for other things i.e., will have quelled and subdued all those other desires. And thus he becomes a mriditakama whose welfare Daya looks after.

(4) Mahite! means honoured, esteemed, revered, renowned. This whole Stotra must be taken to be explanatory of this term.

(5) Dhrita-vibudhe! supporting the truly learned! Those who are truly learned have postulated that there is no greater and potter force for their protection than Daya Devi. And Daya Devi in her turn supports and protects such persons without putting them to the necessity of shifting for themselves.

(6) budheshu-vitata-aatma-dhure! you who have spread out your burden of protection with (or among) the wise acharyas. This is a very beautiful epithet employed by Desika to indicate that Daya Devi entrusts the safety and protection of those who

श्रीमते निगमान्तमहादेशिकाय नमः

श्री श्रीनिवास परब्रह्मणे नमः

॥ दयाशतकम् ॥

DAYAA SATAKAM

SEVENTH DECAD.

IN this decad the poet demonstrates the several ways in which Daya Devi brings about the safety and welfare of those who take refuge in her and rely on her entirely for their spiritual safety and protection. Anishta—the undesired results and adverse effects are done away with by Daya. She strives to achieve that end in several different ways. Daya's supremacy in action is very well brought out in this decad. The Lord was demonstrated by Nammalwar in the seventh patthu (பத்து) of his Tiruvoimozhi as an Anishta-Vidhvamsa-seelaha (अनिष्ट विध्वंसशीलः). Daya Devi is here shown by Desika to be even cleverer and more consummate than the Lord Himself in destroying the devotee's unwished-for evil fruits.

The metre employed is 'Sikharini'. As already mentioned, this is also a samavritta with seventeen syllables in each paada. In at least five out of the ten slokas of this decad (62 and 66 to 69) the word 'Sikhari' can be seen to occur. The only other place in this stotra where Vrishaba-sikhari occurs is sloka 35.

अकूपारैरेकोदकसमयवैतण्ड्यजै-

रनिर्वाप्या क्षिप्रं क्षपयितुमविद्यास्त्रवडवाम् ।

कृपे त्वं तत्तादृक्प्रथिमवृषपृथ्वीभरपति-

स्वरूपद्वैगुण्यद्विगुणनिजबिन्दुः प्रवहसि ॥

(६१)

Akooparairekodhaka samaya vaithandika javaihi

Anirvaapyam kshipram kshapayitum avidhyaakhyabadabam ।

Kripe! tvam tattadrk pratima Vrishapratvee dharapatihi

Swaroopa dvaigunyadviguna nijabindu pravahasi ॥ (61).

Kripa Devi! You flow in abundance (even like a flood). Even one drop of you which is four times as great and as potent as the Swa-roopa (or essential nature) of that great Lord of Vrishaachala, whose greatness is beyond human understanding,—is sufficient to quickly quench that great fire known as avidya which is unquenchable, even like the sub-marine fire (badabaanala) which the vast waters of the seven seas, seas,—which join together during pralaya (when the world is one sheet of water), with as great force and speed as those of the countless wrangling arguments (of a class of controversialists known as vitandavaadins), are unable to quench.

In the previous sloka reference was made to Daya's mahateehavamoola-haraa-laharee, or the great and mighty samsara-destroying flood. The idā runs into this sloka and that laharee or flood of Daya is set off against the great floods caused by the meeting of the seas during pralaya, when the entire cosmos is enveloped in water. It is pointed out that one drop of the flood of Daya is able to accomplish what the entirety of that huge flood during pralaya is unable to achieve. Water has the capacity to quench fire. But there is a fire within the sea, a sub-marine fire known in Hindu Mythology as the Badaba (also Vadaba) anala. It is so called as it is supposed to have the face of a vadaba or mare. Though it is within the sea it is never put out or quenched by the waters of the sea. On the other hand it feeds on water as if water were fuel and for that reason is abindana अविनश्यन्. When all the seas meet in pralaya even then this fire is not quenched. This is what is referred to in the first half of this sloka.

Ekodaka-samaya; the time when it is all water, i.e., Pralaya. Akoo-paraihi—by the seas. The speed and force with which the seas mingle at the time of pralaya are indicated by a very appropriate simile. That speed and that force are compared to the speed and the force with which words flow from the mouths of Vithandaa-vaadins during argumentations. A vithandaavaadin or vithandika is one who is out to indulge in captious arguments and destructive criticism. He is not bothered with the establishment of any Siddhanta or conclusion. He has none of his own, or even if he has one, he does not care for it. All that he is anxious to bring about is a volume of words calculated to counter and oppose the opponent's viewpoint. He drowns himself, and intends to drown his opponents, in a maze of ponderous and high-sounding compared to the waters of the seas surging with the same of force or vehemence at the time of pralaya. There a waters do not pause to submerge only the good things the bad things of the world. They submerge every thing, bad and indifferent. Vedanta Desika's contempt for this argumentation is very pointedly noticeable here.

Just as ignorance is not dispelled by the empty and argumentation of the Vaithandika, the sub-marine fire is not ched by the seas in spite of their force and vehemence.

The central theme of the sloka is that the avidya that quenchable otherwise is easily dispelled by Daya. Or, to the sloka its full import, avidya (here it means Karma) which Lord is unable to put an end to, is very effectively wiped out by Daya.

This idea is mentioned in the second half of the sloka. Remember may remember how in sloka 13 ante, it was said that the placed Lord Srinivasa was submerged in the flood of Daya. This sloka elaborates the idea and postulates that Daya is bigger than the Lord Himself.

The true nature (swaroopa) of the Lord is such that beyond saying that it is that, and it is this, no one can really fully or wholly comprehend it. As Tondaradippodi Alwar has put it in the maalai பெருமை ஒன்று உணரலாகாது and வணங்கி இருப்பதல்லால், பேசத்தான் ஆவதுண்டோ? (His greatness beyond comprehension. Beyond merely worshipping Him we ever talk of Him?) That is His greatness. The word Brahman itself signifies big, vast.

Take that swaroopa. Multiply it by two. Then again multiply that product by two. That, if you can really comprehend it, is equated with a drop of Daya. In other words a drop (bit) of Daya is equal to four times the dimension of the Lord's swaroopa. The sloka however does not say four times, but says twice its dimension—a rather quaint way of referring to four. One is reminded of Andala's ஈரிரண்டு (twice two) in the closing verse of Tiruppava. Infinity doubled is infinity. Infinity quadrupled is also infinity. But one stands aghast at the immensity of the quadrupled infinity. At once it is pointed out that a drop of Daya is equal to that quadrupled infinity. And we are left to imagine what a flood of Daya ill come to or be like on this scale. Can the greatness and immensity of Daya be dealt with in a better or a more effective form?

It is not mere poetry but a great truth. Daya's swaroopa is that has to come to our rescue and unless it is so big and immense, she cannot consume our (Karma) sins. The nature of our sins was pointed out in sloka 34 above. Daya has got to be that immense to drown our sins.

There is a paata or rendering for the last word as 'prabhavasi' (भवसि) which means 'you are capable or competent (to effectuate the destruction of avidya). But the word pravahasi adopted here is more apt and significant in view of the previous sloka and the other words in this sloka. (61).

विविक्तावेतालीविगमपरिशुद्धेऽपि हृदये

पटुप्रत्याहारप्रभृतिपुटपाकप्रचकिताः ।

नमन्स्त्वां नारायणशिखरिकूटस्थ करुणे

निरुद्धवद्द्रोहा नृपतिसुतनीति न जहति ॥ (६२)

ivitsaavetalee vigamaparisuddhepi hridaye

Patupratyaahara prabhrutiputapaaka prachakitaaha

amantastvaam Narayanasikhari kootasta karune!

Niruddha tvadrohaa nripatisuta neetim na jahati. " (62).

Karuna of the Lord of Naarayanaachala! Even those who have purified their hearts by driving out the she-demon of endless desires, being afraid of the arduous process of Bhaktiyoga, which involves having to go through fire by undergoing the hard discipline of controlling the senses and so on, pay their obeisance (resort) to you, i.e., surrender themselves unto you. Thereafter they eschew all treachery and malevolence towards you, and do not give up (i.e., they follow) the rule of the King's son, heir to the throne.

As Saranagati had been adopted and practised in the sixth decad, this next decad sets out the uttarakritya उत्तरकृत्य or the conduct during the post-prapatti period of a prapanna's life. Several cardinal doctrines that a prapanna ought to know and adopt are set out in this and succeeding decads.

The first half of the sloka explains why even those who have been able to subdue their desires for earthly objects such as wealth and sexual pleasures seek refuge at Daya's feet. The first line of the verse describes the process by which purity of heart is secured compared to the waters of the seas surging with the same amount of force or vehemence at the time of pralaya. There also the waters do not pause to submerge only the good things or only the bad things of the world. They submerge every thing,—good, bad and indifferent. Vedanta Desika's contempt for this sort of argumentation is very pointedly noticeable here.

Just as ignorance is not dispelled by the empty and noisy argumentation of the Vaithandika, the sub-marine fire is not quenched by the seas in spite of their force and vehemence.

The central theme of the sloka is that the avidya that is not quenchable otherwise is easily dispelled by Daya. Or, to give the sloka its full import, avidya (here it means Karma) which the Lord is unable to put an end to, is very effectively wiped out by Daya.

This idea is mentioned in the second half of the sloka. Readers may remember how in sloka 13 ante, it was said that the high placed Lord Srinivasa was submerged in the flood of Daya. This sloka elaborates the idea and postulates that Daya is bigger than the Lord Himself.

The true nature (swaroopa) of the Lord is such that beyond saying that it is that, and it is this, no one can really fully or wholly comprehend it. As Tondaradippodi Alwar has put it in the Tiru-naalai பெருமை ஒன்று உணரலாகாது and வணங்கி நாம் இருப்பதல்லால், பேசத்தான் ஆவதுண்டோ? (His greatness is beyond comprehension. Beyond merely worshipping Him can we ever talk of Him?) That is His greatness. The word Brahman itself signifies big, vast.

Take that swaroopa. Multiply it by two. Then again multiply that product by two. That, if you can really comprehend it, is equated with a drop of Daya. In other words a drop (bindu) of Daya is equal to four times the dimension of the Lord's swaroopa. The sloka however does not say four times, but says twice its double—a rather quaint way of referring to four. One is reminded of Andal's ஈரிண்டு (twice two) in the closing verse of Tiruppavai. Infinity doubled is infinity. Infinity quadrupled is also infinity. But one stands aghast at the immensity of the quadrupled infinity. At once it is pointed out that a drop of Daya is equal to that quadrupled infinity. And we are left to imagine what a flood of Daya will come to or be like on this scale. Can the greatness and immensity of Daya be dealt with in a better or a more effective form?

It is not mere poetry but a great truth. Daya's swaroopa it is that has to come to our rescue and unless it is so big and immense, she cannot consume our (Karma) sins. The nature of our sins was pointed out in sloka 34 above. Daya has got to be that immense to drown our sins.

There is a paata or rendering for the last word as 'prabhavasi' (प्रभवसि) which means 'you are capable or competent (to effectuate the destruction of avidya). But the word pravahasi adopted here is more apt and significant in view of the previous sloka and the other words in this sloka. (61).

विविक्तावेतालीविगमपरिशुद्धेऽपि हृदये

पटुप्रत्याहारप्रभृतिपुटपाकप्रचकिताः ।

नमन्स्त्वां नारायणशिखरिकूटस्थ ऋणे

निरुद्धत्वद्रोहा नृपतिसुतनीतिं न जहति ॥ (६२)

Vivitsaavetalee vigamaparisuddhepi hridaye

Patupratyaahara prabhrutiputapaaka prachakitaaha ।

Namantastvaam Narayanasikhari kootasta karune!

Niruddha tvadrohaa nripatisuta neetim na jahati. " (62):

Karuna of the Lord of Naarayanaachala! Even those who have purified their hearts by driving out the she-demon of endless desires, being afraid of the arduous process of Bhaktiyoga, which involves having to go through fire by undergoing the hard discipline of controlling the senses and so on, pay their obeisance (resort) to you, i.e., surrender themselves unto you. Thereafter they eschew all treachery and malevolence towards you, and do not give up (i.e., they follow) the rule of the King's son, heir to the throne.

As Saranagati had been adopted and practised in the sixth decad, this next decad sets out the uttarakritya उत्तरकृत्य or the conduct during the post-prapatti period of a prapanna's life. Several cardinal doctrines that a prapanna ought to know and adopt are set out in this and succeeding decads.

The first half of the sloka explains why even those who have been able to subdue their desires for earthly objects such as wealth and sexual pleasures seek refuge at Daya's feet. The first line of the verse describes the process by which purity of heart is secured by driving out the she-demon (Vethaala) of various and pointed desire. Those who have so purified their hearts by sing them of desire still hesitate to pursue the time-honoured of Bhaktiyoga laid down in the Upanishad, and which Sri K so elaborately explained in the Gita, because they are afraid to pursue that ambitious and long-drawn out process. Puta is the process which drugs are subjected to, by being wrapped in leaves etc., and roasted in fire. In general, it signifies passing through fire, with all that that English phrase connotes.

Pratyaaahara is one of the eight angas or parts of Bhakti. It means the withdrawal and control of the senses—not by means an easy task for any one, especially in these days. putu, violent. It is not all. It is only one of the several as indicated by the ‘prabritibihi’ that follows. So they resort to you pay obeisance to you (Namantastvaam).

The last line of the sloka emphasises the need in a prapanna to be faithful and true to Daya Devi, who has promised to set out his karma and confer on him freedom from the shackles of Karma, which is the negative aspect of mukti, union with the Divine being its positive content. The words ‘niruddha-tvat-droha’ put this idea of the prapanna’s faithfulness to Daya in a negative manner. They mean, having prevented treachery to Daya creeping in. To continue to break the moral and spiritual laws is to be faithless to Daya. These words are reminiscent of the words ‘madrohee’ of the Gita. That state, they avoid. We may here remember ourselves of the words ‘Na-jahati-satpatham-jagati’ employed in sloka 58 to describe the state of a kriti or blessed one (prapanna).

The Rajakumara-nyaya referred to at the end of the sloka by the words ‘Nripati-suta-neeti’ stresses the importance of not erring in future and at the same time indicates the hopes and aspirations engendered in the prapanna’s heart by the prapatti he has performed with mahaavisvasa महाविश्वास or full faith in Daya’s redemptive grace. The son of a King, and heir-apparent to the throne, has to be more careful than an ordinary man in regard to his conduct. The smallest foible in him will not be tolerated and if ever he comes to be guilty of it, he will not go unpunished. He must be aware of it. So too the prapanna who is the heir-apparent to the moksha-saamrajya—the kingdom of Heaven, has to keep a very watchful eye on his conduct and avoid all errors of commission and omission in his post-prapatti life. If any aparaad sin) is committed by him unawares (abuddhi-poorvaka) he must be prepared to atone for it and/or receive and undergo the punishment for it. By the time however this life of his comes to an end, he steps into the Heavenly abode, entirely sinless, just as the Crown Prince becomes King at the proper time.

This sloka contains the gist of two or three chapters of Srimad Mahasyatrayasara, as those who have studied that work will see for themselves.

In this sloka for the first time this Sacred Hill, Tirumala, is referred to as Naarayana-sikhari. Naaraayanaachala नारायणाचल is one of the puranic names of Tirumala.

अनन्याधीनमस्त्वं भवति परतन्त्रः प्रणमतां

कृपे सर्वदृष्टा न गणयति तेषामपकृतिम् ।

पतिस्त्वं परमार्थं प्रथयति वृषक्षमाधरपति-

र्थ्यस्यां वैयात्यादिति विघटयन्ती विहरसि ॥ (६३)

[ananyadheenassan bhavati paratantra pranamataam

Kripe! sarvadrashtaa naganayati tesham apakritim ।

patistvatpaaraartyam pratyati Vrishakshmaadharapatir

Vyavastaam vaiaatyaditi vighatayantee viharasi ॥ (63).

Kripa Devi! The Lord of Vrishaachala,—though He is by nature object and subservient to no one,—subjects and subjugates Himself to those who are His Saranaagataas: though He is omniscient and can see everything, He does not take count of His Saranaagataas's errors. He is your pathi (Lord) but in regard to you He plays the role of a follower. Thus you by your audaciousness sport (take a delight) in breaking all settled rules.

Daya Devi is here demonstrated to be a revolutionary, a breaker of laws, and an upsetter of conventions and settled ways and rules. How she wields sway over the Lord of all, and Her Lord too, is very nicely pointed out. In three ways the Lord is said to act against His own nature.

He is an ananyaadheena—subject and subservient to no one else. Yet Daya makes of Him a willing dependent on His Pranaagataas (those who have done prapatti to Him) and look to Him for their all. He goes on errands for them. He drives a chariot, may He even brushes and bathes their chariots' horses, as. Lee Sukha has sung.

He is a sarvadrashtha, one who sees everything. Yet He blind to His Saranaagataa's foibles; for He pardons them all. He is in fact an avignaata अविज्ञाता as the Sahasranaama says—who does not know.

He is patim-visvasya पतिं विश्वस्य and also your (Daya's pati—Lord. But He delights in displaying and publishing His subservience to you. He is a Seshi शेषि to all the world. But He is a sesha शेष to you.

In this threefold manner the change in the Lord's swabhava or nature is mentioned in the first three paadaas of the sloka, which winds up by stating in its last quarter that thus Daya destroy boundaries, limitations, and laws. Her audaciousness is born of the Lord's fancy for her objectives in regard to the redemption of mankind, a fondness and fancy well brought out in several earlier slokas.

The sentiments of this sloka appear to belittle the Lord. But in truth and fact they give pointed prominence to His true greatness. Does He not claim and proclaim in the Bhagavad Gita that the Gnani—to whom the Lord is everything (Vasudevas-sarvam) वासुदेवः सर्वं is His soul?—Gnanee-tu-atmaiva-me-matam. ज्ञानी तु आत्मैव मे मतम् “The gnani probably thinks that I am his soul: in truth and fact he is My soul.” A Lord who can say so about Himself can well afford to be described as Daya Devi's follower—Seshabhuta—शेषभूत.

The several ways in which Daya Devi functions to bring about this result are elaborated in the succeeding slokas.

अपां पत्युः शत्रूनसहनमुनेर्धर्मनिगलं

कृपे काकस्यैकं हितमिति हिनस्तिस्म नयनम् ।

विलीनम्बान्त्र्यो वृषगिरिपतिस्त्वद्विहृतिभि-

दिशत्येवं देवो जनितसुगतिं दण्डनगतिम् ॥ (६४)

Apaampatyussatroon asahanamunerdharma nigalam

Kripe! Kaakasyaikam hitamiti hinastisma nayanam ।

Vileenasvatantryo Vrishagiripatistvad vihritibhihi

Disatyevam Devo janitasugatim dandanagatim ॥ (64).

Kripa Devi! The Lord of Vrishagiri, deprived of independence is by your sportive acts,—destroyed the enemies of (Varuna) lord of the waters (rivers), the shackles in the form of righteous lust in the case of that intolerant muni, Parasurama, and one of the crow (who molested Sita Devi),—as being calculated in case to be for the betterment of that person. He thus confers punishment productive of good and desirable results.

The revolution wrought by Daya Devi in the very nature the Lord was dealt with in the previous sloka. In this sloka poet deals with the revolution she works in the fates of those who have committed wrongs and are therefore condemned to receive punishment. Three instances of punishment proving to be rewards in the ultimate result are mentioned, and from them derived a great truth and a grand theory about the place of punishment in divine dispensation. Srīman V. V. Srinivasa Iyengar revered memory used to say that this sloka contains Vedānta Ka's conception of the Theory of Evil, and the place of punishment in the scheme of the world order. Modern definitions of punishment have banished the early and crude ideas of a tooth for a tooth and a nail for a nail, and postulate the purpose of punishment as redemptive in its essence. This was the idea envisaged by the poet more than six hundred years ago.

All the three instances are taken from the Ramayana. The first of them is about Varuna (Samudraraja) and is found in the Yuddhakanda. Acting on the advice of Vibishana who had seen for himself the great efficacy of Saranagati, Sri Rama resolves to perform Saranagati to the lord of the seas to obtain favour thereby to enable Him and His huge army to cross the ocean. As there was no response from the sea-king even after the lapse of some days, Rama becomes angry and threatens to dry up the ocean (Sagaram Soshayishyami). At once the Sea-king appears in person and prays for Rama's pardon. Anger in Rama immediately vanishes, but the destructive arrow intended to finish the sea-king cannot go unappeased. So at the request of Varuna himself it is aimed at the enemies of that king and destroys them. The punishment intended as a punishment to Varuna resulted in the annihilation of his enemies and thus conferred a boon and a benefit on him.

Even one's good deeds can hamper one's spiritual progress. This was the case with Parasurama. Born of the great sage Jama-dagni, Parasurama had ever so much of Dharma or righteous conduct to his credit. That however was only useful to egg him on to measure his strength against Sri Rama. Foiled in his attempt to overpower Sri Rama, he confessed to his being vanquished by that great Dharma-moorty and exclaimed “Akshayyam Madhu-hantaaram jaanaami tvaam sureswaram” अक्षय्यम् मधुहन्तारं जानामि त्वां सुरेश्वरम्. Abashed at his previous attitude of defiance and haughtiness—the result of accumulated dharma—he hung his head in shame and prayed लोकास्त्वप्रतिमाराम निर्जितःस्त्वसा मया । जहिता उच्छ्रमुख्येन मभूत्कालस्य पयः ॥ (Bala 76-16) when that Karunamoorthy Rama who had bent the Vaishnavachaapa (Vishnu’s bow) handed to Him, asked for a target for the arrow mounted on it; and at that request of Parasurama aimed it at his—Parasurama’s—good deeds, that had proved to be a nigala or chain arresting progress. Note the reference to Parasurama as ‘asahanamuni’—the intolerant sage—an apparent contradiction in terms; but that correctly describes Parasurama. The compound word dharma-nigalam, chain or trammel in the shape of good and righteous deeds, is also very significant.

The third instance is that of the crow who molested Sita Devi in Chitrakoota. Though he was Indra’s son he is referred to as Kaakaasura ककासुर for having acted like an asura (or demon) in the form of a crow. Unlike the Sea-King and Parasurama this crow was a great sinner, an aardraaparaadhi आर्द्रपराध (wet sinner). He had hurt Jaganmaata (Sita Devi) and inflicted wounds on her sacred body. Rama as soon as he saw what that crow had done, took a grass, consecrated it with Brahmaastra, and aimed it at the crow. The crow took to its heels, or rather began to fly, in a vain attempt at escaping that missile aimed at him. Somehow it felt that it can save itself by falling at Rama’s feet. And after having gone round all the worlds it came and fell at His feet praying for protection: त्रीन् लोकान् संहरकम्य तमेव शरण गतः. What happened then is beautifully described by Sita Devi herself who was a witness to this scene:

स तं निपतितं भूमौ शरण्यः शरणागतम् ।

वधार्हमपि काकूत्स्थः कृपया पर्यपालयत् ॥

(Sundarakanda 37-Sloka 34.)

This is the essence of Rama’s protective grace. Though the crow eminently deserved destruction, Rama protected him—Jayanta in the form of a crow. But the astra (arrow) cannot go in vain. One of the two eyes of the crow was destroyed so that it may do only half of the mischief it is prone to do with both eyes intact. Is this punishment or protection? 'Kripayaa paryapaalayata'—Rama protected with the help of Kripa or grace. That is why this sloka employs the word Kripa. The Ramayana sloka can be seen to run in the poet's mind.

All these apparently irreconcilable acts are attributed to Daya Devi's sportful ways. She takes a delight in reversing the Lord's decision to punish. Punishment strictly so called may be all right in cases of persons whose motto is 'I can never bend my head in obeisance to any one' न नमोऽस्तु वरुणचित्. But in cases of persons like those referred to here where the aparradhin (sinner) has repented and said Namaste and/or jitam-te (I am conquered) by you, the punishing mood in a merciful person will change into a benevolent and rewarding mood. To the extent that the Lord's desire to punish is thwarted, to that extent He is said to be one unable to hold His own. Vileena-swatantrayaha—'बलीनस्वातन्त्र्यः'—Bereft of Independence.

Disati-evam-janita-sugatim, dandana-gatim. Thus the Lord confers punishment which is productive of good results.

Dandana-vidhim is an alternative rendering. It means the order to punish.

Pausing here for a moment one can see the several graded ways in which Karma and Karma-phala are done away with by Daya, as described in slokas 61 to 64. In sloka 61 it was total annihilation of Karma. In 62 the parapanna's fear of future sins creeping in was adverted to by referring to the rule of the Raja kumara who is certain that he will receive punishment in some form for his errors of commission and omission. In the next sloka Daya is said to make the Lord forget, or rather fail to note, our sins and transgressions. In this sixty-fourth sloka even when the Lord determines to punish, Daya Devi transforms and converts that determination and that punishment into a benevolent and rewarding determination, calculated (of course only in proper cases) for the benefit of the sinner.

Working in such revolutionary ways, and adopting highly drastic measures. Daya protects those that rely on her for help and protection.

निषादानां नेता कपिकुलपतिः कापि शबरी

कुचेलः कुब्जा सा व्रजयुवनयो माल्यकृदिति ।

अमीषां निम्नत्वं वृषगिरिपतेरुन्नतिमपि

प्रभूतैः स्रोतोभिः प्रसभमनुकम्पे समयसि ॥ (६५)

Nishaadanaam netaa kapikulapathihi kaapi sabaree

Kuchelah kubjaa saa vrajayuvatayo maalyakriditi

Ameeshaam nimnatvam vrishagiripaterunnatimapi

Prabhuthaissrothobhihi prasabham anukampe! samayasi (65)

Anukampe! You forcefully reduce to the same level the lowness of (1) the chief among hunters (Guha) (2) the King of the race of monkeys (Sugreeva), (3) some nameless hunter-woman (Sabari) (4) Kuchela (the proverbially poor person), (5) that famous Kubja (a bent woman with a hunchback), (6) the young damsels of Gokula and (7) a maker of garlands, and the high-ness of the Lord of Vrishagiri, by the immensity of your flow (flood).

One of the noblest attributes of the Lord is Sauseelya. It is defined as Mahato-mandaissaha-neerandhra-samsleshm महतो-मन्दैस्सह नीरन्ध्रसंश्लेष or the intimate and free mixing of the inordinately great ones with the very low ones. This trait is specially known as "Guna." Though all good and auspicious attributes are gunaas strictly so called, this particular trait is specially indicated when one talks of 'guna' simpliciter. c.f. Gunavaan गुणवान्, the first of the sixteen traits which Valmiki mentions to Narada in the opening sarga of the Ramayana. Also the same word 'gunavaan' used by Alavandar in his Stotra-Ratna as one among the 12 gunas specified by him in the sloka beginning. 'Vasee Vadanyo.....' This Seela शील in the Lord is what is most helpful to His devotees. This sloka very nicely points out that it is Daya Devi that is responsible for the presence of this much-sought-after and much-praised guna in the Lord. Seven instances—all of them famous—three of them from the Ramayana, and four from the Bhagavata are referred to as indicative of lowness. Guha, the hunter-chief is the first among them. About him Rama has said that he is His 'Atma-Samassakha' आत्मसमस्सखा, a friend as dear to me as my own life. Next comes Sugreeva, the King of the monkeys. Rama's friendship with him was of such intensity that on one occasion Rama exclaimed. "Of what use

The Gopis are referred to next as the young damsels of Vraja (Gokula). They are noted for their lack of urbanity and for their utter ignorance. They themselves describe their rustic and unsophisticated nature when they sing

कथं पुनर्नः प्रतियायतेऽबला ग्राम्याः सलज्जासित भ्रमैर्भ्रमन् ।

(Bhagavatha 10—39—24).

Andal has celebrated their ignorance by singing about their race as அறிவு ஒன்றும் இல்லா ஆய்க்குலம், the race of Gopis which has not an iota of knowledge. What Krishna was to them is too well known to be dilated upon here. Maalyakrit,—the maker of garlands. Krishna with his brother Balarama went to this persons's house and he rushed forward to greet them with the exclamation

प्रसाद परमौनाथौ मम गेहमुपागतौ ।

धन्योऽहं अर्चयिष्यामि ॥

Vedanta Desika sees with his devoted and poetical eye the mingling of the great Lord with these seven types of persons. At once he reminds himself of the unimaginable eminence उन्नति of the Lord. And he gasps with wonder at the work of Daya Devi that has effectively wiped out the difference between His eminence and their depths (each in a particular direction, and reduced them all to the same level. Nothing but Daya's terrific flow can achieve this result of bringing down mountains and filling up valleys. And he sings to that effect by saying that by her prabhootha (immense) srotas, (flow or flood) she levels up forcibly, violently प्राभंसमयसि. But for Daya and her capacity, the Lord will ever have been beyond the reach of mortals, and the mortals could never dream of contacting Him at all, much less intimately; and the twain would never have met.

स्वया दृष्टानुष्टिं भजति पामेष्ठी निजपदे

वहन्मूर्तीरष्टौ विहरति मृडानीपरिबृढः ।

बिभर्ति स्वाराज्यं वृषशिखरिशृङ्गारि करुणे

शुनासीरो देवासुरसमरनासीरसुभटः ॥

(६६)

Tvaya Drishtastushtim Bhajati Parameshtheenijapade vahanmoortheerashtau viharati mrudaneeparibrudhaha ।

Bibharthi swaarajyam vrishasikharishringari karune

Sunaseeuro Devasurasamaranaaseerasubhataha ॥

(66)

O! Karuna of the Ornament of the Vrishagiri crest! By being he recipient of your glances (drishti) the four-faced Brahma rejoices in (the enjoyment of) his position. Similarly, seen by you, he Consort of Parvati sports by taking the eightfold forms. Indra too, because he is seen by you, gets renown as a front rank warrior in the battle between the Devas and the Asuras, and rules over his kingdom.

In the fifth decad reference was made to Brahma, Siva, and other gods in several places—vide Slokas 41, 42 and 50. In sloka 50 especially it was said that they were all really tied down to their posts. Sloka 53 gave us the idea that what status they possess has really been conferred on them by Daya Devi according to their deserts. Here it is stated plainly that their enjoyment in their respective positions or posts is really a boon conferred on them by Daya Devi. It is attributed to her drishti दृष्टि or looks. Not only moksha, the ultimate beatitude,—but all enjoyments of a pleasurable and desirable nature are Daya's gifts.

First comes Brahma who is referred to as a Parameshti—a superior or supreme person. This name occurs as one of the names of the Lord Himself in the Sri Vishnu Sahasranama). By Daya's drishti दृष्टि he is said to obtain tushti तुष्टि (happiness) in his position as Brahma the Creator, the constant reciter of the Vedas, and so on.

If Brahma enjoys happiness, Paramasiva is said to revel in sport. Not content with the enjoyment pertaining to one form or moorti, मूर्ति, he takes eight different forms or moortis, and imbibes sportive pleasures through the several of them. The eight forms he is said to take are the five elements (earth, water, fire, air, and akaasa or ether), the sun, the moon, and hotri, हीत्री, the sacrificer. Siva was referred to as the Tarunendu-vibhooshana, तरुणेन्दुविभूषण in sloka 53, one who is adorned by the young (crescent) moon. Here he is referred to as mridaanee-paribridhaha मृडानीपरिबृढः. Mridaha मृडः is an epithet of Siva, Mridaa मृडा and Mridaanee मृडानी of Parvathi—mridaanee-paribridhaha is again Siva, the Consort of Parvati. Thus Siva is referred to with reference to Parvati and Parvati with reference to Siva. The Ardhanari concept is indicated here by the employment of the term mridaanee-paribridhaha to denote Paramasiva.

Indra, the King of Devaloka is next referred to. The term त्वया दृष्टः tvaya drishtaha governs all the three words used here to indicate Brahma, Siva and Indra respectively. Sunaseeraha सुनासीरः is an epithet of Indra. He is said to obtain by Daya-Kataaksha not only the ability to rule over his kingdom (Svaaraajyam) स्वाराज्यं but also to be in the vanguard of the frequent battles between the Devas and the Asuras.

Lord Srinivasa is referred to in this sloka as Vrishasikhari-sringaari वृषशिखरि शृङ्गारि He who adorns the crest or peak of Vrishagiri. His Karuna is therefore addressed as Vrishasikhari Sringaari Karune! It may also be taken to mean the Karuna of the beautiful Lord of Vrishagiri.

दये दुग्धोदम्बद्वयतियुतसुधासिन्धुनयत-

स्वदाश्लेषान्नित्यं जनितमृतसंजीवनदशाः ।

स्वदन्ते दान्तेभ्यः श्रुतिवदनकर्पूरगुलिका

विषुवन्तश्चित्तं वृषशिखरिविश्वभरगुणाः ॥ (६७)

Daye dugdhodanvad-vyatiyuta sudhaasindhunayataha tvadaasleshaan-nityam janitamrita sanjeevana dasaaha । Svadante daantebhyaha Srutivadanakarpooragulikaa vishunvantas-chittam Vrishasikharivisvambharagunaaha " (67).

Daya Devi! Because of your intimate and close contact, with the (other) attributes (gunas) of that great Protector of this world residing in Vrishaa-chala, like the mixing of the ocean of milk and the ocean of nectar, those gunas are being (tastefully) enjoyed by those who have conquered the senses (and set their hearts on the Lord), as having the capacity to bring to life even dead persons, as a ball of camphor giving fragrance to the mouth of Dame Sruti, and as calculated to squeeze, out of ecstasy, the minds of devotees contemplating on them.

Brahma, Rudra and Indra were said by the previous sloka to be the recipients of Daya's favour. Now it is pointed out that even the Lord's own gunas got exalted by an association with her. Without Daya all the other great qualities of the Lord were pointed out to be faults or blemishes (doshas). That was in sloka 15 ante. The grandeur and glory of those very attributes when they are embraced by Daya (i.e., intimately associated with Daya) are enjoyed in this sloka. It has been pointed out in the foregoing slokas of this decad that Daya has got that great capacity of destroying anishta अनिष्ट; so the other qualities when harnessed to Daya lose their propensity to confer anishta on sinners, and acquire when acting in concert with her great name and fame. It has been said that they furnish rich flavour and taste. Svadante स्वदन्ते To whom? Not to us who give free scope for the senses to work havoc with our spiritual progress. Only to the दान्तेभ्यः (Dantebhyaha) those who have controlled their senses and have purified their hearts, as pointed out in the first paada (quarter) of sloka 62, by banishing desire for worldly pleasures. How do they regard Daya, and how does Daya appeal to them? A fourfold answer is furnished by this sloka to that question.

By intimate contact with Daya, the other qualities get mingled with that greatest and noblest of traits, like the blending of the milk ocean with the nectar ocean. From the milk ocean—when it was churned—poison came out, it is said. So milk ocean can yield not only very good things like elephants, horses, moon and kalpaka tree, but also poison. The other qualities of the Lord are like that, capable of functioning for good as well as for bad. Daya is the ocean of nectar and nothing but good—nay the very best—will be found there.

The second feature dealt with here is really a corollary of the first. Janita-mrita-sanjeevana dasaaha जनितमृतसंजीवनदशाः—Enlivening dead persons. Being amṛta अमृत or nectar, no wonder death is banished and even the dead begin to live (vide Sloka: 12 and 22)

The third relates to the rasa रस that the Srutis find in those gunas of the Lord. The Vedas are referred to as a Damsel who uses fragrant camphor-globules to give sweetness and flavour to her mouth. It has always been the fashion for ladies of status for sweetening their breath to use small pills like Kasturi-pills or Pachai-kkarpoora (camphor) pills. The great and famous Veda-maata वेदमाता uses these attributes, gunas, of the Lord as such gulikas गुलिकाः (small balls or pills) and thereby her noble mouth exhudes fragrance. Obviously the reference is to the fact that the Srutis extol the great gunas of the Lord and that is the reason for their far-flung greatness and glory. Elsewhere Desika has referred to his own speech or work as sprihaneeya-saurabha-mucha-vaacha स्पृहणीय सौरभमुच्चा वाचा. The excellence of the Vedas lies in their extolling the gunas of the Lord, and not in taking great pains to deny that the Lord has any gunaas at all. Vadana वदन means face and also mouth. Mouth stands not only for taste but also for speech. The sweetness and fragrance of the Vedas are entirely due to their revelling in the attributes of the Lord which alone glorify Him and make Him worthy of attainment. Desika does not belong to that system of thought which negates gunaas or attributes to the ultimate God-head. He is a God only because He is good; and all His goodness and good qualities depend upon the presence of Daya.

To those who contemplate on these features or gunas of the Lord, their mind gets ecstatic, and melt away in the excess of that ecstasy. That is referred to as the fourth and the last aspect that appeals to the scense-conquering persons (Dhantebhyaha). The Alvars and the Vaishnavite Acharyas have really got into raptures and rhapsodies when they think of the Lord's auspicious attributes—Kalyanagunas. Nammalwar the chief among them very often gets into a trance when he contemplates the Kalyana-gunas of the Lord. வல்வினையேனை ஈர்கின்ற குணங்கள் (gunas that simply captivate poor me) is how he speaks about them.

In this fourfold manner it is said in this sloka that the gunas of the Lord when closely associated with Daya are very sweet to contemplate,—svadante स्वदन्ते. They are eternally so—nityam svadante नित्यं स्वदन्ते.

This is one of the several slokas in this Stotra which deal with the parama-tatparya परमतात्पर्यं (chief meaning) conveyed by it, namely that Daya is the Empress among the Lord's several gunas. Guneswari गुणेश्वरी (sloka 101 post).

जगज्जन्मस्थेमप्रलयरचनाकेलिरसिको

विमुक्त्यैकद्वारं विघटितकवाटं प्रणयिनाम् ।

इति त्वय्यायत्तं द्वितयमुपधीकृत्य करुणे

विशुद्धानां वाचां वृषशिखरिनाथः स्तुतिपदम् ॥ (६८)

Jagajjanmasthema pralaya rachanaakelirasiko

Vimuktyekadvaaram vighatitakavaatam pranayinaam ।

Iti tvayyaayattam dvitayam upadheekritya Karune !

Visuddhaanaam vaachaam Vrishasikharinaathas-stutipadam ॥ (68)

Karuna Devi! The Lord of Vrishagiri is extolled (attains the state of being praised) by the very pure words (the Vedas) chiefly for two factors. One is that He derives pleasure (rasa) in the (eternal) sport of creating this world, keeping it safe, and bringing about its laya or destruction. The other is that to His lovers (devotees) He is Himself the open door and only entrance to Mukti. Both these are His, because of your bringing them about. (Thus the tributes that the Vedas pay to the Lord are really tributes paid to you).

One more sloka in this stotra where Daya is put above the Lord Himself. This sloka hints at—without saying so in so many words—the Lord shining in borrowed feathers.

If slokas 61 to 65 dealt with the banishment of anishta अनिष्ट to us, sloka 66 refers to the great ones like Brahma, Rudra and Indra, having their anishta dispelled and being able to enjoy position, pleasure and power, by Daya's kindness; sloka 67 refers to the high status attained by the Lord's gunas themselves by association with Daya. This sloka goes one step further and postulates that the Lord Himself owes His greatness to Daya Devi. No one can praise the high Lord as the Vedas have done. They extol Him in several places and in several ways; but on close scrutiny the Lord will be seen to be praised for His जगद्व्यापार Jagad-vyaapaara (cosmic evolution and involution) firstly, and secondly for His redemptive power, i.e., releasing deserving souls from the bondage of being involved in that cosmic process for ever. Enough has been said in the earlier slokas calculated to demonstrate that Creation (sloka 17), sustenance (sloka 18) and even destruction (sloka 16) are all the work of Daya. So too is Moksha (sloka 20). In the fifth decad especially, it was demonstrated how Daya is the giver of Sreyas meaning mukti. So in this sloka it is stated that the Lord becomes the object of praise to the Srutis (Vedas) only because of the two-fold eminence attained by Him because of what Daya does.

The first line of this sloka is reminiscent of two earlier classical works, one in Tamil, and one in Sanskrit. Kamban starts his Ramayana with the verse which talks of உலகம் யாவையும் தாம் உள ஆக்கலும், நிலை பெறுத்தலும், நீக்கலும் நீங்கலா அலகிலா விளையாட்டு,

The great Ramanuja starts his Sri Bhashya with “Akila-bhuvana-janma-sthema-bhangaadi-leele”

“अखिल भुवन जन्म स्थेम भङ्गादि लीले”

The first line of this sloka of Desika translates the former and paraphrases the latter of those two great sayings. The jagat-kaara-natva spoken about in all these is a Brahmakalpana ब्रह्मलक्षण or distinctive mark of Parabrahma परब्रह्म as shown by the second of the Brahma Sutras of Vyasa. So if that Jagatkaaranatva जगत्कारणत्व is made much of by the Vedas and the sutras, the credit really goes to Daya Devi who has been demonstrated to be chiefly responsible for all the factors that go to make that kaaranatva.

The words Keli केलि and Rasikaha रसिकः have been used to indicate that what the Lord does is not as a duty or under compulsion. It is all a keli, a sport. And the Lord takes great pleasure in indulging in this sport. Prompted by Daya and egged on by His own love of sport (lcela) the Lord takes to creation etc.,—is the idea so nicely conveyed by the use of the two words Keli and Rasikaha.

The second paada of the sloka embellishes, and restates the sentiment mentioned in, the second paada of the sloka of Sri Bhashya referred to above. There the words are “ Vinata-vividha-bhoota-vraata-rakshaika dakshe ” विनतविविध भूतदुरातरक्षैकदीक्षे The form of the Rakshana or protection referred to there is indicated in this sloka by the word Vimukhti विमुक्ति. For vinata विनत, the word pranayi प्रणयि is substituted. The Lord never likes to think of prapannas as saranaagataas. He thinks of them as friends and lovers; not only He but Lakshmi too. For if He refers to Vibheeshana who had come to Him as a saranaagata, as one who had rightly and properly come to Him as a friend, mitra-bhaavena sampraaptam मित्रभावेन संप्राप्तं, Sita Devi desires to make Ravana Himself a friend; for does she not tell him मित्रमौपयिकं कर्तुं रामः and तेन मैत्री भवतु ते? Desika goes one step further and refers to the Prapanna as a pranayi प्रणयि—lover.

To such lovers the Lord is an open door to Moksha. The Siddhopayatva of the Lord is beautifully brought out here. The upanishadic text which says ‘ To him on whom His choice falls, He gives Himself up, and by him alone He is attained ’ is thought of here. He alone is the open door to Moksha; those who love Him are given free entrance at the door. Eka-dvaaram or only entrance is very significant. Whether one pursues the arduous path of Bhaktiyoga, or the equally difficult, but apparently more easy, path of Prapatti, the phala (fruit) viz., Moksha is a gift of the Lord. It is not earned by one’s own endeavour. All that man can do, and does, only earns for him the Prasaada प्रसाद or bounty of the Lord, and that Prasada takes the form of Sankalpa, or will, which alone confers Moksha.

Both the jagat-kaaranatva and the moksha-pradatva are peculiar and exclusive provinces of Lord Srinivasa. No god even shares either of them with the Lord, leave alone and wholly possessing the capacity for them. The Vedas praise the Lord very often with reference to these two qualities of Him. He is a stutipada—object of praise to the Vedas, which are referred to as Visuddhaanaam vaachaam—pure-worded. We do not talk out of ignorance or partiality. Their purity is supreme.

The above-mentioned two reasons for the Veda's praise are pointed out to be tvayyaayattam त्वय्यायत्तम् brought about by referring to Daya. Dvitayam द्वितयं the two of these.

कलिक्षोभोन्मीलक्षितिकलुषकूलंकषजवै-

रनुच्छेदैरैतैरवतटवैषम्यरहितैः ।

प्रवाहैस्ते पद्मासहचरपरिष्कारिणि कृपे

विकल्पन्तेऽनल्पा वृषशिखरिणो निर्झरगणाः ॥ (६९)

Kalikshobhonmeelat-kshitikalusha koolankasha javaihi anuchchedair-etair-avatatatavaishamyarahitaihi ।

Pravaahaiste Padmaasahacharaparishkaarini Kripe!

Vikalpante analpaa Vrishasikharino nirjharaganaaha ॥ (69)

Daya Devi (who is) an ornament to the Consort of Lakshmi. The entire group of these streams and waterfalls that are in the Tirumala Hill are comparable with your flow and because (1) They are also swift enough to (uproot) destroy the (of human beings) that are ever on the increase because of the agitation and perturbation brought about by the Kali age (2) they are incessant and never ceasing (3) they are also immense and (4) they are also capable of flowing without maintaining any distinction high and low.

Starting from the very first sloka which refers to the flow of Daya like sugar-cane juice, the slokas which deal with the flow of Daya are very numerous. Slokas 60, 61 and 65 recapitulated that sentiment very pointedly. And here in sloka 69 the flow of Daya is equated with the flow of the streams, falls, and cascades, in which Tirumala Hill abounds. Already in sloka 31 it was stated that the vaari-dhaaraas of Vrishagiri claim Daya's flow. That idea is elaborated here by pointing

The fastness of the current in each case is first enjoyed. (जवैः) Each is so fast that it is capable of uprooting Kalusha (dirt; uncleanness) which is ever on the increase (unmeelat) owing to the play of Kali—the evil age. Kshiti means the earth. All the sins of the earth even as they begin to appear are washed away by the swift and powerful current of Daya. So too the streams flowing on the Hill wash away all the dirt as quickly as it gathers.

Koolankashaha; tearing away the bank. Both the streams are incessant, perennial, without break अनुच्छेदैः

And neither of them makes any difference between high and low. Daya levels up beings as pointed out in sloka 65. The Hill streams also bring down mountain crests and fill up low-lying tracts. They thus do not distinguish between low and high (अवट and तट) Avata is a pit, a cavity; tata is a mound, raised or at least level ground.

Both again are अनल्पाः by no means small or insignificant—meaning obviously very big and large. निर्झर Nirjhara is a mountain-torrent or waterfall. गणाः Ganaaha is groups. Some adopt the rendering gunaaha गुणाः meaning nature, characteristics. But ganaaha is the preferable paata for the sentiments voiced in the sloka.

Daya is addressed in this sloka as Padmaa-sahachara-parishkaarini. Parishkara means embellishing, adorning, acting as an ornament to. Here Daya Devi is said to embellish and adorn Padmaa-sahachara, or the Consort of Padma—(Lakshmi). Saha-chara is one who goes with or accompanies another. Here the Lord is referred to as Padma-sahachara, and Daya is adorning such a One. Lord and Sri are mutual ornaments to each other. Daya is an ornament to the Two of them.

In sloka 66, the Lord was spoken of as an ornament to Vrishagiri. Here Daya is talked of as an ornament to Sree-nivasa (the Eternal Couple—Divya Dampatee).

Vikalpa is an alternative. Vikalpante means therefore “are said to be an equally effective and efficacious alternative.” Reliance on Daya or a bath in the purifying streams of Tirumala Hill,—either is as efficacious as the other in relieving us of our sins.

The opening words of this sloka may be seen to emphasise the anishtavidhvamsaseelatva अनिष्टविध्वंशीलत्व of the Lord as well

Daya, which is the topic dealt with by Desika in this dec
s Stotra.

खिलं चेतोवृत्तेः किमिदमिति विस्मेरभुवनं

कृपे सिंहक्षमाभृत्कृतमुखचमत्कारकरणम् ।

भरन्यासच्छन्नप्रबलवृजिनप्राभृताभृतां

प्रतिप्रस्थानं ते श्रुतिनगरशृङ्गाटऋजुषः ॥

(७०)

m chetovritteh-kimidamiti vismerabhuvanam

Kripe! Simhakshmaabhrit-kritamukhachamatkaarakaranam ।

anyaasachchannaprabala vrijina praabhrita bhritaam

ratiprasthaanam te Srutinagarasringatakajushaha ॥ (70)

Kripa Devi! Your coming forward and welcoming, at -roads of the great city known as the Vedas, persons who br ferings to you their innumerable and mighty sins covered b called Saranagati, makes the entire world surprised at wha world) regards as an act brought about by a faulty intellect, :
s admiration even to that learned Vidwan who resides in aachala (another name for Tirumala).

The reactions of the men of the world and the reactions Srinivasa Himself to the great doings of Daya Devi that h enjoyed in detail in this decad are dealt with in this clos t of the decad. The poet shows that he is not unaware of al adverse criticisms of persons belonging to different scho thought, about the nature and efficacy of prapatti. Pec not wanting even to day, and even among Vaishnavaites, v i-pooch the system of prapatti, to establish which Desika
: so much in this stotra and elsewhere. Even most arc pious devotees find it difficult in their hearts to realise that e of Srinivasa is so potent that their untold sins commi revious births can be wiped out by that Grace, in ans ie observance of prapatti or Saranagati by an individual. T k more of their sins than of the qualities of the Lord. In sev es in the course of his numerous works Desika has taken g s to point out that if only people properly understood ntial nature of the Lord and of His Daya, they will never co oubt the efficacy of prapatti as a means to all ends, and certa means to that great and noble end, namely, Mukti, which t-thinking men and women must hanker for. It is because aaviswasa महाविश्वास or undying faith in the potency of Prap ... Prapatti has been referred to as maund of oil as compared to Bhaktiyoga which is a maund of gingelly.

The cheap gibe indulged in by critics is very beautifully described in the words किमिदं चेतोवृत्तेः खिलं? on the part of Daya.

The words भरन्यासच्छन्न.....प्राभृतभृतां are calculated to recollect to us the carrying of bhog or naivedya to the Gods in temples which are taken from the Paakasala (cooking place) to the presence of the Deity covered over by a cloth. Praabharta प्राभृत means a present or a gift, and is frequently used to denote an offering made to a deity or to a king. Here the naivedya or offering is nothing but sins—not mere sins, but prabala vrigina प्रबलवृजिन—mighty sins. They are covered over by a cloth known as Bharanyaasa or Saranaagati.

छन्न Chchanna means covered, concealed. That the analogy is very apt and appropriate can be seen if one reminds oneself of the 29th sloka in which the poet has spoken about Daya Devi's state of starvation for want of sufficient number of sins to appease her hunger. It was indicated in that sloka that the sins of the upaasakaas are, so to say, food to Daya Devi. The same analogy is employed here wherein the poet refers to the sins as being taken as offerings to Daya. (When we come to sloka 97 we will find the poet referring to this analogy once again). Just as a starving person who is told that numerous tasty victuals are being brought to him, will jump up from his place and rush up to meet the person who brings all that food, Daya Devi is here said to go ahead to receive and welcome those persons who bring to her that much-desired food, namely, sins. If this issuing out of Daya Devi and her welcoming are done secretly, there will be no opportunity for others to know about it or to cavil at it. As it is, she comes to where four cross roads meet. It is impossible to think of a place more open to the public than such a spot. The appropriateness of the poet's reference to a Sringaataka शृङ्गाटक—a place where four roads meet—must be appreciated by every rasika. The paths followed by the four classes of upaasakaas referred to by the Lord in the Geeta as आर्तः, जिज्ञासु, अर्थार्थी, ज्ञानि Aartha, Jignaasu, Arthaarthee and Gnaani are the four roads of the city of the Srutis which meet at this place, and Daya is said to present herself there. Desika has purposely called this a meeting of cross-roads in the city of Sruti, श्रुतिनगर. In this city of the Vedas there are people who have evolved several doctrines and theories. Before their very

श्रीमते निगमान्तमहादेशिकाय नमः

श्री श्रीनिवास परब्रह्मणे नमः

॥ दयाशतकम् ॥

DAYAA SATAKAM

EIGHTH DECAD.

AFTER having sung about the glory of Daya in the previous seven decads, and shown to us how essential it is that we resort to Daya for helping us and saving us, Sri Vedanta Desika for the first time attempts to set out what it is that he has been praising all along. Daya is defined, and her true nature is set out only in this decad. The opening sloka of this eighth decad points out that Daya is Lord's Ichcha or desire. In the very next sloka it is stated that Daya has also got a form, and thereby it is shown that the poet has every justification to personify this quality or attribute, and sing a whole stotra in her praise. The swarooma (essential nature) and the Roopa (form) of Daya are so dealt with that the central theme of Nammalwar's eighth patthu of Tiruvaimozhi almost seems to follow as corollary. That topic is Bhakta-chchandaanuvarti (भक्तच्छन्दानुवर्ति) which means following the bent of mind or inclination of the devotee.

Harini (हरिणी) is the metre adopted for this decad. Both sikhharini (7th decad) and harini denote high class women. Sikhharini denotes an excellent (top-class) woman; harini is another name for chitrinee चित्रिणी which is as per Apte's definition the noun for a "woman endowed with various talents and excellences"; "one of the four divisions into which writers on erotic science class women." It is a matter for special study and research as to the reason why a particular metre is employed by great poets like Kalidasa and Vedanta Desika, and their ilk, for a particular topic. It is not a compliment to their genius or greatness to suggest that haphazardly they choose and adopt metres for their verses.

Kim-kurvaana-prabhoota-gunaantara-The kimkaratvam o service-rendering propensity of the other gunaas of the Lord is recapitulated to our minds once again. Those gunas are all prabhoota—mighty.

सा - त्वम् Saa-tvam—Such a you (Daya). This takes in all the excellences referred to above. Such a person as you—possessing all these essential qualities for protection have taken into your head to look at me (eekshana). For any one else it would have been a saahasa—a very rash act. But not so to you who possess all the above set out items of greatness. My protection is therefore assured.

वृषगिरिपतेर्हृद्या विश्वावनारसहायिनी

क्षपितनिखिलावद्या देवि क्षमादिनिषेविता ।

भुवनजननी पुंसां भोगापवर्गविधायिनी

वितमसि पदे व्यक्तिं नित्यां बिभर्षि दये स्वयम् ॥ (७२)

Vrishagiripater-hridayaa visvaavataara sahaayinee

kshapitanikhilaavadyaa Devi! kshamaadinishevitaai

Bhuvanajananeey pumsam bhogaapavargavidhaayinee

vitamasi pade vyaktim nityaam bibharshi Daye! svayam " (72)

Devi! Daya! you are very dear to the Lord of Vrishagiri; you assist the Lord in all His avataaras; you dispel all sins and imperfections; you are served by kshama and others; you are the mother of the universe; you bestow on human beings pleasure and bliss; you by yourself take an eternal form (vigraha) of your own in Paramapada.

Having dwelt with the swaroopa of Daya in the the previous verse, the poet deals with her roopa or form in this. And this he does by showing to us in his inimitable way that Lakshmi is really Daya incarnate. Sleshaalankaara is handled with very great effect once again. Six points of identity are mentioned. We shall enjoy the beauties of the slesha in this sloka one by one.

1. Vrishagiripater-hridyaa:

Daya takes its origin from the heart of the Lord of Vrishagiri (hridya). The Lord is very fond of Daya and likes her better than all His other qualities.

DAYAA SATAKAM

Lakshmi is very dear to the heart of the Lord. In fact, He resides in His chest, the seat of the heart.

Visvaavataara sahaayinee:

Daya is of great service and aid in all the avatars that the Lord undertakes, assumes. This has been dealt with in sloka 81 already, and will be elaborated later in sloka 82.

Lakshmi follows the Lord in all His avataars, and is indispensable for the achievement of the purpose of each avatar. As the Vishnupurana has put it, if He comes as Rama she becomes Seeta; if He becomes Krishna, She becomes Rukmini, and so on in all avatars. This idea has been very nicely enjoyed by Dattatreya in Sloka No. 10 of Sri Stuti (where She is referred to as a chachari during avatars), and in the latter half of the 1st Dasavatara Stotra.

Kshapitanikhilaavadyaa

Daya is a dispeller of all sins, faults and imperfections in our lives. This idea has been enjoyed in extenso in several previous slokas.

Lakshmi's one great purpose is to drive away evil and suffering. 'வேரிமாருத பூமேல் இருப்பாள் வினைதீர்க்குமே' (Namma Vailankanni mazzalanā). She is mangalam mangalaanaam; and the good and wise people resort to Her for getting cleansed of their sins and avidya:

दूरीकर्तुं दुरितनिवहं त्यक्तमाद्यमविद्याम् । dooriekartum-duritanivaham-tyaktum-aadyam-avidyaam.

Kshamaadinishevita

Daya is subserved by qualities like forbearance. It was so early as the 7th sloka ante that Kshama or forbearance (பாறுமை) is of great help in removing the obstacles in the way of the free flow of Daya. Koorattalwan sings of "Dayaakshama daarya....." and thereby shows to us how shaanti or kshama and a host of other qualities really form the retinue of Daya.

Lakshmi being the Patta-Mahishi (பட்டமஹிஷி) or consort of the Lord, all other consorts like Bhoomidevi, Narayana etc., wait on Her as Her maids. Kshama is the name of the world (loomi (world)).

Kim-kurvaana-prabhoota-gunaantara-The kimkaratvam vice-rendering propensity of the other gunas of the Lord apitualated to our minds once again. Those gunas are : bhoota—mighty.

सा - त्वम् Saa-tvam—Such a you (Daya). This takes in all the essences referred to above. Such a person as you—possessing these essential qualities for protection have taken into you to look at me (eekshana). For any one else it would have been a saahasa—a very rash act. But not so to you who possess the above set out items of greatness. My protection is therefore secured.

वृषगिरिपतेर्हृद्या विश्वावनारसहायिनी

क्षपितनिखिलावद्या देवि क्षमादिनिषेविता ।

भुवनजननी पुंसां भोगापवर्गविधायिनी

वितमसि पदे व्यक्तिं नित्यां बिभर्षि दये स्वयम् ॥ (७२)

hagiripater-hridayaa visvaavataara sahaayinee

kshapitanikhilaavadyaa Devi! kshamaadinishevita

vanajananee pumsam bhogaapavargavidhaayinee

vitamasi pade vyaktim nityaam bibharshi Daye! svayam " (72)

Devi! Daya! you are very dear to the Lord of Vrishagiri; you are the Lord in all His avataaras; you dispel all sins and imperfections; you are served by kshama and others; you are the mother of the universe; you bestow on human beings pleasure and bliss; by yourself take an eternal form (vigraha) of your own in this mapada.

Having dwelt with the swaroopa of Daya in the the previous mapada, the poet deals with her roopa or form in this. And this is done by showing to us in his inimitable way that Lakshmi is Daya incarnate. Sleshaalankaara is handled with very great skill once again. Six points of identity are mentioned. We shall enjoy the beauties of the slesha in this sloka one by one.

vrishagiripater-hridyaa:

Daya takes its origin from the heart of the Lord of Vrishagiri (Vishnu). The Lord is very fond of Daya and likes her better than all His other qualities.

Lakshmi is very dear to the heart of the Lord. In fact she resides in His chest, the seat of the heart.

Visvaavataara sahaayinee:

Daya is of great service and aid in all the avatars that the Lord undertakes, assumes. This has been dealt with in Sloka 5 already, and will be elaborated later in sloka 82.

Lakshmi follows the Lord in all His avataars, and is in fact dispensable for the achievement of the purpose of each avataar. As the Vishnupurana has put it, if He comes as Rama she comes as Seeta; if He becomes Krishna, She becomes Rukmini, and so on in all avatars. This idea has been very nicely enjoyed by Desika in Sloka No. 10 of Sri Stuti (where She is referred to as a Priya bhachari during avatars), and in the latter half of the 1st sloka of Dasavatara Stotra.

Kshapitanikhilaavadyaa

Daya is a dispeller of all sins, faults and imperfections in her stories. This idea has been enjoyed in extenso in several preceding slokas.

Lakshmi's one great purpose is to drive away evil and sin. வேரிமாறுத பூமேல் இருப்பாள் வினைதீர்க்குமே' (Nammalwar) ஐங்குலம் மங்குலானாள். She is mangalam mangalaanaam; and the pure and wise people resort to Her for getting cleansed of their sins and avidya:

दूरीकर्ति दुरितनिवहं त्यक्तभावाविद्याम् । sooreekartum-duritanivaham-tyaktum-aadyam-avidyaam.

Kshamaadinishevi

Daya is subserved by qualities like forbearance. It was stated early as the 7th sloka ante that Kshama or forbearance (பொறுமை) is of great help in removing the obstacles in the way of the free flow of Daya. Koorattalwan sings of "Dayaakshanti-daarya....." and thereby shows to us how shaanti or kshama and a host of other qualities really form the retinue of Daya.

Lakshmi being the Patta-Mahishi (பட்டமஹிஷி) or Chief consort of the Lord, all other consorts like Bhoomidevi, Neela-devi etc., wait on Her as Her maids. Kshama is the name for hoomi (world).

5. Bhuvanajananee

Daya as the chief factor responsible for creation is rightly referred to as the mother of the universe.

Lakshmi is Samasta-jananee (sloka 6). If the Lord is the Father of the world, She is the Mother.

6. pumsam-bhogaapavargavidhaayinee

Daya's capacity to confer all the earthly pleasures and the bliss of moksha on her votaries and followers has been dealt with in great detail before. That is concisely recapitulated here by the expression pumsam-bhoga-apavarga-vidhaayinee, Conferrer of bhoga (earthly pleasures) and apavarga (mokshananda) to human beings. In fact in the very first sloka (10) about Daya in this stotra, it was said "sootim-apavarga-trivargayoho"

Lakshmi similarly is the conferrer of bhoga and apavarga. Lakshmi-kataaksha as every one knows brings wealth, happiness and comfort in its wake. And in the redemption of souls and giving them a place in Paramapada, She is along with the Lord as the sole authority and power. So She too is a bhoga-apavarga-vidhayinee. Alavandar has enjoyed this greatness of Sri or Lakshmi in his Chatussloki, and following him, Alwan, Bhattar, and Desika have elaborated it in their works.

The sloka winds up by stating that Daya manifests herself with a Vighraha (vyakti) or form of her own accord—Vyakti swayam bibharshi. This is a nice way of referring to Daya also as a Swayam vyakta, even like Lord Srinivasa (sloka 9).

The words vitamasi and pade, or, if they are to be taken together as a compound word, vitamasipade, appear rather unintelligible to us here. Vitamasipadam is Vaikunta—the place devoid of tamas (darkness and ignorance). To say that Daya manifests herself with a vighraha or form only in Vaikunta could not have been intended by the poet. Vitamasi-pade may be taken to mean in places or spots where there is no tamas. It is only in such places that Daya's form is felt and experienced as a fact. Elsewhere as to people who are blinded by tamas, she is not, and she will have no form either.

This sloka can be seen to be an elaboration of the 6th sloka in this stotra. This is the Dhyana-sloka for Daya Devi. Note the two vocatives in this sloka. Devi! and Daya! The sloka is pro-addressed to Lakshmi as well as to Daya. The inter-changeableness is indicated by the trick of using two vocatives.

स्वयमुदयिनः सिद्धाद्याविष्कृताश्च शुभालया

विविधविभवव्यूहावासाः परं च पदं विभोः ।

वृषगिरिमुखेष्वेतेष्विच्छावधिप्रतिलब्धये

दृढविनिहिता निश्चेणस्त्वं दये निजसर्वभिः ॥ (७३)

*am udayinas-siddhaayaavishkritaascha subhaalayaa vividha vibhavavyooahaavaasaaha param cha padam vibhoho !
vragirimukheshveteshvichchaavadhipratilabdhave dridhavinihitaa nissrenistvam Daye! nijaparvabhihi* (73)

Daya Devi! For people to attain in full their heart's desires, spots (or places) of which Vrishagiri is foremost, such as (1) auspicious temples (where the Lord manifests himself in Archa form) including Swayam Vyakta sthalas and sthalas discovered by siddhas
(2) the varied and various vibhavavataara forms (3) vyuha s (4) haarda or antaryami forms and (5) even that transcendent mapada, where-all the Lord resides, you stand like a strong sturdy ladder, having several rungs and levels of your own for help and aid.

In this sloka Desika has mentioned the Pancha-roopas the five forms that the Lord assumes as postulated by the Pancharas and enjoyed by the Alvars. He has given the pride of place amongst them all to the Moorthy or form of Lord Srinivasa. Note Vrishagiri-mukheshu-etheshu. वृषगिरिमुखेष्वेतेषु These headed by Vrishagiri or Tirumala. It is usual with several devotees of Lord Srinivasa to rank Tirumala as the first and foremost among all places. But here we see Desika definitely ranking this Divya sthalas as the first and foremost among all the fivefold spots where the Lord manifests Himself in His five forms.

(1) He starts with the Subhaalayaas, auspicious temples, where the Lord resides in His archa form. These temples are classified as Swayamvyaktha, Saiddha, Daiva, Arsha, and Maanusha. In the first of them the manifestation is made on His own initiative, while in the Saiddha, Daiva and Arsha are spots where He has disclosed Himself in answer to a prayer or request from a Siddha, Deva or Rishi respectively. Maanusha refers to spots consecrated by man by inviting the Lord according to the Agamas to come and dwell in a particular vigraha chosen by him. The use of the word 'aadi' after the word Siddha is intended to take in the other classifications. Siddhadi—Siddha etc.

Next are clubbed the Vibhava, Vyuha and Haarda forms. The word Vivida meaning several, diverse, precedes them all. The various Vibhava forms, Vyuha forms and aavaasa forms. Vibhava roopa is the form taken on by the Lord when He came into the world as Rama, Krishna etc. This manifestation is enjoyed in extenso in the next and ninth decad of this stotra.

Vyuha forms are mainly fourfold—Vasudeva, Sankarshana Pradyumna and Aniruddha forms. Vyuha also takes in their elaborations into the twelve forms of Kesava, Narayana, Madhava etc.—Dwadasa nama forms. They are all adopted by the Lord for the edification of those devotees who like to revel in Dhyana or unruffled contemplation of the Lord.

Aavasa आवास is the word that follows next. This word literally means a house, a habitation, an abode. In this context, this word must be taken to indicate the residence in the human heart in the form of an antaryami. As the four other forms are mentioned by name, and as this word is a general word capable of giving this particular meaning also, we must understand it as a reference to the antaryami form. It has been taken by some commentators as being qualified by the two words preceding it viz., Vibhava and Vyuha. It is better to interpret it as the abode in the heart.

Paramapada comes last in the enumeration and it has a च attached to it. परं च पदं Even that transcendental spot.

The Etheshu एतेषु meaning all these is governed by Vrishagiri mukheshu. These headed by, or led by, Vrishagiri. That is the importance and glory that Desika sees in Tirumala.

It is in these several spots that the upaasaka or aspirant has to obtain his heart's desire (Ichchavadhi) and Daya helps him to seek out those several spots, or such of them as are desired. And with that end in view she stands like a ladder or staircase (निश्चेणि) in front of the aspirant. A ladder has got joints or rungs. A staircase has steps. पर्व refers to a joint or step. By her steps or stages, Daya helps the aspirants at all levels. The ni is dridha-vinihita—stoutly and strongly tied together. All steps are so tightly strung together that it does not matter 1 step or rung one is on. It is a single ladder. Dhrida-ita may also be taken to mean safely and securely placed. ladder will not slip while one is using it, and there is no fear for a crash.

A ladder or a staircase is as useful for ascending as for descending. Desika has very naively described Daya as a ladder so that it may be understood that Daya is the agency through which a man may ascend to God, and at the same time that God uses to descend into man. For, but for Daya how can man expect to rise aloft into the ethereal heights of spiritual enjoyments? But for Daya where is the chance of the Almighty descending to the level of man to console and comfort him and ultimately bless him? Like all Desika's upamaas or comparisons this also is appropriate and at the same time sweetness and sublimity.

हितमिति जः दृष्ट्वा क्लृप्तैरक्लृप्तफलान्तरै-

रमतिविहितैरन्यैर्धर्मायितैश्च यदृच्छया ।

परिणतबहुच्छद्मा पद्मासहायदये स्वयं

प्रदिशसि निजाभिप्रेतं नः प्रशास्यदपन्नपा ॥

(७४)

n iti jagadhrishtyaa kliptair-akliptaphalaantarair rmativihitair-anyair-dharmaayitaischa yadrchchayaa । atabahuchchhadmaa Padmaasahaaya Daye! swayam pradisasi nijaabhipretam naha prasaamyadapatrapaa ॥ (74)

Daya of Padmaasahaaya! By various devices and pretexts, wished,—you find some good in us under various heads such as (1) acts done which are recognised by the world as proper and meritorious acts (2) acts done without any idea about the fruits or rewards thereof (3) good acts done without any intention or desire to attain any good (4) casual and accidental good deeds committed by us (5) similar other acts of ours, and on the strength of such deeds bestow on us what in your opinion you think is fit and good for us.

The extent of our desire Ichhaavadhi was mentioned in the previous sloka as what determines the extent and content of our devotion. All the four Purusharthas or whichever out of them are desired by us, Daya procures the same to us. How does she and obtain that, but we do not take any steps to do the needful observing the proper upaaya or means. How can Daya get those benefits which we have not qualified ourselves for? The answer to that question is furnished by this sloka.

Daya is an adept at finding pretexts and inventing ways and means to confer benefits on us. If a person in power takes kindly to us, he says he has seen some good in us and rewards us for it. Whether we really did something good, or it may be that out of good feelings towards us, he has put a kindly interpretation on some unwitting act of ours. Daya is likened to such a person in this sloka.

After all she is the Daya of the Lord of this universe. He cannot afford to be capricious: He cannot and ought not to be so. He is also the law-giver and He has to enforce the laws promulgated by Himself. He has to reward the virtuous and punish the wicked. If we are virtuous it is all right; we easily get rewarded. If we are not virtuous; we are wicked by temperament and propensity. Yet we desire only benefits, and are afraid of getting punished. After ages and ages of indifference to the Lord and His laws, we have now come to realise that our safety and future salvation lie in Their hands alone. We unreservedly surrender our lives to Them. But before the Lord protects us, He will expect us to be satisfied that we have done some good deeds and therefore deserve sympathetic and kindly treatment. It is here Daya steps in, and very dexterously discovers some good in us. chhadma छद्म is a pretext, a guise, Parinata-bahu-chhadma is 'of various and diverse pretexts.' What are they? The text refers to four of them specifically and adds one generically.

Sukrita सुकृत is of several kinds. The first of them is Angika Sukrita प्रासंगिक सुकृत—good deeds which according to the world's standards are calculated for the welfare (hita) of the soul (e.g.) building temples, erecting tanks for public use etc. This is referred to here as Hitam-iti-jagad-drishhya-kliptaihi,—done at the world regards as calculated to promote the welfare of the doer.

The next is known as Anushangika sukrita—आनुषंगिक सुकृत—doing a good act with a particular purpose or for a particular result so happens that a secondary and unthought of good deed is also to be performed. You feed a hungry man: with the food you provide, he feeds his wife and child, whom you never thought of while giving the food to the man whose hunger you wanted to appease. This unthought of good is a by-product of an intended good. This is spoken of as aklipta-phalaantaraihi—अक्लृप्त फलान्तरैः unthought of other object.

The third is abuddhipoorvakasukrita—अबुद्धिपूर्वक सुकृत some good which simply occurs without one's knowledge or volition. While going to attend a conference in Benares a person happens to die on the banks of the Ganges. He would never have bargained for it. This is amati-vihitaihi अमतिविहितैः done without an idea or thought of one's own.

The next is yaadrichchika sukrita—यादृच्छिक सुकृत casual or accidental. You go pursuing your cow which has run away from your cowshed. It goes round a temple and in following it you perform a pradakshina of that temple. Or, while fishing in the sea you fall into it by accident on the sacred Mahodaya day. This is dharmaitihi-yadrchchayaa.

In addition to the above four, Desika has added anyaihi अन्यैः others as well. They may take in consciously done good acts—Saamaanya-buddhi-moola-Sukrita, which in some cases earn great merit. You invite a friend whom you have not seen for years and give him food and lodging for some days. He happens to be a Sadhu. You have really done a very meritorious thing by giving him food and shelter though you did so only in the view that he was an old time friend.

Daya Devi thus looks into all our acts and doings with a magnifying glass, and catching hold of some small unthinking act of ours, construes the same in one of the above modes, as a very lofty and meritorious act, and recommends to the Lord for our reprieve and redemption. Thereby she confers on us what she thinks is good for us. Nijaabhipretam—naha pradisasi—निजाभिप्रेतं नः प्रदिशसि you give what in your view is best for us. Or you give what in our opinion is desirable. Nija may be taken as referring to Daya or to us नः in the sloka.

In this Daya evidently shows herself rather निरपन्नपा shameless. Banishing bashfulness and shame she has to work like this to bring about our welfare. In sloka 71 it was Saahasa साहस. Here it is shamelessness on the part of Daya. To multiply our small good deeds, to magnify them and to show them off to our best advantage, and obtain that, but we do not take any steps to do the needful observing the proper upaaya or means. How can Daya get those benefits which we have not qualified ourselves for? The answer to that question is furnished by this sloka.

Daya is an adept at finding pretexts and inventing ways and means to confer benefits on us. If a person in power takes kindly to us, he says he has seen some good in us and rewards us for it. Whether we really did something good, or it may be that out of good feelings towards us, he has put a kindly interpretation on our unwitting act of ours. Daya is likened to such a person in the following sloka.

After all she is the Daya of the Lord of this universe. He cannot afford to be capricious: He cannot and ought not to be so. He is also the law-giver and He has to enforce the laws promulgated by Himself. He has to reward the virtuous and punish the wicked. If we are virtuous it is all right; we easily get rewarded. If we are not virtuous; we are wicked by temperament and propensity. Yet we desire only benefits, and are afraid of getting punished. After ages and ages of indifference to the Lord and His laws, we have now come to realise that our safety and future salvation lie in Their hands alone. We unreservedly surrender our lives to Them. But before the Lord protects us, He will require to be satisfied that we have done some good deeds and therefore deserve sympathetic and kindly treatment. It is here Daya steps in, and very dexterously discovers some good in us. Udama उदम is a pretext, a guise, Parinata-bahu-chchadma परिनातबाहुच्छदम is 'of various and diverse pretexts.' What are they? The text refers to four of them specifically and adds one generically.

Sukrita सुकृत is of several kinds. The first of them is Angika Sukrita प्रासंगिक सुकृत—good deeds which according to the world's standards are calculated for the welfare (hita) of the soul (e.g.,) building temples, erecting tanks for public use etc. This is referred to here as Hitam-iti-jagad-drishhya-kliptaihi,—done at the world regards as calculated to promote the welfare of the doer.

The next is known as Aanushangika sukrita—आनुषंगिक सुकृत—doing a good act with a particular purpose or for a particular result so happens that a secondary and unthought of good deed is to be performed. You feed a hungry man: with the food you provide, he feeds his wife and child, whom you never thought of while giving the food to the man whose hunger you wanted to appease. This unthought of good is a by-product of an intended good. This is spoken of as aklipta-phalaantaraihi—अक्लृप्त फलान्तरैः unthought of other object.

The third is abuddhipoorvakasukrita—अबुद्धिपूर्वक सुकृत some good which simply occurs without one's knowledge or volition. While going to attend a conference in Benares a person happens to die on the banks of the Ganges. He would never have bargained for it. This is amati-vihitaihi अमतिविहितैः done without an idea or thought of one's own.

The next is yaadrichchika sukrita—यादृच्छिक सुकृत casual or accidental. You go pursuing your cow which has run away from your cowshed. It goes round a temple and in following it you perform a pradakshina of that temple. Or, while fishing in the sea you fall into it by accident on the sacred Mahodaya day. This is dharmaitihi-yadrchchayaa.

In addition to the above four, Desika has added anyaihi अन्यैः others as well. They may take in consciously done good acts—Saamaanya-buddhi-moola-Sukrita, which in some cases earn great merit. You invite a friend whom you have not seen for years and give him food and lodging for some days. He happens to be a Sadhu. You have really done a very meritorious thing by giving him food and shelter though you did so only in the view that he was an old time friend.

Daya Devi thus looks into all our acts and doings with a magnifying glass, and catching hold of some small unthinking act of ours, construes the same in one of the above modes, as a very lofty and meritorious act, and recommends to the Lord for our reprieve and redemption. Thereby she confers on us what she thinks is good for us. Nijaabhipretam—naha pradisasi—निजाभिप्रेतं नः प्रदिशसि you give what in your view is best for us. Or you give what in our opinion is desirable. Nija may be taken as referring to Daya or to us नः in the sloka.

In this Daya evidently shows herself rather निरपत्रपा shameless. Banishing bashfulness and shame she has to work like this to bring about our welfare. In sloka 71 it was Saahasa साहस. Here it is shamelessness on the part of Daya. To multiply our small good deeds, to magnify them and to show them off to our best advantage, this and obtain that, but we do not take any steps to do the needful by observing the proper upaaya or means. How can Daya get us those benefits which we have not qualified ourselves for? The answer to that question is furnished by this sloka.

Daya is an adept at finding pretexts and inventing ways and means to confer benefits on us. If a person in power takes kindly to us, he says he has seen some good in us and rewards us for it. It may be we really did something good, or it may be that out of his good feelings towards us, he has put a kindly interpretation on some unwitting act of ours. Daya is likened to such a person in this sloka.

After all she is the Daya of the Lord of this universe. He cannot afford to be capricious: He cannot and ought not to be partial. He is also the law-giver and He has to enforce the laws promulgated by Himself. He has to reward the virtuous and punish the wicked. If we are virtuous it is all right; we easily get rewarded. But we are not virtuous; we are wicked by temperament and propensity. Yet we desire only benefits, and are afraid of getting punished. After ages and ages of indifference to the Lord and His Daya, we have now come to realise that our safety and future salvation lie in Their hands alone. We unreservedly surrender ourselves to Them. But before the Lord protects us, He will desire to be satisfied that we have done some good deeds and therefore deserve sympathetic and kindly treatment. It is here Daya Devi steps in, and very dexterously discovers some good in us. Chchadma छद्म is a pretext, a guise, Parinata-bahu-chchadma means 'of various and diverse pretexts.' What are they? The poet refers to four of them specifically and adds one generically.

Sukrita सुकृत is of several kinds. The first of them is Praasangika Sukrita प्रासंगिक सुकृत—good deeds which according to the world's standards are calculated for the welfare (hita) of the soul (e.g.,) building temples, erecting tanks for public use etc. This is referred to here as Hitam-iti-jagad-drishitya-kliptaihi,—done as what the world regards as calculated to promote the welfare of the doer.

The next is known as aanushangika sukrita—आनुषंगिक सुकृत While doing a good act with a particular purpose or for a particular end, it so happens that a secondary and unthought of good deed comes to be performed. You feed a hungry man: with the food you provide, he feeds his wife and child, whom you never thought of while giving the food to the man whose hunger you wanted to appease. This unthought of good is a by-product of an intended good. This is spoken of as aklipta-phalaantaraihi—अक्लृप्त फलान्तरैः unthought of other object.

The third is abuddhipoorvakasukrita—अबुद्धिपूर्वक सुकृत some good which simply occurs without one's knowledge or volition. While going to attend a conference in Benares a person happens to die on the banks of the Ganges. He would never have bargained for it. This is amati-vihitaihi अमतिविहितैः done without an idea or thought of one's own.

The next is yaadrichchika sukrita—यादृच्छिक सुकृत casual or accidental. You go pursuing your cow which has run away from your cowshed. It goes round a temple and in following it you perform a pradakshina of that temple. Or, while fishing in the sea you fall into it by accident on the sacred Mahodaya day. This is dharmaitihi-yadrchchayaa.

In addition to the above four, Desika has added anyaihi अन्यैः others as well. They may take in consciously done good acts—Saamaanya-buddhi-moola-Sukrita, which in some cases earn great merit. You invite a friend whom you have not seen for years and give him food and lodging for some days. He happens to be a Sadhu. You have really done a very meritorious thing by giving him food and shelter though you did so only in the view that he was an old time friend.

Daya Devi thus looks into all our acts and doings with a magnifying glass, and catching hold of some small unthinking act of ours, construes the same in one of the above modes, as a very lofty and meritorious act, and recommends to the Lord for our reprieve and redemption. Thereby she confers on us what she thinks is good for us. Nijaabhipretam—naha pradisasi—निजाभिप्रेतं नः प्रदिशसि you give what in your view is best for us. Or you give what in our opinion is desirable. Nija may be taken as referring to Daya or to us नः in the sloka.

In this Daya evidently shows herself rather निरपत्रपा shameless. Banishing bashfulness and shame she has to work like this to bring about our welfare. In sloka 71 it was Saahasa साहस. Here it is shamelessness on the part of Daya. To multiply our small good deeds, to magnify them and to show them off to our best advantage, where we never dreamt of doing any small act of courage, resourcefulness and dash: Daya is not Padmasahayakaruna? the Karuna of Lakshmi? Lakshmi's ways are copied by Daya. Daya would find good in the demons that threatened her day in and day out, and plead for their protection before the mighty Hanuman, who wanted to crush them for their cruelty towards Jagan-mata? Contact with Daya would red for Daya that selfsame characteristic of seeing good where it is not, or at least latent, or even good.

अतिविधिशिवैरैश्वर्यात्मानुभूतिरसैर्जना-

नहृदयमिहोपच्छन्दैषामसङ्गदशार्थिनी ।

तृषितजनतानीर्थस्नानक्रमक्षपिनैः नसां

वितरसि दये वीतातङ्का वृषाद्रिपतेः पदम् ॥

dhi Sivair-aisvairyaatmaanubhootirasair-janaan ahridayam ihopachchandyaishaam asangadasaam itajanataateerthasnaanakramakshapitainasaam vitarasi Dayeveetaatankaa Vrishaadripateh-pada

Daya Devi, in regard to people in this world who are desirous of aiswarya and kaivalya ऐश्वर्य and कैवल्य : those who are desirous of the status of Brahma and Siva, you (Siva) try to get unconnected with such desires, (external pleasures) and confer on them those pleasures, in order to please them and draw them unto yourself, so that, ultimately you fearlessly confer on them the pleasure of attaining the status of Brahma. Srinivasa, the Lord of Vrishaadri, even like Siva, tried to do this in the Ganges in order to get rid of his thirst. He was trying to secure for him the fuller benefits of Gangas water by drinking it, thus driving him of his sins.

The words nijaabhipretam Pradisasi employed by Daya in the previous sloka are elaborated openly in this sloka. The idea of Daya, employed in the previous sloka in a dubious way, is the desire of the aspirant, as also of Daya. But Daya is trying to realise her own ideas of the welfare of the world. Daya's idea of loka points out in a very clear manner. Incidentally, Daya's idea contained in the term Bhakta-chchanda is the topic of this decad.

The people of this world prefer aiswarya, wealth, to all things. Aiswarya here must be taken to be a compendious indicating all worldly pleasures. The kaivalya which comes is the stage where the aspirant to spiritual eminence indulges in the realisation of the pleasures of the self, bereft of God-association. To the true devotee of God, even kaivalya is not a stage worth aspiring for. It is as good, or as bad, and certainly as evanescent and unsatisfying, as aiswarya itself. The opening words of the sloka show that people who are spiritually minded prefer the pleasures of wealth and Aatmanubhava even to the exalted position held by Brahma and Rudra. It shows that people are so taken in by what this world can offer that they do not even desire other-worldly pleasures like those of Brahma and Rudra.

Daya Devi understands correctly the desire of the people of the world to obtain earthly wealth, or in a few and rare cases the supreme satisfaction of Aatmanubhava आत्मानुभव. Person Daya Devi, who knows the real value to be attached to these pleasures, contrasts them with the pleasures attainable at the Feet of the Lord. She is not happy about the craving that people entertain for these pleasures. But just like a fond mother, who pretends to satisfy the expressed desires of the child, all the while having in her mind the idea of converting it later on to her views. Daya Devi appears to grant what they want, so that her hold on them may become firm. They may learn to look to her for everything they desire to have. This is an illustration about conferring punya and dispelling sin on an individual who does not desire punya or to get rid of his sin, but feels thirsty, shows the way Daya Devi sets about it. Just as a person interested in a thirsty man's soul takes him to the source of theerthas like the Ganga, and asks that person to quench his thirst with the water of the Ganga, so that he may not only have his thirst quenched but also obtain punya, so too Daya Devi eggs on the votaries to appeal to her (and thereby to the Lord) to secure their hearts' desire with the idea of ultimately making them devotees of the Lord for the Lord's own sake. It is Daya's attempt to convert the first three classes of men denoted by Lord Sri Krishna as Aarthas आर्थाः Jignasu जिज्ञासु and Artharthi अर्थार्थी into persons belonging to the last class namely gnani ज्ञानि.

The word 'veetaatanka,' which literally means having disappeared, shows how carefully Daya Devi sets about the task of re-even where we never dreamt of doing any small good, requires a lot of courage, resourcefulness and dash: Daya has them all. Is she not Padmasahayakaruna? the Karuna of the Consort of Padma? Lakshmi's ways are copied by Daya. Who but a Sita could find good in the demons that threatened and frightened her day in and day out, and plead for their protection at the hands of the mighty Hanuman, who wanted to crush them and avenge their cruelty towards Jagan-mata? Contact with Lakshmi has secured for Daya that selfsame characteristic of finding, nay discovering, good where it is not, or at least latent, and rewarding that good.

अतिविधिशिवैश्वर्यात्मानुभूतिरसैर्जना-

नहृदयमिहोपच्छन्धैषामसङ्गदशार्थिनी ।

तृषितजनतानीर्थस्नानक्रमक्षपितैनसां

वितरसि दये वीतातङ्का वृषाद्रिपतेः पदम् ॥

(७५)

Atividhi Sivair-aisvairyaatmaanubhootirasair-janaan

ahridayam ihopachchandyaishaam asangadasaarthinee ।

Trishitajanataateerthasnaanakramakshapitainasaam

vitarsi Dayeveetaatankaa Vrishaadripateh-padam ॥ (75)

Daya Devi, in regard to people in this world who prefer the pleasures of aiswarya and kaivalya ऐश्वर्य and कैवल्य as even superior to those of the status of Brahma and Siva, you (secretly) desiring them to get unconnected with such desires, (externally) appear to confer on them those pleasures, in order to please them and thereby annex them unto yourself, so that, ultimately you may completely and fearlessly confer on them the pleasure of attaining the Feet of Lord Srinivasa, the Lord of Vrishaadri, even like asking a person to bathe in the ganges in order to get rid of his thirst, all the while desiring to secure for him the fuller benefits of Ganga-snana capable of depriving him of his sins.

The words nijaabhipretam Pradisasi employed in the previous sloka are elaborated openly in this sloka. Those words were employed in the previous sloka in a dubious way to suggest the true desire of the aspirant, as also of Daya. But that Daya really works to realise her own ideas of the welfare of the upaasaka, this sloka points out in a very clear manner. Incidentally it gives out the idea contained in the term Bhakta-chchandaanuvarti which is the topic of this decad.

even where we never dreamt of doing any small good, requires a lot of courage, resourcefulness and dash: Daya has them all. Is she not Padmasahayakaruna? the Karuna of the Consort of Padma? Lakshmi's ways are copied by Daya. Who but a Sita could find good in the demons that threatened and frightened her day in and day out, and plead for their protection at the hands of the mighty Hanuman, who wanted to crush them and avenge their cruelty towards Jagān-mata? Contact with Lakshmi has secured for Daya that selfsame characteristic of finding, nay discovering, good where it is not, or at least latent, and rewarding that good.

अतिविधिशिवैश्वर्यात्मानुभूतिरसैर्जना-

नहृदयमिहोपच्छन्नैषामसङ्गदशार्थिनी ।

तृषितजनतानीर्थस्नानक्रमक्षपि नैनसां

वितरसि दये वीतातङ्का वृषाद्रिपतेः पदम् ॥ (७५)

Atividhi Sivair-aisvairyaatmaanubhootirasair-janaan

ahridayam ihopachchandyaishaam asangadasaarthinee ।

Trishitajanataateerthasnaanakramakshapitainasaam

vitarsi Dayeveetaatankaa Vrishaadripateh-padam ॥ (75)

Daya Devi, in regard to people in this world who prefer the pleasures of aiswarya and kaivalya ऐश्वर्य and कैवल्य as even superior to those of the status of Brahma and Siva, you (secretly) desiring them to get unconnected with such desires, (externally) appear to confer on them those pleasures, in order to please them and thereby annex them unto yourself, so that, ultimately you may completely and fearlessly confer on them the pleasure of attaining the Feet of Lord Srinivasa, the Lord of Vrishaadri, even like asking a person to bathe in the ganges in order to get rid of his thirst, all the while desiring to secure for him the fuller benefits of Ganga-snana capable of depriving him of his sins.

The words nijaabhipretam Pradisasi employed in the previous sloka are elaborated openly in this sloka. Those words were employed in the previous sloka in a dubious way to suggest the true desire of the aspirant, as also of Daya. But that Daya really works to realise her own ideas of the welfare of the upaasaka, this sloka points out in a very clear manner. Incidentally it gives out the idea contained in the term Bhakta-chchandaanuvarti which is the topic of this decad.

to work very cleverly, and should avoid the blame that is likely to attach to her in the shape of Vaishamya or partiality. If she bestows her favours on some persons to the exclusion of others people will attribute partiality to her. That is why she is very careful to discover some good as set out in the previous sloka. Desika has very nicely described this in a sloka of his in Sankalpa sooryodhaya, where he refers to the Lord protecting us by finding some casual good in us, however unintended it might be:

घुणक्षितिलिपिक्रमात् उपनिपातिनःपातिनः ।

घुण Ghuna is a particular insect found in timber etc. Ghunakshiti घुणक्षिति—therefore means the incision in wood, or the leaf of a book, made by the insect or worm, and resembling somewhat the form of a letter. There is a nyaya known as घुणाक्षरन्याय which therefore has come to denote any fortuitous or chance occurrence. The Lord (that is Daya Devi) thus snatches upon some occurrence in us, and makes us the recipients of benefits and rewards.

Asangadasaarthinee is another very important expression in this sloka. While conferring upon us the pleasures of earth as desired by us, Daya Devi is desirous of our coming to disregard and reject those pleasures, and therefore she is praying for our dissociation—asanga असङ्ग—from them. At the same time in order not to lose hold upon us, and to work our welfare and to secure to us the lasting good that is in her gift, she appears to satisfy our cravings only with a view ultimately to take us to the Feet of the Lord. The child refuses to take good food, and insists upon enjoying a bite at a very unhealthy and indigestible stuff. The mother does not snatch away that stuff immediately, but permits the child to have a go at it, and it is only by stages that she weans the child from that desire and makes it take to wholesome food. Daya Devi, Mother that she is to all of us, works on the same lines, and ensures that we safely reach the destination, namely, the Feet of the Lord of Vrishaadri वृषात्रिपतेः पदं.

वृषगिरिसुधासिन्धौ जन्तुर्दये निहितस्त्वया

भवभयपरीतापच्छित्त्यै भजनघमर्षणम् ।

मुषितकलुषो मुक्तेरग्रेसरैरभिपूर्यते

स्वयमुपनतैः स्वात्मानन्दप्रभृत्यनुबन्धिभिः ॥

(७६)

capacity to purify is the key-note of this sloka. The sookta here obviously is Saranagati mantra. That is the Aghamarshana Sookta. The plunge into Lord Srinivasa with the utterance of Saranagatimantra is the bath or plunge talked of here.

Like children who are afraid to get into water for bathing, we are reluctant to take to this bath, however pleasant, purificatory, and beneficial, it may be. So, Daya Devi—the fond parent that she is—desiring that we should not miss all that, puts us into—literally throws us into—that nectar-ocean. This is indicated by the “nihitastvayaa.” Here Daya Devi does what her other ego, Goda Devi, has done for us in her classical Tiruppavai,—taking us for that bath along with her and making us bathe. நீராடப் போதுவீர் ! போதுமினோ.

A bath usually cools and also purifies the body and spirit. But here not only are tapa or heat, and papa or sin, dispelled, but Bhaya भय or fear is also dispelled. The fear complex that has been with us by age-long contact with evil, completely disappears. That is shown by the expression Bhava-bhaya-chchittiyai. भवभयच्छित्यै.

Release from sin of all sorts, and the cleansed state of the soul, are indicated by the term mushita-kalusha. Kalusham कलुषं means dirt, filth, mud, as also sin. Mushita literally means taken away, carried off. By contact with the Lord, in the aghamarshana way, our sins are forcibly taken away from us, sins from whom we have been reluctant to part, all these ages.

As a result of this bath in the Lord, several exhilarating pleasures follow, or come of their own accord. They are preludes or forerunners to that great Mokshananda. The upasaka who has thrown himself and plunged into Para Brahman is filled with several such pleasures. Only one of them is mentioned here “Svaatmaananda” स्वात्मानन्द. The pleasure born out of the true understanding of one's own self as a prakara, or mode, or sesha, of Lord Srinivasa. Svaatma, or one's own atma, in Visishtadvaita connotes Parabrahman, who is the soul or atma of the entire world,—sentient and non-sentient. So Svaatmaananda means the pleasures of daasya दास्य or kainkaryā. Contrast this word Svaatmananda with the aatmmanubhooti of the previous sloka. There, it was the contemplation of the kevala atma bereft of divine content. It was kaivalya there, but not here.

ceases, he is taken straight to the Feet of the Lord. There are other cases like those of certain highly developed souls, like Arjuna and so on, where the delay will be enormous, as long, possibly, as the Mahapralaya itself, which comes once in a millennium. The point to note is that whatever the period of time, however short it may be, or however long it may be, there is a certainty here of attainment. The difference in the period of attainment is due to differences in the sportiveness (க்ரீடாतरङ्गपरंपरा) kṛīḍa-taranga-parampara of Daya Devi. Like the waves of a reservoir of water, some being small and some being large, the lapse of time between the performance of saranagati and the attainment of the Lord's Feet, is either short or long according to the Kreedasheelas of Daya Devi. This again is conditioned by the intensity, or the absence of it, in the prapanna. The emphasis on the whole is on the certainty of attainment. The Lord that has created the world has promised His feet to those who seek them. The actual time of attainment alone is left in doubt. Here also the Lord, through Daya Devi, acts according to the desire of the Upasaka.

There is again Bhakta-chchandanuvartana भक्तच्छन्दानुवर्तन. The person who performs prapatti for being taken to the Feet of the Lord at once is called 'Aarthaprapanna' आर्तप्रपन्न. A person who performs saranagati for attaining the feet of the Lord at some future time is called 'druptaprapanna' द्रुप्तप्रपन्न.

This sloka is reminiscent of the verse of Tirumazhisai Alwar as Naanmugan Tiruvandadi. The language and the sentiment are taken from there.

“ இன்றாக, நாளை யே ஆக, இனிச்சிறிது
நின்று ஆக, நின்னருள் என்பாலதே ”

It may be today, let it be tomorrow, or let it tarry for some more time.

I am sure to be the recipient of your grace. Desika has attributed the Mahapralaya for இனிச் சிறிது நின்று, while he is adopting the sentiments of today and tomorrow in the Lord's verse. That is the security that the true devotees of the Lord feel, once they have thrown themselves on the mercy of the Lord. If Daya Devi guarantees to us all that are to be distributed to the great and minor gods as stated in the previous sloka, who can doubt the certainty of the fruits in her own gift? This sloka, like the previous sloka, furnishes us an ari-argument in support of the positive certainty of attainment of the Feet of the Lord by all those who resort to Daya

e in her for attaining the greatest of blisses nankind, and is in fact the inheritance of mank

यां त्वत्संपृक्ते वृषाद्रिशिखामणौ

रसुधाधाराकारा प्रसीदति भावना ।

इये दत्तास्वादं विमुक्तिबलाहकं

गरुतो निध्यायन्ति स्थिराशयचातकाः ॥

(८०)

m tvatsamprikte Vrishaadrisikhaamanau

sudhaa dhaaraakaaraau praseeduti bhaavanaa

re! dattuasvaadam vimuktivaluahakam

uto nidhyuayanti sthiraasayachaatakaaha (80)

! To all those who centre their minds upon the glo Vrishadri Who is intimately associated with y imilar to the incessant flow of nectar in a very will result. Gladdened in every pore and cell of he upasakas with their one-pointed devotion to , who is like a cloud showering moksha, and ds like the mind of the chataka bird, those great ntemplation of that cloud with all their other s

ouched upon the delay that is likely to occur asons, between the observance of prapatti or sa ttainment of the Feet of the Lord, in the pre deals here with the state of mind of the prap riod, As the prapanna has pitched his mind Lord's lotus feet, and has also performed pra he same, his mind will contemplate with ple which he is going to attain, may be tomorrow later. Like the Rajakumara, crown-prince, forw ay has been fixed, this prapanna will be ever lo great joy and pleasure to the realisation of his h to come. Every moment his mind will be dw the pleasure that awaits him. Therefore his devoted towards that Lord who is going to ure. That Lord is Vrishaadrisikhaamani—the adri. And He is sweetened by contact with of the blending of the milk ocean with the eady been enjoyed in a previous sloka. Eve contemplation of the pleasures of the union with the Lord is like the flow of nectar. Bhaktiyoga has been said somewhere to be the ceaseless and incessant contemplation and flow of love like the incessant and unbroken flow of oil or ghee: Thailadaaraavat-avichchannasmrutisantana—तैलधारावत् अविच्छिन्नस्मृतिसन्तान. Desika here uses the word 'Sudhaadhaara' सुधाधार or the flow of nectar, to illustrate the flow of love towards the Lord. That contemplation or bhavana will be clear and pellucid. Valmiki has used a simile comparing the clear-as-crystal waters of the Tamasa river to the mind of Sanmanushya. We are reminded of that statement of Valmiki by this sloka which talks of 'prasrimarasudhaadhaara praseedati bhaavanaa'

The pure and uncontaminated state of the prapanna in the interim period, that is after prapatti and before the attainment of the Lord's feet, is again likened to the state of the chaataka bird—vide sloka 58 ante. Here, once again Lord Srinivasa is likened to a cloud; only it is stated here that the rain that flows from this cloud is 'Vimukti' विमुक्ति or moksha. 'Nibhruta garutaha' means movementless wing of a bird. So the Sat of the upanishads, Sanmanushya of Valmiki, and the prapanna here, desists from flight into other spheres by (inhibiting) withdrawing the wings to attain concentration in contemplation. The enjoyment that the prapanna attains during this period is almost akin to mokshananda. Except for the contact with the body, he is really a mukta, a jeevanmukta if one may so call him.

The Lord's desire or ichcha, that Daya is, has been shown in this decad, which closes with this sloka, to function in such a manner that those who are the objects of that ichcha or desire are able to cast off all sins and are assured of complete release from the cycle of births and deaths, and union with the Lord at some time or other in the future, about the duration of which time they need not bother, because at the end of it realisation is certain; and what is more, even before the realisation comes to them in full form, they enjoy all the benefits of that realisation even now, and even here. That is why Daya Devi pretending to give him what he desires, gives him what in her view is the greatest and highest good.

श्रीमते निगमान्तमहादेशिकाय नमः

श्री श्रीनिवास परब्रह्मणे नमः

॥ दयाशतकम् ॥

DAYAA SATAKAM

NINTH DECAD.

THE Lord's unbounded kindness towards prapannas was very well illustrated by the two previous decads, which respectively dealt with (a) His essential nature of dispelling sins and their unpleasant consequences (anishta) and (b) His overwhelming love towards the prapannas, which is willing to adapt itself to their desires with a view to ultimately sublimate those desires into God-love. This idea has been well expressed by Desika elsewhere also. Vide Dramidopanishad Saram:

अथुनिष्ठान् पुंसां स्वयमुपजिगीर्षन्नपि विभुः

तदिच्छां बाह्येषु प्रशमयितुकामः क्रमवशात् ।

निजेच्छासंसिद्ध त्रिविधचिदाचिद्वस्तुविततिः

श्रितेच्छावैचित्रीवश इति वदत्पष्टमशते ॥

“With a view to dispel and banish the anishtas of men and in order to see that their desire for worldly pleasures is gradually put down, He the Lord of all, who has the entire threefold chetana and aचेतना creation under His own sway, yields Himself up to the variegated desires of His followers.” (Those who are interested in pursuing the theory that is being elaborated in this commentary, that the theme for each of the ten decads of this stotra is furnished by the respective themes of the ten centums of Nammalwar's Tiruvaimozhi, as laid down by Desika, will have noticed the use of several identical words and phrases in this sloka of Dramidopanishad Saram and the 81st sloka of Daya Satakam).

This ninth decad furnishes the reason why the Lord is so kind to His devotees and fond to the extent of coming down to ceases, he is taken straight to the Feet of the Lord. There are other cases like those of certain highly developed souls, like Ramanama and so on, where the delay will be enormous, as long, possibly, as the Mahapralaya itself, which comes once in a millennium. The point to note is that whatever the period of time, however short it may be, or however long it may be, there is a certainty here of attainment. The difference in the period of attainment is due to differences in the sportiveness (க्रीடாतरङ्गपरंपரா) da-taranga-parampara of Daya Devi. Like the waves of a reservoir of water, some being small and some being large, the lapse of time between the performance of saranagati and the attainment of the Lord's Feet, is either short or long according to the Kreedasla of Daya Devi. This again is conditioned by the intensity, or the absence of it, in the prapanna. The emphasis on the whole is on the certainty of attainment. The Lord that has created the world has promised His feet to those who seek them. The actual time of attainment alone is left in doubt. Here also the Lord, together with Daya Devi, acts according to the desire of the Upasaka. This is again Bhakta-chchandanuvartana भक्तच्छन्दानुवर्तन. The person who performs prapatti for being taken to the Feet of the Lord at once is called 'Aarthaprapanna' आर्तप्रपन्न. A person who performs saranagati for attaining the feet of the Lord at some future time is called 'druptaprapanna' द्रुप्तप्रपन्न.

This sloka is reminiscent of the verse of Tirumazhisai Alwar as Naanmugan Tiruvandadi. The language and the sentiment are taken from there.

“ இன்றாக, நாளை யே ஆக, இனிச்சிறிது
நின்று ஆக, நின்னருள் என்பாலதே ”

It may be today, let it be tomorrow, or let it tarry for some more time.

I am sure to be the recipient of your grace. Desika has attributed the Mahapralaya for இனிச் சிறிது நின்று, while he is adopting the sentiments of today and tomorrow in the Lord's verse. That is the security that the true devotees of the Lord feel, once they have thrown themselves on the mercy of the Lord. If Daya Devi guarantees to us all that are to be distributed to the small and minor gods as stated in the previous sloka, who can doubt the certainty of the fruits in her own gift? This sloka, following as it does the previous sloka, furnishes us an a priori கிமுத argument in support of the positive certainty of attainment of the Feet of the Lord by all those who resort to Daya and take refuge in her for attaining the greatest of blisses that can be got by mankind, and is in fact the inheritance of mankind.

प्रणिहितधियां त्वत्संप्रुक्ते वृषाद्रिशिखामणौ

प्रसृमरसुधाधाराकारा प्रसीदति भावना ।

दृढमिति दये दत्तास्वादं विमुक्तिवल्लहकं

निभृतगरुतो निःश्यायन्ति स्थिराशयचातकाः ॥ (८०)

Pranihitadhiyaam tvatsamprikte Vrishaadrisikhaamanau prasrimarasudhaa dhaaraakaarau praseeduti bhaavanaa । Dridhamiti Daye! dattuasvaadam vimuktivalaahukam nibhritagaruto nidhyaayanti sthiraasayaachaatakaaha ॥ (80)

Daya Devi! To all those who centre their minds upon the glorious Crest-jewel of Vrishadri Who is intimately associated with you,—contemplation similar to the incessant flow of nectar in a very fine and clear form will result. Gladdened in every pore and cell of their body thereby, the upasakas with their one-pointed devotion towards Lord Srinivāsa, who is like a cloud showering moksha, and with unswerving minds like the mind of the chataka bird, those great ones revel in the contemplation of that cloud with all their other senses drawn in.

Having touched upon the delay that is likely to occur, for ever so many reasons, between the observance of prapatti or sarana-gati, and the attainment of the Feet of the Lord, in the previous sloka, Desika deals here with the state of mind of the prapanna during that period. As the prapanna has pitched his mind and heart upon the Lord's lotus feet, and has also performed prapatti for attaining the same, his mind will contemplate with pleasure on those Feet which he is going to attain, may be tomorrow, or may be a little later. Like the Rajakumara, crown-prince, for whose coronation a day has been fixed, this prapanna will be ever looking forward with great joy and pleasure to the realisation of his heart's desire that has to come. Every moment his mind will be dwelling happily upon the pleasure that awaits him. Therefore his mind will be wholly devoted towards that Lord who is going to give him that pleasure. That Lord is Vrishaadrisikhaamani—the crest jewel of Vrishadri. And He is sweetened by contact with Daya. The sweetness of the blending of the milk ocean with the nectar ocean has already been enjoyed in a previous sloka. Even the contemplation of the pleasures of the union with the Lord is like the flow of nectar. Bhaktiyoga has been said somewhere to be the ceaseless and incessant contemplation and flow of love like the incessant and unbroken flow of oil or ghee: Thailadaaraavat-avichchannasmrutisantana—तैलधारावत् अविच्छिन्नस्मृतिसन्तान. Desika here uses the word 'Sudhaadhaara' सुधाधार or the flow of nectar, to illustrate the flow of love towards the Lord. That contemplation or bhavana will be clear and pellucid. Valmiki has used a simile comparing the clear-as-crystal waters of the Tamasa river to the mind of Sanmanushya. We are reminded of that statement of Valmiki by this sloka which talks of 'prasrimarasudhaadhaara praseedati bhaavanaa'

The pure and uncontaminated state of the prapanna in the interim period, that is after prapatti and before the attainment of the Lord's feet, is again likened to the state of the chaataka bird—vide sloka 58 ante. Here, once again Lord Srinivasa is likened to a cloud; only it is stated here that the rain that flows from this cloud is 'Vimukti' विमुक्ति or moksha. 'Nibhruta garutaha' means movementless wing of a bird. So the Sat of the upanishads, Sanmanushya of Valmiki, and the prapanna here, desists from flight into other spheres by (inhibiting) withdrawing the wings to attain concentration in contemplation. The enjoyment that the prapanna attains during this period is almost akin to mokshananda. Except for the contact with the body, he is really a mukta, a jeevanmukta. One may so call him.

The Lord's desire or ichcha, that Daya is, has been shown in this decad, which closes with this sloka, to function in such a manner that those who are the objects of that ichcha or desire are able to cast off all sins and are assured of complete release from the cycle of births and deaths, and union with the Lord at some time or other in the future, about the duration of which some they need not bother, because at the end of it realisation is certain; and what is more, even before the realisation comes to them in full form, they enjoy all the benefits of that realisation even now, and even here. That is why Daya Devi pretending to give him what he desires, gives him what in her view is the greatest and highest good.

—a friend whose friendship is not caused by any extraneous cause, consideration, or circumstance, but is a friendship without any reason or cause—Avyaaaja Sauhaarda अव्याजसौहार्द. This is best illustrated by His coming into the world taking various forms. As Nammalwar has put it, there is no form of existence which He has not adopted. எந்தின்ற யோனியுமாய்ப் பிறந்தாய் (Born out of every conceivable womb). The upanishad praises Him as one who obtains lustre and glory by being born. सउश्रेयान् भवति जायमानः. Consistently with Desika's view that every merit in the Lord, that makes Him what He is, is to be traced to the presence of Daya, he sets out in this decad to enjoy the avatars, and to show the part played by Daya in each avatar. Already in sloka 35 it has been said that the Lord takes His several avatars only at the behest of Daya Devi. That idea is elaborated in this decad. Most appropriately the metre employed for the slokas of this decad is Prithvi पृथिवी. Prithvi means earth. Avatara — अवतार — is a descent into the earth. Prithvi is thus the topic of this decad, and it is also the metre employed for this decad. This is the last of the series of five different metres, all of which have 17 syllables in a paada or quarter, employed in this stotra.

The consummate art of the poet can be seen from the following words all of which are synonymous with prithvi being employed in the slokas of this decad:

Sloka 81—Jagat, Kshiti; 82—Jagat; 83—Kshiti, medini; 85—Jagat; 86 Kshiti; 87—Jagat, Kshiti; 88—Jagat; 89—Visvambhara; Jagat; 90—Bhuvi.

The omission of a word synonymous with prithvi in sloka 84 relating to Narasimhavatara must be deliberate; probably to indicate that as per the boon accorded to Hiranyakasipu, he could not be killed on earth.

कूपे विगतवेलया कृतसमग्रपोषैस्त्वया

कलिज्वलन्दुर्गते जगति कालमेघायितम् ।

वृषक्षितिधरादिषु स्थितिपदेषु सानुप्लवै-

वृषाद्रिपतिविग्रहैर्व्यपगताखिलावग्रहैः ॥

(८१)

Kripe! vigatavelayaa kritasamagraposhais-tvayaa

Kalijvalanadurgate jagati kaalameghaayitam ।

Vrishakshitidharaadhishu sthitipadeshu saanuplavair—

Vrishaadripativigrahair-vyapagataakhilaavagrahaihi ॥ (81)

Daya Devi! Because of you with a capacity to transgress banks and bounds (by overflowing), this world suffering under the fire of (the dark age) is made into a Kalamegha (dark and rain-laden) by the Vighrahas (Images) of the Lord of Vrishadri which are fully fed (i.e., full of water), which are capable of dispelling all heat (distress), and which are to be seen along with their fullness in Venkatachala and other permanent abodes of the Lord.

The sentiments of the last sloka of the previous decad run through his first sloka of this ninth decad. The cloud, and the chataka which looks up to that cloud for its sustenance, were referred to before. In this sloka it is pointed out that that cloud is nothing but the Archa forms of the Lord dwelling in the permanent—Sthitida—forms of Images in Temples.

In sloka 45 ante, Daya was likened to the clouds. Here the same is the Images of the Lord in Temples. As usual the upama analogy is worked out to perfection. Let us enjoy the slesha in each of the epithets.

1) Krita-samagraposhaihi: कृतसमग्रपोषैः The clouds are fully fed by water. They are இலங்கொலி நீர்ப் பெரும்பௌவம் டியுண்டபெருவயிற்றகருமுகில், as Tirumangai Alvar would say—clouds which have devoured the big ocean with shining and noisy waters. The Archa form of the Lord is similarly well fed by Daya Devi. समग्र Samagra is fully, entirely; कृत-पोषैः -poshaihi fed. The proximity of the word त्वया tvaya in the compound word 'krita-samagra-poshaihi' is fraught with significance. It is only in the Archa forms of the Lord that he plays the largest part. Vibhava forms of the Lord have a measure of लीला leela or sport in them—vide 'atmaleelaapade-' in sloka 35 used in connection with Vibhava roopas of the Krita-samagra-poshaihi can also be taken to mean feeding of one fully. This also will apply both to the cloud and to the Archa.

(2) Vyapagataakhilaavagrahaihi—with all sorts of drought and distress dispelled. Avagraha, meaning drought (want of rain or dryness), is dispelled by the clouds that bring in rain and water. Avagraha may also be taken to mean erratic or excessive rain, each of which can be as pestilential as total want of rain.

—a friend whose friendship is not caused by any extraneous cause, consideration, or circumstance, but is a friendship without any reason or cause—Avyaaja Sauhaarda अव्याजसौहार्द. This is best illustrated by His coming into the world taking various forms. As Nammalwar has put it, there is no form of existence which He has not adopted. எந்நின்ற யோனியுமாய்ப் பிறந்தாய் (Born out of every conceivable womb). The upanishad praises Him as one who obtains lustre and glory by being born. सउश्रेयान् भवति जायमानः. Consistently with Desika's view that every merit in the Lord, that makes Him what He is, is to be traced to the presence of Daya, he sets out in this decad to enjoy the avatars, and to show the part played by Daya in each avatar. Already in sloka 35 it has been said that the Lord takes His several avatars only at the behest of Daya Devi. That idea is elaborated in this decad. Most appropriately the metre employed for the slokas of this decad is Prithvi पृथिवी. Prithvi means earth. Avatara — अवतार — is a descent into the earth. Prithvi is thus the topic of this decad, and it is also the metre employed for this decad. This is the last of the series of five different metres, all of which have 17 syllables in a paada or quarter, employed in this stotra.

The consummate art of the poet can be seen from the following words all of which are synonymous with prithvi being employed in the slokas of this decad:

Sloka 81—Jagat, Kshiti; 82—Jagat; 83—Kshiti, medini; 85—Jagat; 86 Kshiti; 87—Jagat, Kshiti; 88—Jagat; 89—Visvambhara; Jagat; 90—Bhuvi.

The omission of a word synonymous with prithvi in sloka 84 relating to Narasimhavatara must be deliberate; probably to indicate that as per the boon accorded to Hiranyakasipu, he could not be killed on earth.

कूपे विगतवेलया कृतसमग्रपोषैस्त्वया

कलिज्वलन्दुर्गते जगति कालमेघायितम् ।

वृषक्षितिधरादिषु स्थितिपदेषु सानुप्लवै-

वृषाद्रिपतिविग्रहैर्व्यपगताखिलावग्रहैः ॥

(८१)

Kripe! vigatavelayaa kritasamagraposhais-tvayaa

Kalijvalanadurgate jagati kaalameghaayitam ।

Vrishakshitidharaadhishu sthitipodeshu saanuplavair—

Vrishaadripativigrahair-vyapagataakhilaavagrahaihi ॥ (81)

Kripa Devi! Because of you with a capacity to transgress banks and bounds (by overflowing), this world suffering under the fire of (the dark age) is made into a Kalamegha (dark and rain-laden) by the Vighrahas (Images) of the Lord of Vrishadri which are fully fed (i.e., full of water), which are capable of dispelling all (distress), and which are to be seen along with their full forms in Venkatachala and other permanent abodes of the Lord.

The sentiments of the last sloka of the previous decad run through his first sloka of this ninth decad. The cloud, and the chataka which looks up to that cloud for its sustenance, were referred to before. In this sloka it is pointed out that that cloud is nothing but the archa forms of the Lord dwelling in the permanent—Sthitida—forms of Images in Temples.

In sloka 45 ante, Daya was likened to the clouds. Here the clouds are the Images of the Lord in Temples. As usual the upama (analogy) is worked out to perfection. Let us enjoy the slesha (word-play) in each of the epithets.

(1) Krita-samagraposhaihi: कृतसमग्रपोषैः The clouds are fully fed with water. They are இலங்கொலி நீர்ப் பெரும்பௌவம் முடிண்டபெருவயிற்றகருமுகில், as Tirumangai Alvar would say—it—clouds which have devoured the big ocean with shining and noisy waters. The Archa form of the Lord is similarly well fed by Daya Devi. समग्र Samagra is fully, entirely; कृत-पोषैः poshaihi fed. The proximity of the word त्वया tvaya to the compound word 'krita-samagra-poshaihi' is fraught with significance. It is only in the Archa forms of the Lord that this plays the largest part. Vibhava forms of the Lord have a share of लीला leela or sport in them—vide 'atmaleelaapade-' in sloka 35 used in connection with Vibhava roopas of the Krita-samagra-poshaihi can also be taken to mean feeding of one fully. This also will apply both to the cloud and to the Archa.

(2) Vyapagataakhilaavagrahaihi—with all sorts of drought and distress dispelled. Avagraha, meaning drought (want of rain or dryness), is dispelled by the clouds that bring in rain and water. Avagraha may also be taken to mean erratic or excessive rain, each of which can be as pestilential as total want of rain.

Applied to Archa, this compound word can be taken to indicate the dispelling of all famine of spirit. Being ever present in our midst, and ever and anon approachable by us, we need never feel left out, or left alone.

(3) Vrisha-kshiti-dharaadhishu-sthitipadeshu-saanuplavaihi:

Along with followings or followers in spots like Vrishagiri Hill.

The Kalamegha or dark cloud full of water always sits on the hill-tops. It is attended by lightning, thunder, winds and so on.

So too the archa forms of the Lord adorn Viishagiri and other sacred Hills like the Himalayas (Badrinaath). Alagar Hill near Madurai, and so on. If the clouds are attended by lightning thunder and so on, the Lord in His Archa form has His own attendants (followers) such as Ananta (Adisesha) Garuda and Vishva-ksena (Commander-in-Chief) not to speak of the Alwars and Acharyas who also reside in the Temples in archa form round the Central Archa Form.

Thus it is said this world is overrun by the great clouds that are Vrishadripati Vighrahaas— or the auspicious and lovable Image forms of Lord Srinivasa, and thereby has its heat engendered by Kali, the dark age, driven out.

The greatness of Archavatara and of the benefits that Archas confer on the world is markedly emphasised in and by this sloka. That the Form of Lord Srinivasa is a Premier Archa Form is also pointed out. Desika's fascination for Archa and for the Lord of Tirumala is once again seen here.

For Vigatavelayaa, there is another rendering as 'Viduruta-lokayaa' विद्वत्तलोकया meaning bearing up and supporting the worlds, as governing tvaya (you) referring to Daya. (81)

प्रसूय विविधं जगत्तदभिबृद्धये त्वं दये

समीक्षणविचिन्तनप्रभृतिभिः स्वयं तादृशैः ।

विचित्रगुणचिन्तितां विविधदोषवैदेशिकीं

वृषाचलपतेस्तनुं विशसि मत्स्यकूर्मादिकाम् ॥

(८२)

Prasooya vividham jagat tadabhivridhdhaye tvam Daye!

sameekshana vichintanaprabhritibhis-svayam taadrisaihi

Vichitragunachitritaam vividhadoshavaidesikeem

Vrishaachalapates-tanum visasi Matsyakoormaadikaam ॥ (82)

Daya Devi! After having begotten this varied and variegated, with a view to bring about its welfare and improvement on notable acts like seeing, thinking about, etc., you enter into bodies of (taken by) the Lord of Vrishaachala which are beautiful and enjoyable because of their wonderful character and characteristics, which are devoid of all kinds of blemishes,—bodies like those of fish, tortoise etc.

The avatars of the Lord are innumerable. अजायमानो बहुदा ते. He who has no birth takes numberless births—as the Upanishuts put it. But traditionally ten of those avatars have become celebrated. They are Matsya, Koorma, Varaha, Narasimha, Vamana, Parasurama, Rama, Balarama, Krishna and Kalki. These are referred to as the Dasavataras or Ten avatars of the Lord. The Lord has given to us a stotra known as Dasavatara Stotra. In this decad he again celebrates those ten avatars. The purpose of the Dasavathara description here is to demonstrate the Lord's conditioned and spontaneous feelings of friendliness (Avyaja-kardha) towards the denizens of the earth, which are responsible for his descent (avatara) into this world.

The first sloka of this decad was devoted to the enjoyment of the Archavataras which are permanent avatars. This sloka sets out two of the impermanent avatars, the Vibhava avatars, the two out of the ten set out above, the matsya and the koorma, the fish form and the Tortoise form. The eight other avatars are enjoyed in a sloka each,—slokas 83 to 90.

It is first stated here that the purpose of the several avatars is अभिवृद्धि abhiṣṛiddhi—growth—of the created world. The Lord created the world and brought it into being प्रसूय (prasooṃya) and begins to work for its growth and fulfilment. The method adopted for effecting this growth is indicated by the words sameekṣa-vichintana-prabhritibhiḥ: seeing, thinking etc. The Lord casts His Divine glance and there is growth all round. The Lord always thinks about the welfare of the world that has been created by Him. He is Viswa-paripaaalanajaagarooka—विश्वपरिपालक—ever watchful about the protection of the entire world.

While thus describing the Lord's seeing and thinking, Desika cleverly indicated the way a fish and a tortoise protect their respective offspring. The fish does not suckle its offspring, the tortoise. The fish feeds its baby by looking at it. The parent tortoise thinks of the baby-tortoise and the baby grows thereby. Students of modern biology will confirm this peculiarity of nature in these two creatures, one which has been observed and laid down in a very old saying:

“ Eekshanadhyanasamsparśaihi matsya-koorma-vihangamaha Pushnanti svaanapatyaani.....”

ईक्षणध्यानसंस्पर्शैः मत्स्यकूर्मविहङ्गमाः ।

पुष्णन्ति स्वान्यपत्यानि ॥

The Matsyaavatara and the Koormavatara are indicated by the reference to the fish and tortoise, matsya and koorma. The Lord assumes the form of a fish and protects the world by His glances. The Lord assumes the form of a tortoise and thinks about the world and thereby works its welfare.

How is he enabled to do so? Daya Devi enters into His bodies—the fish body and the tortoise body—of her own volition (swayam). The bodies are ‘Vichitra-guna-chitrita’ beautiful and lovely to look at because of their marvellous make up. And they are ‘vivida-dosha-vaidesika’ far removed from all sorts of faults and blemishes. Because it is referred to as a body, the Lord’s body should not be confounded with the perishing and perishable bodies such as ours. The material of those bodies is suddha-satva. It is not trigunaatmaka, i.e., made of satva, rajas and tamas.

Lord Sri Krishna’s exposition in the Gita about the nature of his incarnations must be properly understood before we can attempt to evaluate those incarnations. The two compounds ‘vichitra-guna-chitritaam’ and ‘vivida-dosha-vaidesikeem’ as qualifying the word tanum (तनुं) remind us of all the excellences of the Lord’s body assumed during avatars, as described in the Gita and enjoyed in the other Sanskrit and Tamil religious classics of our land. Just as the Divyaatmaswaroop of the Lord has the two chief characteristics known as ubhaya-linga viz., kalyanaguna-poorti कल्याणगुणपूर्ति and heya-gunaraahitya हेयगुणराहित्य (full of all auspicious qualities, and totally devoid of bad or evil qualities,) the Divya-mangala-vigraha is also vichitra-guna-chitrita and vividha-dosha-vaidesikee.

Readers would have noticed how the word vigraha was used in the previous sloka, while the word used in this sloka is Tanu, oth the words are capable of signifying the body: but vigraha is more appropriate to denote the body which is the image or Idol and Tanu to denote the body of the Lord during His avatars as Rama, Krishna etc. That is why these latter are referred to as incarnations.

Svayam-visasi-matsya-koormaadikaam-tanum—You yourself of your own accord enter into the bodies such as those of the fish and tortoise. The Lord takes those forms and Daya Devi enters into them. The upanishadic Tat-anupravisya—तदनुप्रविश्य (during the process of creation) is brought to our minds here by the use of the word Visasi—विशसि. There the Lord is said to enter into the world created by Him out of Himself. Here Daya Devi is said to enter into the bodies adopted by Him during His incarnations.

The words prabruti—प्रभृति—and the word aadi—आदि—have been deliberately used to include the Hamsavatara of the Lord by suggestion. It is not one of the ten notable avatars. Hence it is not named, but left to be understood, since there is no intention to specify it. The ancient saying extracted above refers to birds in addition to fish and tortoise, and the process of feeding in regard to birds is indicated by the word samsparśaihi—संस्पर्शैः by close touch or embrace. It is a wellknown fact that birds closely embrace their young ones: in fact hatching is a process of close contact very much akin to embrace.

The protection afforded by the Lord in his incarnations is here pointed out to be a Dayakarya, Daya's act. Having created the world the Lord does not leave it to itself. He casts longing and loving glances at the world. And the world is always in His thoughts. Thereby He protects and helps the world to grow. The desire to protect is furnished by Daya Devi.

The reference to the two incarnations of Matsyavatara and Koormavatara as the bodies of Vrishachalapathi is intended to convey to us Desika's conviction that the Archavatara of the Lord is potent enough to furnish the basis for vibhava-avatara. This is a very noteworthy idea of Desika which finds expression in the Paduka Sahasra and other works in Sanskrit and Tamil. Consistently with those sayings Desika refers to the Vibhava avataara bodies as belonging to Lord Srinivasa, Himself an Archa (Vide also Bhava-to-avataaraan भवतोऽवतारान् of Varadaraja Panchasat).

युगान्तसमये चितं भजति योगनिद्रारसं

वृषक्षितिभृदीश्वरे विहरणक्रमज्जाग्रति ।

उदीर्णचतुर्णवीकदवेदिनीं मेदिनीं

समुद्ध्रुतवती दये त्वदभिजुष्टया दंष्ट्रया ॥

(८३)

Yugaanatasamayochitam bhajati yoganidraarasam

Vrishakshitibrideesvare Viharanakramaat jaagrati ।

Udeernavachaturarnavee kadanavedineem medineem

samuddhrutavatee Daye! tvadabhijushtayaa damshtrayaa ॥ (83)

Daya Devi! At the end of yugas (i.e., at the time of Pralaya) Lord Srinivasa enjoys the pleasures of yoga-nidra (yogic sleep); by the time He, as part of the same sportfulness, gets awake, the earth is swallowed up by the swelling waters of the four seas; and you noting its distress lift it up by means of the Tusk (Tooth) (of the Varaha, Boar) into which you merged (combined).

On one occasion when the world got submerged in water the Lord lifted it up by taking the form of a boar and holding the earth aloft on the Tusk (protruding tooth) of that Boar form. That avatara is the topic of this sloka, but it is to be noted that there is no reference to the Varaha or Boar. It is left to be inferred from the word damshtra—दंष्ट्र. The place of Daya in each avatar is the chief point that Desika wants to drive home, in singing about the avatars here in the Daya Sataka. In this avatara her place is in that tusk which lifted up the earth, 'tvat-abhijushtayaa'—annexed or attached to you. There is a rendering for this phrase as tatabhi-jushtaya damshtrayaa' तदभिजुष्टया meaning the tusk or tooth annexed to Him, the Lord. 'Tvat' is the better reading than 'tat.' The emphasis is on Daya's part in the redemption of earth from water.

Just as seeing and thinking were attributed to Daya in the previous sloka, the uplifting tusk in the Varaha avatara is associated with Daya in this sloka.

Pralaya is nicely referred to here as the period of the Lord's yoga-nidra. It is also said that this sleep is a fitting pastime for the Lord at the end of the yuga. This 'sleep' is resorted to by way of enjoyment by the Lord. It is nidraa-rasam or the pleasure of sleep.

Sleep terminates with awakening. Like sleep, the awakening is also a viharana or sport to the Lord.

The seas are referred to as the four seas—it must mean seas from all the four directions. In the Hindu mythology the number of the seas is seven and not four. (83)

सटापटलभोषणे सरभसादृहासोद्धटे

स्फुरत्क्रुधि परिस्फुटद्भ्रुकुटिकेऽपि वक्त्रे कृते ।

दये वृश्गिरीशितुर्दनुजडिम्भदत्तस्तना

सरोजसदृशा दृशा समुदिताकृतिर्दृश्यसे॥

(८४)

Sataapatalabheeshane sarabhasaattahaasodbhate

sphuratkrudhi parisphutadbhrukutike-api vaktre krite

Daye Vrishagireesitur-Danujadimbhadattastanaa

sarojasadrisaa drisaa samuditaakritir-drishyase

(84)

Daya of Vrishagireesa! Though the frightfulness of the thick cluster of matted hair (mane), the fast and frightening loud roar, and the trembling eye-brows, rendered the face (of the Lion-God, Narasimha) quivering with anger, terrible to look at, you are seen in your full bloom and colours suckling that child (Prahlada) of the demon (Hiranya) through the eyes that resemble the lotus.

This sloka deals with Narasimha Avatara—the incarnation in which the Lord was seen with the body of a man below the neck and the face of a lion above the neck (आकण्ठमादिवूरुपं कण्ठीरवमुपरि). It is a mixture of the lion and the man ((நரம் கலந்த சிங்கம்). In this sloka we see only the lion portion—the face portion. It was terrible to look at. The (sataa) mane was frightening with its cluster (patala) of matted hair. To that was added attahaasa (loud laughter) the terrific roar issuing from the lion's mouth. The eyebrows were quivering (with anger). Indeed the whole face was indicative of the anger that the Lord felt at the atrocities and iniquities of Hiranyakasipu the demon-king in subjecting his own son—a boy—(தன் சிறுவன்) to endless tortures,—all for the fault of daring to talk in his presence about the greatness and might of the Lord. The intensity of that anger is echoed in the words of the first half of this sloka which is intended to describe it.

Just as we are left wondering as to what place, lot, or part, soft and sweetnatured Daya is going to have in this fiery and fire-emitting (எரி கான்ற) process, Desika delights us by giving to us the latter half of the sloka, in soft and mellifluous language—(just the opposite of the language employed in the first half)—which tells us that in the midst of that ferocious face, Daya had her place in the eyes of the Lord,—the soft, sweet, lotus-like eyes, which, so to say, suckled child Prahlada,—the devotee of devotees, and gave him sustenance, strength, and courage.

Danuja is asura, Dimbha is child, Datta-stana is giving and nourishing with breast milk. Daya Devi, mother of all that she is, (Bhuvana-janee—sloka 72 ante) demonstrates that motherhood to Prahlada by giving him that milk. She is now seen blended with the lotus-like eyes of the Lord. ‘Sarojasadrisaa-drisea-samuditaakritir-driseyase.’ The brows of the Lord immediately above the eyes quiver with fire. The mane further up is bristling with anger. The nostrils and the mouth are spitting fire and letting out peals after peals of thundering roar. In between, are the eyes of the Lord, soft, quiet peaceful and unruffled by all that is seen above and below, and those eyes bespeak love and peace, courage and comfort to the child Prahlada. Truly a wonderful pen-picture this. And note the words employed to describe the terror and to describe the peace. Sense and sound fit each other. Who but a Kavi-simha can sing of Nara-simha in such apt and wonderful language?

The word ‘Krite’ कृते of the first half has to be read with the word ‘driseyase’ दृश्यसे with which the sloka ends. Though the face was made to look so terrific, you Daya Devi are seen like a lotus. The use of the word Krite shows that the Lord deliberately took on that fearful face with a view to frighten and subdue that demon-king, who thought he was invulnerable and that there was no god but himself. This mixture of man and lion was also adopted in view of certain boons granted to him by Brahma.

Whatever that may be, the Lord was not able to spoil the beauty of His own eyes and to make them frightful on a par with the rest of the face. For are they not the seat of Daya as enjoyed already in previous slokas such as 42 and 48?

A very great truth is divulged here. The lotus eyes of the Lord are a distinguishing feature and identifying mark of Lord Srinivasa. He is for that reason known and very often referred to in Tamil as Kannan (கண்ணன்), one with Eyes. Markandeya in the Vana-Parva of the Maha Bharata draws attention of Yudhistira and his brothers to those lotus eye Lord Sri Krishna, and asks them to surrender themselves to as He is by that very fact the Lord Supreme. And whatever may be for the supremacy of the Lord, it is Desika's conviction that it is of Daya's making.

The sloka has been hitherto understood only in the light of the words employed and their exact meaning. So understood the eyes of the Lord have been enjoyed as soft and sweet like lotus. But taking the whole of the first half of the sloka calculated to describe that angry face (spuratkrudi) it is impossible to reach the conclusion that to Hiranya,—to strike terror in whose face that fearful lions's face was put on,—even the eyes looked soft and fierce. This is how several Alvars have sung about this aspect (e.g., அனல் விழி, Tirumangai Alvar, ' எரிவட்டக் கண்ட திருமலிசை Alvar) Desika's enjoyment of the Lord has always followed that of the Alvars. So it is intended—we may safely assume—that the eyes also of Lord Narasimha were fearful to Hiranya.

This interpretation is essential to bring out another quality of the Lord—the aghatita-ghatanaa-saamarthyam or capacity to bring together and blend opposites and irreconcilables. The eyes of Lord Narasimha shot out fire and anger to Hiranya the father. At the same time and place, those very eyes exhuded love, affection and compassion to the boy Prahlada, like a lioness exhuding honey. The lioness is capable of frightening the elephant with its fiery and fierce looks (கீ விழித்து as Andal says) even during the time when it is suckling its baby through its teats. That is a place where two different feelings are simultaneously let out from two different organs. But here it is the same organ at the same time emitting fire to one person and secreting milk and honey to another. Desika's poetic genius alone could conceive of, and describe, such a phenomenon.

In a stotra of Desika called Kaamaasikaashtaka this aspect finds a place almost with the same words. The high-sounding first half is there in its entirety. The second half is as follows

कृपाकपटकेसरिन् ! दनुजर्दिभदत्तस्तना

As that sloka is addressed to the Lord, just as this sloka is addressed to Daya, He is called Kripaa-Kapata-Kesarin! meaning "you who out of Kripa or mercy disguised yourself as a lion!" Kesari is the mane, and a lion is known as a Kesari for that reason. The last words of that sloka "Vyatibishajyate Vijayate" व्यतिभिषज्यते व्यज्यते in substitution of "Samuditaakritir-drisyase" of this sloka mean; are seen to doctor (administer medicine) to counteract the father's cruelty.

As in sloka 83, in this sloka of Daya Sataka also no open reference has been made to Narasimha, the avatar which is the topic of this sloka.

प्रसक्तमधुना विधिप्रणिहितैः सपर्योदकैः

समस्तदुरितच्छिदा निगमगन्धिना त्वं दये ।

अशेषमविशेषमस्त्रिजगदञ्जनाद्रिशितु-

श्चरावरमचीकरश्चरणपङ्कजेनाङ्कितम् ॥

(८५)

*Prasaktamadhuna vidhipranihitais-saparyodakaihi
samastaduritachchidaa nigamagandhinaa tvam Daye! ।*

Asesham avisheshatas-trijagad Anjanaadreesituscharaacharam acheekaras-charanapankajenaankitam ॥ (85)

Daya Devi! you made all the three worlds consisting of movable objects and immovable objects, without distinction, bear the imprint (seal) of the lotus Foot of the Lord of Anjanaadri, from which flows honey in the shape of the water offered (to it) by Brahma in worship, a foot which is capable of cutting asunder (dispelling) all sins, and which has the flavour and the perfume of the Vedas.

This sloka deals with Trivikrama avatara. This is the one avatara that has been the subject of frequent praise in the ancient Vedas themselves. Needless to say the Alwars and Andal have celebrated it in their verses in a very large measure. Mahabali, an asura, had in him one great merit. Like the celebrated Karna of the Mahabharata, Bali was a great giver (दाता). The Lord exploited that merit in him, and begged of him in the shape of a dwarf (vamana) three feet of land to be measured by Him with His own foot (என்னுடைய பாதத்தால் யானளப்பமுவடி). In spite of the obstruction offered to such a gift by his own preceptor Sukracharya, Bali promised the Lord what He wanted.

And hardly had Bali said 'yes.' when the Lord grew into mighty proportions, measured all the world in one foot, all the space above in another, and asked Bali, space for the third.

In this act of the Lord reclaiming the world from Bali, Desika sees one great virtue, which no one else has thought of, and sings about it as Daya's grand idea and act, done in the interests of the safety and redemption of mankind. In measuring this earth by His foot the Lord is rightly pointed out as having placed His foot on all objects—chara and achara, moveable and immovable. He is said to have left the imprint (seal) of His foot on all, irrespective of everything (Aviseshataha).

What a lovely and glorious foot? It is a charana-pankaja—a foot that is a lotus. Just as a lotus exhudes honey, this charana-pankaja Foot-lotus, gives out plentiful of honey—rendered more plentiful by the paadya पाद्य (water offered to the feet of respectable persons in worship intended to wash them) that Brahma, the four-faced, offered in worship to the uplifted foot of the Lord in His Trivikrama form. That water is referred to here as saparyodaka,—or water used for worship. Saparya is worship, pooja. Brahma seated in his *Satyalo*ka found all on a sudden the advent of the Lord's foot there and immediately offered paadya to it. That became the Ganges. Here the upama of the lotus is pushed further and the water flowing from the foot which is a lotus is referred to as madhu or honey in that lotus..

The Foot of the Lord is next described as Samasta-duritachchida. All sins are dispelled thereby. Chchedana is forcibly cutting. The sins are all cut asunder by resort, in any form, to the Lord's charana-pankaja.

Nigama-gandhina is the next description. Exhuding the perfume and fragrance of the Vedas. This is a very favourite theme with Desika. Vide वेलातीतश्रुतिपरिमलं—Velateeta sruti parinalam of Bhagavadhyana sopaana and आमोदितोऽपि निगमैर्विभूरङ्गियुग्मे Aamoditopinigamairvibhurangriyugme of Goda stuti. सर्वे वेदाः त्वदमामनन्ति Sarve-vedaha-yatpadam-aamananti. All the Vedas deal only with His Feet. So they have the fragrance of the Vedas.

The Lord's charana pankaja is the seal. The whole world—may the three worlds—got that seal affixed on them. Who put seal on them? Daya herself. Note “Tvam Daye!” at the of the second paada. Tvam ankitam acheekaraha—You made world) bear that mark or imprint of the seal. In all the other s of this decad where the sacred Hill of Tirumala is referred is Vrishaachala, Vrishadri and so on. In this sloka alone, ver, it is referred to as Anjanaadri—the collyrium Hill. Anjana ollyrium is a thick black paste very often used to bedeck the with, especially by ladies. Here, where the imprint of a seal theme of the sloka, the reference to that black paste is obviously oseful. Anjana serves the purpose of the ink that is used it seals on documents nowadays.

To put our mark or name on a book or paper is to indicate that book or paper belongs to us. Daya Devi by affixing the seal e Lord’s Foot, which has several marks on it

शङ्करथाङ्गकल्पकध्वजारविन्दाङ्कुशवज्रलान्छनम् ।

scribed by Alavandar in his Stotra Ratna, makes it certain the entire world belongs to the Lord and is His property. for us to realise this, that we are His property. Not only utting the mark of His foot on our heads, but by the wafting e fragrance of the Vedas towards us, Daya Devi reminds us we are His property. And by the touch of that foot our re all banished and we become pure.

This is what Trivikrama achieved, claiming all the worlds as own and indelibly sealing them with the seal of His feet. This ain the work of Daya.

This sloka is the vital sloka in this decad. The ‘nirupadhi va’ of the Lord is beautifully brought out by the word ‘avisheha.’ It means without any distinction difference or discrimi- n. It also means without any merit or value. Ramanuja s gadya has referred to the Lord as ‘Anaalochita-visesha- a-loka-saranya’ अनालोचितविशेष अशेषलोकशरण्य.

He is the refuge of all, and one who never pauses to look y merit in them. The words of this sloka remind us of that ption by adopting that sentiment and employing those very asesha and visesha. This glory of the Lord was best demons- in His Trivikrama avataara, and is a feather—nay, a bright —in the cap of Daya Devi.

परश्वधतपोधनप्रथनसत्कतूपाकृत-

क्षितीश्वरपशुक्षरत्क्षतत्रकुङ्कुमस्थसकैः ।

वृषाचलदयालुना ननु विहर्तुमालिप्यथा

निधाय हृदये दये निहतरक्षितानां हितम् । (८६)

Parasvatha tapodhana prathana satkratoopaakritakshiteesvara pasuksharat kshatajakumkumasthaasakaihi

Vrishaachaladayaalunaa nanu vihartum aalipyathaa-nidhaaya hridaye Daye! nihatarakshitaanaamihitam (86)

Daya Devi! It looks to me that the merciful Lord of Vrishachala has sneared you in sport with the kumkum-like blood flowing from the bodies of the kings of this earth who were slain like cows in the sacrificial Yaga of warfare conducted by that person rich in religious penance and holding a battle axe (in his hand) (Parasurama), with the idea of securing the safety of those who are rescued and protected by being killed.

Parasuramavatara is dealt with in this sloka. Parasurama and Balarama are, as already stated, included in the Dasavataaras, but they are avatars differing from the other avatars in several important respects. Firstly they are not the incarnations of the Lord Himself fully. Parasurama is Avesaavataara. आवेशावतार. Balarama is an incarnation of Adishesha. Avesaavataara means the Lord entering into an individual soul in an intense and intensive manner. Parasurama was born as a Brahmin, son of a great sage Jamadagni. To secure His purposes, the Lord entered into that person, and for that reason that avatar is celebrated as an avatar of the Lord Himself. The aavesa आवेश or entry of the Lord ended when Parasurama confronted Sri Rama, the next avatar. Parasurama is believed to be still alive, being one of the chira-jeevinaas चिरजीविनाः like Hanuman and Aswathama.

That apart, Parasurama's one great work was the extermination of the Kshatriya Vamsa (race of kings), not once but 21 times. Because his father Jamadagni was killed by some Kshatriyas, he took the terrible vow of destroying all Kshatriyas. This he achieved by indulging in an orgy of war and killing. As explained by Lord Sri Krishna in the Vibhoothi Adhyaya of the Bhagavat Geeta, no one can achieve anything of importance except by the kings of this land, Parasurama was infused with the spirit of the Lord. The Kings deserved to be killed because they were evil-minded and sinful. By being punished for their sins they were really benefited, for it is believed that punishment of that sort results in the safety of the killed, who are totally redeemed from their sins and taken to the higher worlds. In Śrīmad Ramayana Kishkinda Kanda, Śrī Rama says that Manu has laid down

राजभिर्धृनदण्डास्तु कृत्वा पापानि मानवाः ।

निर्मलास्वर्गमायाति सन्तः सुकृतिनो यथा ॥ (18-33)

(Persons who having committed sins and crimes, get punished therefor by the Kings of the land, become pure (devoid of sin and crime) and attain swarga (the land of the gods) even like good people get them by their good deeds).

This truth is summarised in this sloka by the words निहतरक्षितानां हितं nihatarakshitaanaam hitam—the welfare (hita) attained by those who are protected by being killed, as a punishment. That the Lord as Parasurama had this in mind when destroying the Kshatriyas is expressed by the words—निधाया—nidhaaya—and हृदये, Hrudaye having in mind—keeping in mind—this truth about hita being conferred on those who are slain.

The other analogy of a yaga यज्ञ also emphasises this meaning. The warfare in which Parasurama killed the kings is referred to as a kratu—ऋतु or yagna यज्ञ—a religious sacrifice. It is a sat-kratu सत्क्रतु—a good and holy sacrifice. The pasu पशु or animal that is sacrificed at yagas and yagnas, it is believed, goes to Swarga. So too the Kings mowed down by Parasurama are indicated as having attained Swargaloka.

The reference to Parasurama by the words 'parasvatha-tapodhana' is itself significant. He was referred to as asahanamuni in Sloka 64. Here he is the axe-handed tapasvi—an apparent contradiction. In prathana satkratu there are two aspects, war and yaga. Parasvatha indicates war, and Tapodhana indicates yaga.

War, cruelty and destruction have no place in Daya's dictionary. As such, it is only the hita or welfare that is worked thereby that gives Parasurama and his actions a place in Daya Sataka. That aspect is stressed in this sloka and referred to as nihata-rakshana, protection of the killed.

Even so Desika does not desire to associate Daya with Parasurama's act. Instead he refers to Vrishaachala-Dayalu the merciful

Resident of Vrishachala as having been responsible for the massacre wrought by Parasurama.

It is up to every one to enjoy the nice trick played by Desika in this sloka of deliberately referring to Parasurama's cruel feats not as Daya's acts but as those of the Dayala of Vrishachala. What is more, all along what Daya has done to the Lord has been mentioned in several ways and several places. This is the only sloka which sings of what the Lord does to Daya. He is said to smear Daya Devi with the blood of the sacrificial cows—kings—in sport—vihartum विहर्तुं. It is intended as a saffron-paste. Kumkuma is saffron and sthaasaka is perfume or fragrant unguents. Aalipyathaha आलिप्यथाः is smearing, here with perfumery unguents.

That Desika has sung this sloka in this wise to find a place even for Parasurama avataara in this Daya Sataka is clear from the use of the word Nanu ननु. Is it not so? It must be so. At least it looks to me to be so.

कृपे कृतजगद्धिते कृपणजन्तुचिन्तामणे

रमासहचरं क्षितौ रघुधुरीणयन्त्या त्वया ।

व्यभज्यत सरित्पतिः सकृदवेक्षणात्तक्षणा-

त्प्रकृष्टबहुपातकप्रशमहेतुना सेतुना ॥

(८७)

Kripe! Kritajagaddhite! Kripanajantuchintaamane!

Ramaasahacharam kshitaau Raghudhureenayantiyaa tvayaa ।

Vyabhajyata saritpatis-sakrid avekshanaat tatkshanaat prakrishta bahupaatakaprasumahejunaa setunaa ॥ (87).

Kripa Devi! Doer of good to the world! Bestower of desires on helpless and hapless beings! It is only by you,—who made the Lord, who is ever followed by Lakshmi, come (into this world) as the chief of Raghu's race, in those days (i.e., at the time of Ramavatar),—that the great ocean (lord of the rivers) was divided into two by means of a bridge (Sethu) which, by a single sight of it, is capable of instantaneously subduing (quelling) all numerous heinous sins.

Parasurama to Sri Rama—what a pleasant and pleasing transition! Parasurama is also a Rama. Balarama who is to come next is also a Rama. But when one says Rama, no one thinks of any one except Sri Rama, celebrated by Valmiki in the greatest epic of all times, Srimad Ramayana. Parasurama and Balarama are Ramas with prefixes. Rama simpliciter is Sri Rama.

Desika has said elsewhere the greatness of Rama has made possible for anyone else to answer to that name (நாம சப்தம் ஈ ப் டா தபடி.)

It is here said that it is Daya who made the Lord a Raghu-ena, the chief of the race of Raghu. That is why out of the avatars, this avatara alone is enjoyed by Desika in the Dasava-stotra by the term 'Karunaa Kaakusta.' करुणा काकुत्स्थ was so great and noble that he gave his name to the race which he belonged—the Soorya Vamsa. He was also one who established the Saranagati cult by his conduct. While enumerating the notable Saranyaas, or protectors of those who take refuge in them, Desika has included Raghu's name among them मित्र कपोत वानर रघुव्योमाध्वग प्रेयसी.....Abhayapradana Saaram.

It is here said to have made the Lord a Raghu-dhureena, the chief of Raghu's race and also a leader among Saranyaas,—the name being indicative not only of the race of Raghu but also of the race of protectors of prapannas. Thus an important aspect of Ramavataara is mentioned, and Daya said to be responsible for it, Saranaagata Samrakshana, which was the declared vrata (vow) of Sri Rama

सकृदेव प्रपन्नाय तवासीति च याचते ।

अभयं सर्वभूतेभ्यो ददाम्येतत् व्रतं मम ॥

There are ever so many points of merit in Ramavataara. In this loka Desika emphasises the legacy left by Him of the Sethu bridge across the sea, built during Ramavataara, as the most outstanding feature of Ramavataara for the benefit of posterity. He came and went, but the Setu He built is a permanent relic of that glorious avataara, and is today saving millions of people from getting a mere sight of it "Setum Dhrishta"—सेतुं दृष्ट्वा by seeing the Setu or bridge,—so goes an ancient vachana (vow)—all sins disappear. तं वीक्ष्य सेतुं अघुनापि शरीरवन्तः सर्वे षड्भिर्गुणैर्लक्ष्य तरन्ति. (Varadaraja Panchasat). By seeing that Setu, those born in this world are able to cross the ocean of samsara. Setu was built to make Rama and His army to cross into Lanka. That selfsame Setu helps us to cross the ocean of samsara and reach the glorious city of the Lord's Feet (see 51 ante).

Sarita is river. Sarit-pati is the lord of the rivers—i.e., the Lord. It was vyabhajyata—divided into two by Daya who by king the Lord become Rama was responsible for the erection the Setu or bridge, dam, across the ocean. Setu darsana and husnana are held very sacred by all Hindus and are believed cleanse us of all our sins. And that is Dayakaarya—the work Daya.

The reference to Mahalakshmi the consort of the Lord in s sloka must be specially enjoyed. There was no reference Her in any of the previous slokas of this decad. Her place the Ramavatara is unique. The Ramayana itself is called taayaascharitam mahat” सीतायाश्चरितं महत्. Her place in Saranaa-i, and Her having been responsible for the construction of Setu, do require that prominent mention should be made about r in a sloka about Ramavatara. “Raghavatve-abhavat-Sita” त्वेऽभवत् सीता रुक्मिणी कृष्णजन्मनि ...is what the Vishnu Purana said. To sing about the Raghu-dhureena without mentioning ta will be improper and incomplete. As She follows Him each avatar as stated in that sloka of Vishnu Purana, the refece to Him in this sloka is as Ramaa-sahacharam—रमा सहचरम् who is followed by Rama (Lakshmi). Or is it one who follows kshmi? Vide अग्रतस्ते गमिष्यामि “She” is understood in every itara, but in the Ramavatara she is very prominent. In Krishnaa-aara again as Rukmini, Lakshmi fills an important place, and in the next sloka but one She is going to be referred to.

Another special feature of this sloka is two extra sambhuddis (catives) in her praise, in addition to the usual Kripe! One Krita-jagad-hite!—one who accomplishes the welfare of the rld. The other is Kripana-jantu-chintamane! Chintamani is it mythological precious gem which like the Kalpaka tree is able of conferring all desired boons. To those who realise it they are Kripanaas, helpless beings, Daya is the Chintamani, ferer of all boons and desires. One of the qualities referred in Valmiki's classical questionnaire to Narada is contained in : question ‘Sarva-bhooteshu-Ko-hitaha’ सर्वभूतेषु को हितः The rds Krita-jagat-hite reflect that quality of the Lord. The Lord's त्र्यम्बज्जनसंरक्षण दीक्षा is summarised by the epithet Kripana-jantu-ntamane! Daya's great qualities are best reflected in Rama o for that reason is known as Karunaakaakutstha—करुणाकाकुत्स्थः

कृपे परवत्स्वया धृषगिरीशितुः क्रीडितं

As Desika has said elsewhere the greatness of Rama has made it impossible for anyone else to answer to that name (ராம சப்தம் ஈரரக பபாதுபடி.)

It is here said that it is Daya who made the Lord a Raghu-dhureena, the chief of the race of Raghu. That is why out of all the avatars, this avatara alone is enjoyed by Desika in the Dasavataara stotra by the term 'Karunaa Kaakusta.' करुणा काकुत्स्थ Raghu was so great and noble that he gave his name to the race to which he belonged—the Soorya Vamsa. He was also one who established the Saranagati cult by his conduct. While enumerating the notable Saranyaas, or protectors of those who take refuge in them, Desika has included Raghu's name among them विश्वामित्र कपोत वानर रघुव्योमाध्वन प्रेयसी.....Abhayapradana Saaram. Daya is here said to have made the Lord a Raghu-dhureena, a chief of Raghu's race and also a leader among Saranyaas,—Raghu being indicative not only of the race of Raghu but also of the race of protectors of prapannas. Thus an important aspect of Ramavatara is mentioned, and Daya said to be responsible for it, viz., Saranaagata Samrakshana, which was the declared vrata (resolve) of Sri Rama

सकृदेव प्रपन्नाय तवास्मीति च याचते ।

अभयं सर्वभूतेभ्यो दद्याम्येतत् व्रतं मम ॥

There are ever so many points of merit in Ramavatara. In this sloka Desika emphasises the legacy left by Him of the Sethu or bridge across the sea, built during Ramavatara, as the most outstanding feature of Ramavatara for the benefit of posterity. Rama came and went, but the Setu He built is a permanent relic of that glorious avatara, and is today saving millions of people who get a mere sight of it "Setum Dhrishta"—सेतुं दृष्ट्वा merely by seeing the Setu or bridge,—so goes an ancient vachana (word)—all sins disappear. तं वीक्ष्य सेतुं अचुनापि शरीरवन्तः सर्वे षड्भि बहून् जलधिं तरन्ति. (Varadaraja Panchasat). By seeing that Setu today, those born in this world are able to cross the ocean of samsara. Setu was built to make Rama and His army to cross over into Lanka. That selfsame Setu helps us to cross the ocean of Samsara and reach the glorious city of the Lord's Feet (see sloka 51 ante).

Sarit is river. Sarit-pati is the lord of the rivers—i.e., the ocean. It was vyabhajyata—divided into two by Daya who by ing the Lord become Rama was responsible for the erection of the Setu or bridge, dam, across the ocean. Setu darsana and Snana are held very sacred by all Hindus and are believed to cleanse us of all our sins. And that is Dayakaarya—the work of Daya.

The reference to Mahalakshmi the consort of the Lord in this sloka must be specially enjoyed. There was no reference to her in any of the previous slokas of this decad. Her place in the Ramavatara is unique. The Ramayana itself is called "Ramayaascharitam mahat" सीतायाश्चरितं महत्. Her place in Saranaa—Saranaa—and Her having been responsible for the construction of the Setu, do require that prominent mention should be made about her in a sloka about Ramavatara. "Raghavatve-abhavat-Sita" अभवत् सीता रुक्मिणी कृष्णजन्मनि ...is what the Vishnu Purana says. To sing about the Raghu-dhureena without mentioning her will be improper and incomplete. As She follows Him in each avatar as stated in that sloka of Vishnu Purana, the reference to Him in this sloka is as Ramaa-sahacharam—रमा सहचरम्—who is followed by Rama (Lakshmi). Or is it one who follows Mahalakshmi? Vide अग्रतस्ते गमिष्यामि "She" is understood in every avatar, but in the Ramavatara she is very prominent. In Krishnaa-avatara again as Rukmini, Lakshmi fills an important place, and in the next sloka but one She is going to be referred to.

Another special feature of this sloka is two extra sambhuddhis (attributes) in her praise, in addition to the usual Kripa! One is Krita-jagad-hite!—one who accomplishes the welfare of the world. The other is Kripa-jantu-chintamane! Chintamani is a mythological precious gem which like the Kalpaka tree is capable of conferring all desired boons. To those who realise that they are Kripa-naas, helpless beings, Daya is the Chintamani, the giver of all boons and desires. One of the qualities referred to in Valmiki's classical questionnaire to Narada is contained in the question 'Sarva-bhooteshu-Ko-hitaha' सर्वभूतेषु को हितः The qualities of Krita-jagad-hite reflect that quality of the Lord. The Lord's Kripa-jantu-samskara-diksha is summarised by the epithet Kripa-jantu-chintamane! Daya's great qualities are best reflected in Rama for that reason is known as Karunaakaakutstha—करुणाकाकुत्स्थः

कृपे परवत्स्वया वृषगिरीशितुः क्रीडितं

मदच्छलपरिच्युतप्रणतदुष्कृतप्रेक्षितै-

र्हतप्रबलदानवैर्हलवरस्य हेलाशतैः ॥

(८८)

ne! paravatas-tvayaa Vrishagireesituh kreeditam jagaddhitam aseshatas-tadidam ittam arthaapyate । lachchalaparichyutapranata dushkritaprekshitairhataprabaladaanavair-Haladharasya helaasataihi ॥

(88)

Kripa Devi! All the sportings (leela) without exception of the l of Vrishaadri, Who is ever amenable and subservient to you, (because of that very fact) calculated for the hita or welfare re world. This is well borne out by the hundreds of sports, ined in by that wielder of the plough (Balarama), which overlook, fail to attach importance to, the misdeeds of those who pay sance (bend themselves in salutation), ostensibly because of inety (due to heavy drinking), and which are responsible for killing al strong and noted asuras.

As already mentioned in the commentary on Sloka 86, Balaa is a secondary avatara of the Lord. Sesha (Adisesha) the ent-Couch of the Lord was born as Lakshmana when the l came as Rama, and as Balarama when the Lord came as hna. As the younger brother in the earlier avatara and as elder brother in the later avatara, Lakshmana and Balarama actively occupy a subordinate position and play a secondary

If anger was the keynote to Parasurama's acts, drink is Balas favourite pastime. Excessive drink leads to intoxication ng such moments vision is blurred. That is caught hold 7 Desika here nicely, and it is stated that vision being dim, nition of the faults of those, who have appealed for succour ing obeisance (pranata), slips, with the result that their faults noticed. In sloka 8 at the beginning of this stotra some of dosha-adarsanatvam दोषादर्शनत्वं (fault-unseeingness) was uted to the Lord Himself. That was caused by the amours eela Devi. In this Balaramavataar, there is the same lack cing note of the devotee's faults; but this is due to drink.

Overlooking sins is what Daya Devi is anxious to bring about : Lord, so that those sins may not stand in the way of His ding His protection to his pranataas (worshippers). That is achieved in Balaramavataara by His frequently getting drunk, and not being in a position to take note of the sins of pranataas. This is a novel method of discovering merit even in drunkenness. But as already stated, Desika is hard put to find points in Parasurama and Balarama for being enjoyed as part of the praise of Daya.

The other merit in the sports of Balarama is referred to in 'hata-prabala-daanavaihi'—the destruction of the more noted asuras. Along with Krishna, Balarama has been responsible for the destruction of several asuras who were all sent by Kamsa to do away with Balarama and Krishna. That sort of asura-nirāsana is referred to here.

Just as Parasurama has an axe as his weapon, Balarama has a plough (hala—हल) as his weapon. It is said that with that plough He dragged the whole city of Hastinapura into the Ganges. So Balarama is here referred to as Haladhara.

हेला—Hela is sport, play, Helaa-sata हेलाशत is hundreds of such sport.

From the above-mentioned two-fold merit in Balarama's sportiveness, it is stated that all the Kreeditvam or playfulness of the Lord is conceived for the benefit (hita) of humanity. The reason for it is not far to seek. The Lord is Daya-paratantra—dependent on and subservient to Daya Devi. Hence even His sports are beneficial to mankind. That Balarama's sports confirm his theory by illustrating it, is the purport of this sloka. In the Dasavatara Stotra, it is said that Balarama's leelas sweeten Krishna's leelas, like sugar sweetening milk.

प्रभूतविबुधद्विषद्भरणखिन्नविश्वंभरा-

भरापनयनच्छलात्त्वमवतार्य लक्ष्मीधरम् ।

निराकृतवती दये निगमसौधदीपश्रिया

विपश्चिदविगीतया जगति गीतायान्धं तमः ॥ (८९)

prabhoota vibudhadvishad bharanakhinna Visvambharaa-

bharaapanayanachchhalaat tvam avataarya Lakshmeedharam ।

Virāakritavatee Daye! nigamasaudhadeepasriyaa

vipaschidavigeetayaa jagati Geetayaa andham tamaha ॥ (89)

Prabhoota vibudhadvishad bharanakhinna Visvambharaa-

carry (on her back) innumerable and mighty foes of the Devas, you made Him, who carries Lakshmi (on His chest), to come down to this earth, and (thereby) drove out all inner (mental) darkness with the help of the Bhagavat Geeta, whose beautiful effulgence is calculated to shed light and lustre on the lofty mansion of the Vedas, and whose greatness is accepted and praised by learned men the world over.

Krishna Avatara is being praised in this verse. Rama and Krishna as avatars excel the other avatars in ever so many respects. But there is one aspect in each of these two avatars which Desika draws our attention to, in the slokas devoted to the two of them. It is only these two avatars that have left permanent and imperishable relics of their having come and gone. The Setu (bridge over the sea) and the Geeta are those two respective relics. So Desika sings in these slokas of Daya's great help rendered to succeeding generations of humanity in the shape of these two emblems of the Lord's love towards all men.

Krishna the child is the darling of humanity. That aspect partakes of leela or kreedā. In Desika's view Karuna is the keynote of Ramavatara and Kreedā of Krishnaavatara. That is why Rama is referred to as Karunaa-Kaakusta and Krishna as Kreedā-Vallabha, in the Dasavatara Stotra. This sloka devoted to Krishnaavatara does not touch upon that sportful Child at all. Instead, taking its stand on the declaration of Lord Sri Krishna in the Geeta about the raison d'être of His avataara in general the sloka dwells upon two important aspects, the wiping out of the asura elements which made the earth over-run by evil, and the promulgation of the Geeta. It is easily seen that duskkrit vīnaasa is mentioned in the earlier portion of the sloka. The reference to Geeta in the latter portion has to be understood in its two-fold aspect, viz., Sadhu-paritrana and Dharma Samsthāpana. Which other work has the same capacity to make Sadhus of all men, and to protect them? And which other has been able to put dharma on a firm pedestal as Geeta has done? So it is that this sloka on Krishnaavatara is conceived this wise.

परित्नाणाय साधूनां विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् ।

धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय संभवामि युगे युगे ॥

The Dasamaskanda of the Srimad Bhagavata Purana starts with the episode of Mother Earth going to Brahmadeva in the form of a cow, and appealing to him for help to wipe off the load of sinners, under whose atrocities she was suffering misery. That is brought to our minds here by the word 'Vishvambharaa-bhara-apanayana' विश्वम्भराभर-अपनयन, meaning relieving the earth from burden. Who make for that burden? Mother Earth is known for her patience. What or who is it that makes even her lose patience and begin to complain? The answer is furnished by the expression "prabhoota-vibhuda-dvishad-bharachinna." Suffering because of the weight of the large number of the Devas' foes.

That the extermination of asuras is done for the protection of the Devas is very naively brought out by referring to them as asuras but as the foes of the Devas. The Lord Himself has no friends and no foes. The foes of those who look up to Him for protection are His foes, as Krishna Himself explained to Duryodhana when the latter wanted to play the host to the Pandavas. 'Taking food from a foe is taboo—so too feeding a foe. You are the Pandavas; and the Pandavas are the very life of my

द्विषदन्नं न भोक्तव्यं द्विषन्तं नैव भोजयेत् ।

पाण्डवान् द्विषसे राजन् मम प्राणा हि पाण्डवाः ॥

We are reminded of this truth by the expression Vibhuda-dvishad to denote the asuras.

Even more significant and beautiful is the use of the word "chchala," meaning pretext. The purpose of wiping out the asuras and thereby relieving the world of its burden is referred to as a chchala or a pretext, a guise, a semblance. This is the chief object (मुख्यप्रयोजनं) of avatara as indicated by the word 'cha' च in "Vinaasaaya-cha-dushkritaam." In the guise of sending the Lord to this world for the purpose of exterminating the evil forces of the asuras, you have really given to us the mortal and priceless Geeta,—that is the praise of Daya that this sloka contains.

The previous sloka used the word "chchala," Madachha parichyuta-pranata-dushkrita-prekshitaihi. On the pretext of being drunk, notice is not taken of the errors of followers. The Lord as Balarama did not really get drunk was nicely indicated there. He pretended to have got intoxicated and therefore was in a position to see the fault in His devotees. The same word 'chchala' is used here again to bring out another great truth

Avataarya—having made the Lord descend. Compare tva-nidesena-noonam-bhajati-janmabhedaan' of sloka 35 ante. It is Daya that is responsible for the Lord's avatars.

'Lakshmee-dharam'; As already indicated Lakshmi is made specific mention of only in regard to Ramavatara and Krishna-vatara. There it was Ramaa-sahacharam because it was an avatar in which the Two together traversed the entire Bharatavarsha. Here it is Lakshmee-dharam—He who always carries Her as part of Himself. Lakshmee-dhara is a synonym for Srinivasa, the God whose Daya is the subject of this stotra.

Having made the Lord and Sri descend into this earth as Krishna and Rukmini, ostensibly for the destruction of asuras, what is it that Daya Devi really achieved? That is dealt with in the second half of the sloka. The first and last words of that half are 'Niraakritavatee' and 'tamaha' respectively. Put together they mean "you have dispelled darkness"

How, by what? 'deepasriyaa Geetaya'—By a beautiful light known as the Geeta.

The greatness of the Geeta is enjoyed in two ways by two epithets. The first is Nigama-saudha-deepa-sriya-geetaya,—by the Geeta which adorns and illuminates the palatial mansion known as the Vedas. saudha is a big and beautiful mansion. Here Nigama (or the Vedas) is referred to as the saudha. The Vedas themselves are Knowledge and are very often referred to as light (வேதவிளக்கு). Vide Saastra-mayena-stira-pradeepena—sloka 18 ante. It is Desika's conviction that without the Bhagavat Geeta given out by the Lord Himself, and the Prabhandas (Tamil) given out by the Lord's own devotees, who intuited Him by His grace, the Vedas would not have yielded to us their true meaning. The light of the Geeta is praised here. The other light (Prabhandas) is praised thus: நான்மறையந்திநடைவிளங்கவெளிகாட்டும்மெய் விளக்கு The Geeta throws light on those Vedas themselves and so it is referred to as Deepa, and the Vedas as the saudha, the mansion in and on which it sheds its lustre. The Geeta is a short and succinct summary of the elaborate and endless Vedas, whose true meaning it would have been difficult, if not impossible, to find but for the advent of the Geeta.

The other epithet in praise of the Geeta is Vipaschit—avigeetaya. Vipaschit indicates learned and wise men, pundits. Vigeeti asure, disapproval. Avigeeeti is the opposite of it and therefore is approval and praise. If there is one treatise on matters virit which has always found, is finding now, and which will find, universal approval, approbation, and adoption,—it is undoubtedly the Bhagavat Geeta. If we remember that into it every language now prevalent in the world, the Geeta has been and is being translated, Desika's words ' Vipaschit-avigee-' would almost appear to be prophetic.

By such a Geeta, the world has been able to discard darkness, ignorance, and revel in light and knowledge. And that is the achievement of Daya Devi. As already indicated the dispelling of darkness is what was really wrought by Daya in and by her bringing the Lord into this world as Lord Sri Krishna.

वृषाद्रिहयसादिनः प्रबलदोर्मस्तुप्रक्षित-

स्त्विषा स्फुटतटिद्रुणस्त्वदवसेकसंस्कारवान् ।

करिष्यति दये कलिप्रबलधर्मनिर्मूलनः

पुनः कृतयुगाङ्कुरं भुवि कृपाणधाराधरः ॥ (९०)

aadrihayasaadinah prabaladormarutprenkhitasvishaa sphutatatidgunas-tvadavasekasamskaaravaan ।

hyati Daye! kaliprabalagharmanirmoolanah
nunah Kritayugaaankuram Bhuvi kripaana dhaaraadharaha ॥ (90)

Daya Devi! The cloud that is the Sword in the hand of the Horse- of Vrishadri, swung vigorously by the quick movements of his mighty hand, having the brightness of lightning, purified and cooled by being dipped in you, and capable of dispelling the strong excessive heat engendered by Kaliyuga, is sure to establish in the earth the sprouts that will again bring in the Krita Yuga.

Krishnaavatara is the last of the incarnations that the Lord has assumed up till now. It is said that at the end of this Kali-yuga the Lord will come into the world once again as a mighty warrior riding a horse and holding a sword or sabre in his hand to mow down evil and evil-minded men. That avatar is referred to as the Kalki avatar and is sung about by all the puranas. The Deva in his celebrated Geeta Govindam sings about it thus:

म्लेच्छनिवहनिधने कलयसि करवालं

धूमकेतमिव किमपि करालं

carry (on her back) innumerable and mighty foes of the Devas, you made Him, who carries Lakshmi (on His chest), to come down to this earth, and (thereby) drove out all inner (mental) darkness with the help of the Bhagavat Geeta, whose beautiful effulgence is calculated to shed light and lustre on the lofty mansion of the Vedas, and whose greatness is accepted and praised by learned men the world over.

Krishna Avatara is being praised in this verse. Rama and Krishna as avatars excel the other avatars in ever so many respects. But there is one aspect in each of these two avatars which Desika draws our attention to, in the slokas devoted to the two of them. It is only these two avatars that have left permanent and imperishable relics of their having come and gone. The Setu (bridge over the sea) and the Geeta are those two respective relics. So Desika sings in these slokas of Daya's great help rendered to succeeding generations of humanity in the shape of these two emblems of the Lord's love towards all men.

Krishna the child is the darling of humanity. That aspect partakes of leela or kreedā. In Desika's view Karuna is the keynote of Ramavatara and Kreedā of Krishnaavatara. That is why Rama is referred to as Karunaa-Kaakusta and Krishna as Kreedā-Vallabha, in the Dasavatara Stotra. This sloka devoted to Krishnaavatara does not touch upon that sportful Child at all. Instead, taking its stand on the declaration of Lord Sri Krishna in the Geeta about the raison d'être of His avatara in general the sloka dwells upon two important aspects, the wiping out of the asura elements which made the earth over-run by evil, and the promulgation of the Geeta. It is easily seen that duskrit vīnaasa is mentioned in the earlier portion of the sloka. The reference to Geeta in the latter portion has to be understood in its two-fold aspect, viz., Sadhu-paritrana and Dharma Samsthapana. Which other work has the same capacity to make Sadhus of all men, and to protect them? And which other has been able to put dharma on a firm pedestal as Geeta has done? So it is that this sloka on Krishnavatara is conceived this wise.

परित्नाणाय साधूनां विनाशाय च दुष्कृताम् ।

धर्मसंस्थापनार्थाय संभवामि युगे युगे ॥

The Dasamaskanda of the Srimad Bhagavata Purana starts with the episode of Mother Earth going to Brahmadeva in the

of a cow, and appealing to him for help to wipe off the heavy of sinners, under whose atrocities she was suffering untold y. That is brought to our minds here by the words hvambharaa-bhara-apanayana” विष्वभराभर-अपनयन, meaning ing the earth from burden. Who make for that burden? Her Earth is known for her patience. What or who is it that s even her lese patience and begin to complain? The answer is shed by the expression “prabhoota-vibhuda-dvishad-bharana-ia.” Suffering because of the weight of the large number e Devas’ foes.

That the extermination of asuras is done for the protection e Devas is very naively brought out by referring to them not uras but as the foes of the Devas. The Lord Himself has iends and no foes. The foes of those who look up to Him rotection are His foes, as Krishna Himself explained to odhana when the latter wanted to play the host to the Lord. ing food from a foe is taboo—so too feeding a foe. You hate andavas; and the Pandavas are the very life of my life.”

द्विषन्नं न भोक्तव्यं द्विषन्तं नैव भोजयेत् ।

पाण्डवान् द्विषसे राजन् मम प्राणा हि पाण्डवाः ॥

re reminded of this truth by the expression Vibuda-dvishad note the asuras.

Even more significant and beautiful is the use of the word hala,” meaning pretext. The purpose of wiping out the s and thereby relieving the world of its burden is referred a chchala or a pretext, a guise, a semblance. This is not chief object (मुख्यप्रयोजनं) of avatara as indicated by the ’ च in “Vinaasaaya-cha-dushkritaam.” In the guise of ng the Lord to this world for the purpose of exterminating vil forces of the asuras, you have really given to us the im- al and priceless Geeta,—that is the praise of Daya that this contains.

The previous sloka used the word “chchala,” Madachchala- hyuta-pranata-dushkrita-prekshitaihi. On the pretence of : drunk, notice is not taken of the errors of followers. That ord as Balarama did not really get drunk was nicely indicated . He pretended to have got intoxicated and therefore not osition to see the fault in His devotees. The same word al is used here again to bring out another great truth

Avataarya—having made the Lord descend. Compare tvannidesena-noonam-bhajati-janmabhedaan' of sloka 35 ante. It is Daya that is responsible for the Lord's avatars.

'Lakshmee-dharam'; As already indicated Lakshmi is made specific mention of only in regard to Ramavatara and Krishna-vatara. There it was Ramaa-sahacharam because it was an avatar in which the Two together traversed the entire Bharatavarsha.
Here it is Lakshmee-dharam—He who always carries Her as part of Himself. Lakshmee-dhara is a synonym for Srinivasa, the God whose Daya is the subject of this stotra.

Having made the Lord and Sri descend into this earth as Krishna and Rukmini, ostensibly for the destruction of asuras, what is it that Daya Devi really achieved? That is dealt with in the second half of the sloka. The first and last words of that half are 'Niraakritavatee' and 'tamaha' respectively. Put together they mean "you have dispelled darkness"

How, by what? 'deepasriyaa Geetaya'—By a beautiful light known as the Geeta.

The greatness of the Geeta is enjoyed in two ways by two epithets. The first is Nigama-saudha-deepa-sriya-geetaya,—by the Geeta which adorns and illuminates the palatial mansion known as the Vedas. saudha is a big and beautiful mansion.
Here Nigama (or the Vedas) is referred to as the saudha. The Vedas themselves are Knowledge and are very often referred to as light (வேதவிளக்கு). Vide Saastra-mayena-stira-pradeepena—sloka 18 ante. It is Desika's conviction that without the Bhagavat Geeta given out by the Lord Himself, and the Prabhandas (Tamil) given out by the Lord's own devotees, who intuited Him by His grace, the Vedas would not have yielded to us their true meaning.
The light of the Geeta is praised here. The other light (Prabhandas) is praised thus: நான்மறையந்திநடைவிளங்கவெளிகாட்டும்மெய் விளக்கு The Geeta throws light on those Vedas themselves and so it is referred to as Deepa, and the Vedas as the saudha, the mansion in and on which it sheds its lustre. The Geeta is a short and succinct summary of the elaborate and endless Vedas, whose true meaning it would have been difficult, if not impossible, to find but for the advent of the Geeta.

The other epithet in praise of the Geeta is Vipaschit—avigee-taya. Vipaschit indicates learned and wise men, pundits. Vigeeti

s censure, disapproval. Avigeeti is the opposite of it and there means approval and praise. If there is one treatise on mā of spirit which has always found, is finding now, and which ever find, universal approval, approbation, and adoption,—undoubtedly the Bhagavat Geeta. If we remember that almost every language now prevalent in the world, the C has been and is being translated, Desika's words 'Vipaschit-avaya' would almost appear to be prophetic.

By such a Geeta, the world has been able to discard dark and ignorance, and revel in light and knowledge. And the achievement of Daya Devi. As already indicated the dispel of darkness is what was really wrought by Daya in and by bringing the Lord into this world as Lord Sri Krishna.

वृषाद्रिहयसादिनः प्रबलदोर्मस्तप्रक्ष्वित-

स्त्विषा स्फुटतटिद्रुणस्त्वदवसेकसंस्कारवान् ।

करिष्यति दये कलिप्रबलघर्मनिर्मूलनः

पुनः कृतयुगाङ्कुरं भुवि कृपाणधाराधरः ॥

(९०)

Vrishaadrihayasaadinah prabaladormarutprenkhitastvishaa sphutatatidgunas-tvadavasekasamskaaravaan ।

Karishyati Daye! kaliprabalagharmanirmoolanah

punah Kriitayugaankuram Bhuvi kripaana dhaaraadharaha ॥

Daya Devi! The cloud that is the Sword in the hand of the Hider of Vrishadri, swung vigorously by the quick movement of the mighty hand, having the brightness of lightning, purified and polished by being dipped in you, and capable of dispelling the storm and excessive heat engendered by Kaliyuga, is sure to establish on the earth the sprouts that will again bring in the Krita Yuga.

Krishnaavataara is the last of the incarnations that the Lord has assumed up till now. It is said that at the end of this Kali Yuga, the Lord will come into the world once again as a mighty warrior riding a horse and holding a sword or sabre in his hand with which to mow down evil and evil-minded men. That avatar is referred to as the Kalki avatar and is sung about by all the pure devotees. Daya Deva in his celebrated Geeta Govindam sings about it

म्लेच्छनिवहनिधने कलयसि करवालं

धमकेतमिव किमपि करालं . . .

Karavaalam means a sword and Desika has sung in this sloka about the same sword of Kalki calling it by another name Kripaana. That sword is compared to a cloud, Kripaana-dhaaradharaha—the sword which is a cloud.

The clouds are made to go hither and thither by the winds. The sword in the hand of Kalki is swung about by the force of the movements of the arm which holds it.

The clouds are frequently lit up by lightning. The sword is so bright that with every movement its lustre simply dazzles.

The clouds are well filled with water from the seas. The sword is well equipped (Samskaaravaan) for its task by being dipped (avaseka) in Daya..

The clouds dispel heat. This sword is going to do away with all the great and mighty forces of evil inflicting harm and distress upon the world in this Kali age. And just as the cloud by its showers helps crops, shrubs, plants and trees to sprout, this sword is going to pave the way for, and establish, the beginnings of the next yuga, the Krita Yuga. Just as useless forests are destroyed and in their place helpful and useful crops are reared, the Sword of Kalki Bhagavan will destroy this evil-saturated world and in its place start a new world based on dharma.

The word Kalki does not find mention here, as indeed the names of several avatars did not in the preceding slokas. But reference is made to Vrishaadri-hayasaadina or the equestrian of Vrishachala—Lord Srinivasa,—and it is the sword in His hand that is going to work havoc with the world at the end of this Yuga, and set the stage ready for the ushering in of Kritayuga. This is possible because that sword is dipped in Daya, and Daya always works for the benefit of humanity.

The decad started with the spread of Kalamegha (black cloud) in this world, and ends with daaradharaha also meaning cloud. There is no other object which reflects Daya Devi's selflessness and plentiful giving except the clouds; and that probably explains why the Lord has lent His own colour to the clouds.

श्रीमते निगमान्तमहादेशिकाय नमः

श्री श्रीनिवास परब्रह्मणे नमः

॥ दयाशतकम् ॥

DAYAA SATAKAM

TENTH DECAD.

FTER having dealt with the greatness and glory of Daya in 90 slokas, the poet remembers about himself and the benefits to obtain for himself from Daya Devi. Readers would have had how in the course of those 90 slokas except on very few occasions, such as in slokas 12, 30 and 60, the poet had never prayed himself. A contemplation of one's own loneliness is bound to come while one is dwelling upon the exalted nature of Daya. We have already seen that Kaarpanya, or the helplessness of the dual soul without the aid of Daya, is a chief factor to be noted by one resorting to prapatti. Impelled by these and other similar reasons Vedanta Desika in this, the closing decad of his glorious stotra, refers to his sinful propensities and to his state of helplessness, and makes a pathetic appeal to Daya to come to his rescue and to help him attain Mokshananda.

It is but natural for any one who has for a time looked up to the glories of God and His greatness, to be seized with a sense of revulsion when one turns to one's own self. Alavandar, for instance, in his Stotra Ratna revels in the enjoyment of the great in several slokas. When he thinks of himself after all that, he is seized with a sense of disgust which finds expression in the following words: "Dhig asuchim avineetam nirdayam maam alaj-घिगशुचि अविनीतं निदेयं मां अलज्जं (Fie on me, the impure, the shameless, the compassionless, and the shame-less being.) And he actually apologises for pretending to desire to attain God who has included great persons like Sanaka and Sanandana. In that strain Vedanta Desika describes in this decad his dire and deplorable state and pathetically appeals to Daya for help and succour.

The depression in the poet's mind as he thinks of his pitiable state is reflected in the metre employed in this decad. Whereas from the fourth decad onward, metres with 15 and 17 syllables were handled by the poet, in this, the metre shrinks to a 14-syllabled one. It is known variously as Vasanta-tilaka, simmonnata, and udhdharshinee. Many other stotrās of Dēsika like Varadaraja Panchasat, Devanayaka Panchasat and Goda Stuti are in the main composed in this metre. The topic of this decad is Satpadar-vyaam Sahāyaha सत्पदव्यां सहायः or help along the right path.

विश्वोपकारमिति नाम सदा दुहाना-

मद्यापि देवि भवतीमवधीरयन्तम् ।

नाथे निवेशय वृषादिप्रतौ दये त्वं

न्यस्तस्वरक्षणभरं त्वयि मां त्वयैव ॥

(९१)

Visvopakaaram iti naama sadaa duhaanaam

adyaapi Devi! bhavateem avadheerayantam

Naathe nivesaya. Vrishaadripatau-Daye! tvam

nyasthasvarakshanabharam tvayi maam tvayaiva ॥ (91)

Devi! Daya of the Lord of Vrishagiri! In regard to you, who thus (in this wise) always yields all benefits (to one and all), I have even now nothing but indifference and disrespect; yet, having of your own accord accepted and taken up the burden of protecting me, you yourself please place me in the Lord.

Iti naama—इति नाम—In this wise. This expression is intended to take in all the qualities of Daya enjoyed in the previous nine decads.

In this wise, you yield the milk of world-wide help (Visvopakaaram). Visvopakara may also be taken to mean all sorts and kind of helps and aids to the men and women of the world.

Duhaanaam is a beautiful word. It means yielding milk like a cow. A cow will yield milk when it is milked. It will also yield to feed its calf. Sometimes it yields of its own accord, when overpowered by love and affection towards its calf which is not by its side. Andal in her Tiruppavai (12) enjoys the last of the above three forms of yielding milk, when she sings “கன்றுக் கிர ங்கி நினைத்து முலைவழியே நின்று பால் சோர்” (pouring milk in plenty through its teats at the mere loving thought of its calf.) This is a most appropriate and fitting description of the way Daya Devi yields milk to save us, her young ones. We do not even think of her, we even slight her. She does not mind. She makes us think,—then herself thinks for us, and blesses us. தாய் நினைந்த கன்றே ஒக்க என்னையும் தன்னையே நினைக்கச் செய்து, தான் எனக்காய் நினைந்து அருள் செய்யும். This is Tirumangai Alwar’s beautiful description of the process of protection extended to us. Like a calf thinking of its mother cow, (or like the calf fondly thought of by the mother cow) we are made to think of the Lord, and even thereafter, as we cannot know what is for our welfare and what is not, the Lord thinks for us, just like a mother (தாயினும் சாலப்பரிந்து with a love and affection exceeding even that of a fond mother, as Manickavachaka Swamigal has put it) and showers His Grace on us. All these fine sentiments are suggested by the reference to the yielding of milk—duhaanaam.

Dohana or milking may in this context be understood as not only as yielding milk, but also milking. Visvopakaaram duhaanaam may be understood to indicate the process by which Daya Devi makes the Lord yield those several benefits. There is a saying that all the Upanishads are cows, Lord Krishna the Gopa is the dogdha (दोग्धा) (the milker), and the Geeta the milk yielded by those cows for the benefit of the learned, Arjuna being the calf utilised for such milking. Here Desika seems to go a step further and make the Gopa (Krishna) Himself a cow. Daya Devi milks Him, and the milk that flows from the Lord is the Viswopakaram with which the sloka begins.

How should such as I regard such as you? with love, affection reverence, and gratitude. But as a matter of fact, what is my attitude towards you? Avadheerayantam maam अवधीरयन्तं माम् I have no regard for you. I have no respect for you. I neglect you. Adhyaapi अद्यापि Even now. Even now,—even after I have learnt about your greatness, goodness, and glory, as can be seen from the previous slokas sung by me. To know about you is one thing. To adore you is another thing. I have understood your greatness; but I have not yet found it in my mind to worship you, to revere you, and to look up to you as my sole saviour.

A very great truth is sought to be brought home to us all by this anusandhana of Desika about himself. Knowing is one thing. Realising is another. Duryodhana is said to have exclaimed once, "I know what is dharma; but I am not able to adopt it. I know what is adharma; but I am not able to wean myself away from it." जानामि धर्मं न च मे प्रवृत्तिः जानाम्यधर्मं न च मे निवृत्तिः. Nammalwar has sung இவையன்றே நல்ல; இவையன்றே தீய; இவையென்று இவை அறிவனேலும், இவையெல்லாம் என்னால் அடைப்பு நீக்கொணுது இறையவனே! என்னால் செயற்பாலதென். (All these are good; all these are bad. I know what is good and what is bad: but I am unable to annex the good, and reject the bad. My Lord! O! what is it that I can do?)

This is the state with most of us. We know there is a God. We believe in Him and His power and mercy. Still we are not able to give ourselves up to Him in thought word and deed. This plight of almost all modern men is pointed out here. Note the use of the word अद्यापि—still, even now.

The api अपि may also be taken with भवतीं Bhavateem. Bhavateem api. Even such a one as you, I regard with disrespect. You can judge of me from this.

Notwithstanding this state of mind, I beseech you, says the latter half of the sloka, please place me in the Lord. Nuathe nivesaya नाथे निवेशय

You may well ask, how dare I make any request to you in this my unbending frame of mind? My only excuse is that having on your own initiative, and even without my asking, taken up the burden of protecting me, it is up to you alone to do what all is needed for my protection. By you (त्वया) Rakshana-bhara or burden of my protection has been placed in you त्वयि. Therefore you त्वं please place me in the Lord.

The "eva" एव occurring at the very end of the sloka has to be taken not only with the tvaya with which it is there linked, but with the tvam and the tvayi that precede it in the second half of the sloka.

By you only, in you alone, my protective burden has been placed. So you alone have to complete my protection by placing me in the Lord.

नाथे निवेशय Place me in the Lord. Whose Lord? My Lord, your Lord, the Lord of Vrishadri.

नैसर्गिकेण तरसा करुणे नियुक्ता

निम्नेतरेऽपि मयि ते विततिर्यदि स्यात् ।

विस्सापयेद्बृषगिरीश्वरमप्यवार्या

वेलातिलङ्घनदशेव महाम्बुराशेः ॥

(९२)

*rgikena tarasaa Karune! niyuktaa imnetare api mayi te vitatir-yadi syaat rapayet Vrishagireesvaram apyavauryaa
elaatilanghanadaseva mahaamburasehe* (92)

Devi Karuna! If only your (water) spread, commanded thereby by your innate speed, should swallow me up, me seated on high (placed in my own unbending haughtiness), it will cause surprise and astonishment even to the Lord of Vrishagiri, as being as incapable of being warded off as the mighty ocean bursting its shores.

In sloka 13 ante, Daya was praised as being capable of immersing the high-placed Lord Himself. But here I am, Desika says, seated on (what I think to be) even a higher pedestal than Lord Vasudeva Himself. Though I am in truth and fact a very low and worthless person, I, out of my egotism think that I am a very lofty person (netara) निम्नेतर person. If therefore the swift current of my pride rises above me and swallows me up by submerging me, the Lord Srinivasa will be very much surprised. Daya would not have achieved what the Lord tried but failed to achieve, namely that I realise that I am subordinate to Him and not higher, and that by my thoughtlessness and impertinence, I was reckoning. When He out of His infinite pity for me sought to reclaim me by saying Tvam-me त्वं मे (Thou art mine), I have always unhesitatingly rejoined अहं मे Aham-me—I belong to myself. Instead of owing to Him saying जितंते पुण्डरीकाक्ष नमस्ते विश्वभावन, I was conquered by Thee and I make prostrations before Thee, I only exclaim ननमेयंतु कस्यचित् (I will not bow my head to anyone.) Carrying my head aloft, and puffed up with stupidity, I thought I was above the Lord Himself.

If therefore my pride is humbled and I am immersed in the waterspread of Daya by her own spontaneous, natural, innate force, the first person to be astonished at such an act will be the Lord Himself. He will be reminded of the state of the ocean in which the mighty seas will break their shores and mingle force as described in sloka 61. He will surely feel glad and joy at Daya's achievement in swallowing me up with all my egotism and pride.

Water can only flow from high to low. But you flow up and over plateaus and hills. Who will not wonder at it?

विज्ञातशासनगतिर्विपरीतवृत्त्या

वृत्तादिभिः परिचितां पदवीं भजामि ।

एवंविधे वृषगिरीशदये मयि त्वं

दीने विभोः शमय दण्डवरत्नलीलाम् ॥

(९३)

aatasasanagatir-vipareetavrittyaa

Vrittraadibhih parichitaam padaveem bhajaami ।

evamvidhe Vrishagirieesa Daye! mayi tvam

deene vibhos-samaya dandadharutvaleelaam" (93)

Daya of the Lord of Vrishagiri! Knowing as I do the way of commands (Shastras), I still pursue with pleasure the paths pursued by Vritrasura and his ilk. (I pray to you) you please put down the Lord's punishing sport, that is sure to be directed against poor me with this evil propensity.

This decad is intended to demonstrate the help of Daya in guiding me on the proper path. This sloka talks of the Vipareetapadavi or the wrong and dangerous path most of us are treading here with disastrous results to ourselves. Worst of it is we follow in the wrong path not out of ignorance but of sheer cussedness. This aspect is indicated by the opening words of the sloka: Vignana-sasana-gatihi विज्ञानशासनगतिः Sasana command. Saasanaat Saastram शासनात् शास्त्रं—Because it is known as Sastra. I am aware of it. That is, to know what are the dictates of that Shastra. I know its Do's and Don'ts. But I invariably don't do what I ought to do and fail to do hundreds of times what I have been ordained not to. निन्दिताचार करणं निवृत्तं कृत्यकर्मणः and I thus resemble Vritrasura and others like him such as Hiranya and Ravana. All of them were fully aware of the error in the path they were pursuing, till they clung to their wrong path steadfastly, even though they were advised against following such sinful conduct. As Daya pointed out to Ravana

इह सन्तो न वा सन्ति सतो वा नानुवर्तसे ।

तथा हि विरीता ते बुद्धिाचारवर्जित ॥

Vipareeta buddhi) Perverse knowledge, and (vipareeta achara) perverse conduct result from failure to take the advice of saintly souls. The word 'vipareeta' used in this sloka of Daya Sataka reminds us of the above-cited sloka of the Ramayana.

Such a conduct invites the terrible punishments prescribed heretofore. The punisher is of course the great Lord who has behind Him the strength of his sixfold gunas, known as gnana, bala, iswarya, veerya, sakthi and tejas—vide slokas 11 and 15 ante. When I think of the punishments that the Lord is sure to inflict on me, I shudder with fright. Punishment is the sport of the Lord who for his Jagatvyapaara जगत्वापार (maintenance of the world) has laid down rules of human conduct. The Shastras are nothing but the rules and regulations by which men and women of this world have to guide themselves. When they fail to do so, they invite the wrath of the Lord, and in the same way in which He brought the world into being, He punishes the wrong doers. The word punishment is here denoted by the word 'dandadharatvaleela.' दण्डधरत्वलीला Danda is the stick used to beat by way of chastisement. The wielding of the stick or the cane is therefore symbolic of punishment. Shuddering at the thought of the punishment that I am going to receive at the hands of the Lord, I appeal to you to protect me from the same. I am a very low and helpless person who have realised the atrocities of my acts only after I have committed them. Now I appeal to you to protect me, since my evil acts are now ripe enough to get me punished for them. Please use your good offices and see that the punishing tendency of the Lord is quelled. In spite of the fact that I am this bad एवं षष्ठे I take courage and approach you, because you have very kindly taken upon yourself the great task,—a difficult task in fact—ह्रस्व—Saahasa of protecting me. That Daya Devi can cleverly and successfully avert punishments intended for the wrong-doers has been stated in several of the earlier slokas. This appeal to Daya Devi issues from the frightened heart of the wrong doer.

The prayer of Desika and the other great Acharyas like him in words such as those employed in this sloka are really intended for men and women like us. In fact it is most appropriate only for us.

A very great truth is sought to be brought home to us all by this anusandhana of Desika about himself. Knowing is one thing. Realising is another. Duryodhana is said to have exclaimed once, "I know what is dharma; but I am not able to adopt it. I know what is adharma; but I am not able to wean myself away from it." जानामि धर्मं न च मे प्रवृत्तिः जानाम्यधर्मं न च मे निवृत्तिः. Nammalwar has sung இவையன்றே நல்ல; இவையன்றே தீய; இவையென்று இவை அறிவனேலும், இவையெல்லாம் என்னால் அடைப்பு நீக்கொணாது இறையவனே! என்னால் செயற்பாலதென். (All these are good; all these are bad. I know what is good and what is bad: but I am unable to annex the good, and reject the bad. My Lord! O! what is it that I can do?)

This is the state with most of us. We know there is a God. We believe in Him and His power and mercy. Still we are not able to give ourselves up to Him in thought word and deed. This plight of almost all modern men is pointed out here. Note the use of the word अद्यापि—still, even now.

The api अपि may also be taken with भवतीं Bhavateem. Bhavateem api. Even such a one as you, I regard with disrespect. You can judge of me from this.

Notwithstanding this state of mind, I beseech you, says the latter half of the sloka, please place me in the Lord. Nuathe nivesaya नाथे निवेशय

You may well ask, how dare I make any request to you in this my unbending frame of mind? My only excuse is that having on your own initiative, and even without my asking, taken up the burden of protecting me, it is up to you alone to do what all is needed for my protection. By you (त्वया) Rakshana-bhara or burden of my protection has been placed in you त्वयि. Therefore you त्वं please place me in the Lord.

The "eva" एव occurring at the very end of the sloka has to be taken not only with the tvaya with which it is there linked, but with the tvam and the tvayi that precede it in the second half of the sloka.

By you only, in you alone, my protective burden has been placed. So you alone have to complete my protection by placing me in the Lord.

नाथे निवेशय Place me in the Lord. Whose Lord? My Lord, your Lord, the Lord of Vrishadri.

नैसर्गिकेण तरसा करुणे नियुक्ता

निम्नेतरेऽपि मयि ते विततिर्यदि स्यात् ।

विस्मापयेद्बृषगिरीश्वरमप्यवार्या

वेलातिलङ्घनदशेव महाम्बुराशेः ॥

(९२)

*rgikena tarasaa Karune! niyuktaa
nimnetare api mayi te vitatir-yadi syaat apayet Vrishagireesvaram apyavauryaa
elaatilanghanadaseva mahaamburasehe* " (92)

Devi Karuna! If only your (water) spread, commanded thereby your innate speed, should swallow me up, me seated on high placed in my own unbending haughtiness), it will cause surprise astonishment even to the Lord of Vrishagiri, as being as incapable being ward off as the mighty ocean bursting its shores.

In sloka 13 ante, Daya was praised as being capable of immer-the high-placed Lord Himself. But here I am, Desika says, ed on (what I think to be) even a higher pedestal than Lord vasa Himself. Though I am in truth and fact a very low and rless person, I, out of my egotism think that I am a very lofty netara) निम्नेतर person. If therefore the swift current of rises above me and swallows me up by submerging me, Lord Srinivasa will be very much surprised. Daya would achieved what the Lord tried but failed to achieve, namely me realise that I am subordinate to Him and not higher, my thoughtlessness and impertinence, I was reckoning. When-He out of His infinite pity for me sought to reclaim me by g Tvam-me त्वं मे (Thou art mine), I have always unhesitay rejoined अहं मे Aham-me—I belong to myself. Instead owing to Him saying जितंते पुण्डरीकाक्ष नमस्ते विश्वभावन, I conquered by Thee and I make prostrations before Thee, ly exclaim ननमेयंतु कस्यचित् (I will not bow my head to one.) Carrying my head aloft, and puffed up with stupid e, I thought I was above the Lord Himself.

If therefore my pride is humbled and I am immersed in the त (waterspread) of Daya by her own spontaneous, natural, innate force, the first person to be astonished at such an act be the Lord Himself. He will be reminded of the state of in which the mighty seas will break their shores and mingle with force as described in sloka 61. He will surely feel glad and happy at Daya's achievement in swallowing me up with all my puffed up pride and egotism.

Water can only flow from high to low. But you flow up and immerse plateaus and hills. Who will not wonder at it?

विज्ञातशासनगतिर्विरीतवृत्त्या

वृत्तादिभिः परिचितां पदवीं भजामि ।

एवंविधे वृषगिरीशदये मयि त्वं

दीने विभोः शमय दण्डवरत्वलीलाम् ॥

(९३)

Vignaatasasanagatir-vipareetavrittyaa

Vrittraadibhih parichitaam padaveem bhajaami ।

Evam vidhe Vrishagirieesa Daye! mayi tvam

deene vibhos-samaya dandadhuratvaleelaam ॥ (93)

Daya of the Lord of Vrishagiri! Knowing as I do the way of the commands (Shastras), I still pursue with pleasure the paths pursued by Vritrasura and his ilk. (I pray to you) you please put down the Lord's punishing sport, that is sure to be directed against poor me with this evil propensity.

This decad is intended to demonstrate the help of Daya in Satpadavi सत्पदवी or the proper path. This sloka talks of the विपरीतपदवी Vipareetapadavi or the wrong and dangerous path that most of us are treading here with disastrous results to ourselves. The worst of it is we follow in the wrong path not out of ignorance but of sheer cussedness. This aspect is indicated by the opening words of the sloka: Vignana-sasana-gatihi विज्ञानशासनगतिः Sasana is Command. Saasanaat Saastram शासनात् शास्त्रं—Because it commands, it is known as Sastra. I am aware of it. That is, to say I know what are the dictates of that Shastra. I know its Do's and Don'ts. But I invariably don't do what I ought to do and never fail to do hundreds of times what I have been ordained not to do. निन्दिताचार करणं निवृत्तं कृत्यकर्मणः and I thus resemble Vritrasura and others like him such as Hiranya and Ravana. All of them were fully aware of the error in the path they were pursuing, but still they clung to their wrong path steadfastly, even though they were advised against following such sinful conduct. As Seeta Devi pointed out to Ravana

इह सन्तो न वा सन्ति सतो वा नानुवर्तसे ।

तथा हि विपरीता ते बुद्धिराचारवर्जित ॥

(Vipareeta buddhi) Perverse knowledge, and (vipareeta achara) perverse conduct result from failure to take the advice of saintly souls. The word 'vipareeta' used in this sloka of Daya Sataka reminds us of the above-cited sloka of the Ramayana.

Such a conduct invites the terrible punishments prescribed therefor. The punisher is of course the great Lord who has behind Him the strength of his sixfold gunas, known as gnana, bala, aiswarya, veerya, sakthi and tejas—vide slokas 11 and 15 ante. When I think of the punishments that the Lord is sure to inflict on me, I shudder with fright. Punishment is the sport of the Lord who for his Jagatvyapaara जगत्व्यापार (maintenance of the world) has laid down rules of human conduct. The Shastras are nothing but the rules and regulations by which men and women of this world have to guide themselves. When they fail to do so, they invite the wrath of the Lord, and in the same way in which He brought the world into being, He punishes the wrong doers. The word punishment is here denoted by the word 'dandadharatvaleela.' दण्डधरत्वलीला Danda is the stick used to beat by way of chastisement. The wielding of the stick or the cane is therefore symbolic of punishment. Shuddering at the thought of the punishment that I am going to receive at the hands of the Lord, I appeal to you to protect me from the same. I am a very low and helpless person who have realised the atrocities of my acts only after I have committed them. Now I appeal to you to protect me, since my evil acts are now ripe enough to get me punished for them. Please use your good offices and see that the punishing tendency of the Lord is quelled. In spite of the fact that I am this bad एवं वेधे I take courage and approach you, because you have very kindly taken upon yourself the great task,—a difficult task in fact—राहस—Saahasa of protecting me. That Daya Devi can cleverly and successfully avert punishments intended for the wrong-doers has been stated in several of the earlier slokas. This appeal to Daya Devi issues from the frightened heart of the wrong doer.

The prayer of Desika and the other great Acharyas like him in words such as those employed in this sloka are really intended

मासाहसोक्तिघनकञ्चुकवच्चितान्यः

पश्यत्सु तेषु विदधाम्यतिमाहसानि ।

पद्मासहायकरुणे न रणत्सि किं त्वं

घोरं कुलिङ्गशकुनेरिव चेष्टितं मे ॥

(९४)

Maa saahasoktighanakanchukavanchittanyah pasyatsu teshu vidadhaamyatisaahasaani ।

Padmausahaaya Karune! na runatsi kim tvam ghoram kulingasakuner-iva cheshtitam me ॥ (94)

Devi Karuna of Srinivasa! putting on a strong armour (covering) constituted by the words “do not be rash” in order to cheat the rest of the world, I myself daringly commit several rash acts before the very eyes of the persons whom I cheat by my external deportment. How is it you do not prevent this kind of behaviour on my part, which resembles the conduct of the kulinga bird?

In the previous sloka the poet sung about the knowingly committed transgressions of Shastric commands. Here he goes one step further. Not only do I act against the Sastras, but I act even against my own words. I preach one thing and practise another. In order to impress upon those who come to me for instruction and look up to me for guidance, I say “don’t be rash in your acts.” “Always act in such a way as to respect the Shastric injunctions which you must never dream of going against.” This is for their consumption, so that they may think that I am a very good Acharya, and a very great and noble person. Having cheated them thus into believing in my greatness, even before their very eyes I myself act contrary to that very upadesa or teaching, and commit several rash acts.

Kanchuka कञ्चुक is a coat, or cover, ghanakanchuka घनकञ्चुक is a thick coat, almost like an armour. My upadesa or teaching “मा साहसं कुरु” (don’t commit any rash or sinful act) is the external covering which conceals my real and true nature. Just like the tiger donning the garb of a cow, I cover myself with a thick coat of goodness, and make people believe that I am good, while in fact I am not. I have not the patience to wait till my disciples, to whom I give this advice, leave my presence. Even while they are looking on, I commit the very misdeeds against which I warn them.

The poet refers to a bird called kulinga. It is said that the bird which emanates from the throat of the bird very much resembles the sound of "maa saahasa." Even while uttering sound, it is said, the bird will insert its beak into the mouth of a yawning lion to pluck a bit of flesh sticking in the lion's mouth. That particular bird has been defined in Sanskrit literature

कुलिङ्ग शकुर्निनाम हरेर्दासितदन्तिनः ।

मुखादामिषमादत्ते वदन् मा साहसं कुरु ॥

The poet asks Daya Devi in this sloka to see that such conduct or behaviour on his part is eschewed by him and put away for ever. Is it that having taken upon yourself the burden of protecting me, you still permit this sort of behaviour on my part? It is up to you and you alone to put an end to my committing atrocities of which I warn others.

Reading the previous sloka and this together, it looks as if Desika is again emphasising the need for good conduct especially in the post-prapatti period. The observance of prapatti is an indication of cessation of the commission of sin. Prathikulyavarjana. Few of the determination not to swerve from the Sastraic path. On the occasion of prapatti, the person resolves not to commit evil deeds thereafter. In order to ensure that no evil deeds are committed, Desika appeals to Daya Devi in this sloka to see that his tendency to go against his own expressed wish of not transgressing the Lord's laws is curbed.

Incidentally Desika indicates one of the chief characteristics which ought to be present in every Acharya. He must act according to his own upadesa. If he does not, he will resemble the kulinga bird. Elsewhere also Desika refers to a true Acharya as குலிங்கப் பறவையான விருத்தாந்த வைதேசிகனான ஆசாரியன் that is, one who is far removed from the conduct of the kulinga bird. Regarding an Acharya of great repute himself, Vedanta Desika here gives a tip to all who are desirous of being Acharyas imparting instruction to, and enforcing rules of conduct in, their disciples.

विश्वेपमर्हसि दये विप्लायितेऽपि

व्याजं विभाव्य वृषशैलपतेर्विहारम् ।

स्वाधीनसत्त्वसरणिः स्वयमत्र जन्तौ brings out this idea of indulging in a pretence of sport in order to achieve His desire to divinise human beings. There is no one who can be employed with better effect in this divinising process than Daya Devi, and more persons are likely to be caught in the net of Daya than in other nets. The Lord is of wonderful beauty. He is known as Bhuvanasundara—भुवनसुन्दर but we human beings fail to be attracted by that beauty. He is a storehouse of auspicious qualities. They do not appeal to us. Only a Devi alone has the capacity by her goodness and cleverness to catch us unawares, and that is why the analogy of the net is employed in by Desika in this sloka to describe one more characteristic greatness of Daya Devi.

संतन्यमानमपराधगणं विचिन्त्य

तस्यामि हन्त भवतीं च विभावयामि ।

अहाय मे वृषगिरीशदये जहीमा-

माशीविषग्रहणकेळिनिभामवस्थाम् ॥

(९६)

*tanyamaanam aparaadhaganam vichintya trasyaami hanta bhavateem cha vibhaavayaami ।
aaya me vrishagireesa Daye! Jaheemaam aaseevishagrahana kelinibhaam avasthaam ॥*

(96)

Daya of the Lord of Vrishagiri! when I think of the multitude of my sins that are ever on the increase, I simply shudder. And (once) I also think of you. Alas! Please quickly put an end to (pitiable) state of mine,—very much like catching hold of, and going with, a terribly poisonous serpent.

Slowly, it is being revealed, the poet's respect for Daya is growing. He has implored her to place him in the Lord. (91) to protect him from the worst punishments that the Lord may inflict (93) and to catch him unawares as in a net (95). (Rama was sent by Seeta to catch Sita for her. He was not able to. But Daya is able to catch him for her Lord).

In this sloka, the poet speaks about his inability to shake his sinning propensities, in spite of his appeals to Daya Devi for help and redress. A man learns Garuda Mantra in order to get away by its utterance the poisonous effects of a serpent-bite. Having learnt that Mantra which is an antidote to serpent

Vikshepam arhasi Daya! vipalaayite api vyaajam vibhaavya Vrishasailapater-vihaaram । Svaadheena satva saranis-svayam atra jantau draagheeyasee dridhataraa gunavaaguraa tvam " (95)

Daya Devi! however much I may try to run away (from you), you must capture me in the guise of providing shikar for the Lord of Vrishachala. You are well aware of the paths in which beings (animals) are likely to wander. Therefore, you please of your own accord spread yourself so as to enmesh this being in your net which is long, strong, and made of ropes (strings).

In this sloka Desika requests Daya Devi to catch him unawares. He likens Daya Devi to a long and sturdy net. The hunter who spreads this net is of course Lord Srinivasa. Daya is His net which he spreads far and wide in order to catch animals during His shikar, or hunting sport, in which kings very often indulge. The net has to be spread only in places which animals are likely to frequent, so that when they come to the spot they get entangled and thereby get caught. Daya Devi is here described as possessing the requisite knowledge of places frequented by animals, by the expression "Svaadheena Satva-sarani. Satva refers to beings; सरणि sarani to the pathways they frequent. सत्त्व सरणि Satva sarani can also be taken to mean the right path, the satvic path. We are reminded once again of the topic of this decad, that is Satpadavyam Sahaaya or helping in putting one, or taking one, on the right path. The net Vaagura वागुर which has to be spread far and wide is referred to as very long, draagheeyasi, long enough to catch the swiftest runner; and very strong—dridhataraa, no one once caught in it can escape from it; and as made up of guna, strings or ropes. Guna of course also means attribute. You must catch me by your gunas and loveableness, seems to be the hidden suggestion. Readers will notice how the poet refers to himself here as a jantu,—an animal, just a being. Naichyanusandhaana or recounting one's own lowliness cannot go further. It is only when this sentiment takes hold of one, that Daya Devi relents. She cannot be cheated by mere words. She looks to the feelings in the heart.

Casting nets and catching animals—this is the sport of kings. The desire on the part of the Lord of Vrishadri to indulge in shikar—sport—is to be made a pretence to cast this net of Daya far and wide. Vyaajam vibhaavya—व्याजं विभाव्य—very well brings out this idea of indulging in a pretence of sport in order to achieve His desire to divinise human beings. There is no one who can be employed with better effect in this divinising process than Daya Devi, and more persons are likely to be caught in the net of Daya than in other nets. The Lord has wonderful beauty. He is known as Bhuvanasundara—भुवनसुन्दर—but we human beings fail to be attracted by that beauty. He is a storehouse of auspicious qualities. They do not appeal to us. Daya Devi alone has the capacity by her goodness and cleverness to catch us unawares, and that is why the analogy of the net is indulged in by Desika in this sloka to describe one more characteristic greatness of Daya Devi.

संतन्यमानमपराधगणं विचिन्त्य

तस्यामि हन्त भवतीं च विभावयामि ।

अहाय मे वृषगिरीशदये जहीमा-

माशीविषग्रहणकेळिनिभामवस्थाम् ॥

(९६)

Santanyamaanam aparaadhaganam vichintya

trasyaami hanta bhavateem cha vibhaavayaami ।

Ahnaaya me vrishagireesa Daye! Jaheemaam

aaseevishagrahana kelinibhaam avasthaam ॥

(96)

Daya of the Lord of Vrishagiri! when I think of the multitude of my sins that are ever on the increase, I simply shudder. And (at once) I also think of you. Alas! Please quickly put an end to this (pitiable) state of mine,—very much like catching hold of, and playing with, a terribly poisonous serpent.

Slowly, it is being revealed, the poet's respect for Daya is growing. He has implored her to place him in the Lord. (91) to avert punishments that the Lord may inflict (93) and to catch him unawares as in a net (95). (Rama was sent by Seeta to catch a deer for her. He was not able to. But Daya is able to catch any number for her Lord).

In this sloka, the poet speaks about his inability to shake off his sinning propensities, in spite of his appeals to Daya Devi for help and redress. A man learns Garuda Mantra in order to drive away by its utterance the poisonous effects of a serpent-bite. But having learnt that Mantra which is an antidote to serpent-poison, he thinks of playing with serpents by catching them, and, if in that process he is stung by the serpent, uttering the mantra to get rid of the deadly effect of that poison. I am now, says Desika in this sloka, very much like such a man. Before that man learnt the Garuda Mantra he was afraid of snakes, but the very fact of his having attained siddhi in Garuda mantra emboldened him to go to snake-infested areas, and try to catch hold of them and play with them. So too I am now prone to multiply my sins relying on Daya to save me from their evil effects. Truly an unenviable position! That is why it has evoked a Hanta हन्त, (Alas) from the poet's mouth.

Quickly end this wretched plight of mine is the prayer, Ahnaaya jahi (अह्नाय - जहि), that arises in the heart of the poet. The proximity of the word Ahnaaya with Vibhaavayaami (विभावयामि) suggests that those two words may be taken together so as to indicate how quickly I think of you Daya, when I am confronted with my mounting sins.

Imaam avasthaam (इमां अवस्थां)—This plight. It has to be seen to be understood fully, and cannot be adequately or properly described. So dire and deplorable a state. This reminds one of Nammalwar's இந்நின்று நீர்மை (This plight).

This sloka appears to be a poetic elaboration of the sentiment contained in the 8th sloka of Nyaasa Dasaka which runs as follows:

त्वदेकरक्षस्य मम त्वमेव करुणाकर ।

न प्रवर्तय पापानि प्रवृत्तानि निवर्तय ॥

O Lord! full of Karuna! please see to it that my sins (which are likely to pave the way for the commission of more sins) do not get activated (begin to function). And pray! you yourself prevent those that have begun to act (by neutralising them).

If there is one point that Desika is anxious to drive home, it is the great need for avoiding the commission of sins, especially after the performance of Prapatti.

औत्सुक्यपूर्वमुपहत्य महापराधान्

मातः प्रसादयितुमिच्छति मे मनस्त्राम् ।

आलिङ्ग्य तान्निवशेषमलब्धतृप्ति-

स्ताम्यस्यहो वृषगिरीशधृता दये त्वम् ॥

kya poorvām upahritya mahaaparaadhaan naatah! prasaadayitum ichchhati me manas-tvaam । a taan niravasesham alabdhatriptis-aamyas-yaho! Vrishagirieesadhritaa Daye! tvam ॥ (97)

Mother mine! Daya Devi! My mind (thus) exultingly submits my ious and untold sins as an offering unto you, and thereby desires ease and satisfy you; you who are supported by the Lord of agiri lick them all up leaving nothing behind, and without being ied (thereby) feel famished. What a wonder!

As a return for all the kindness and consideration that you d towards me, and the great and invaluable help you render e by getting me pardoned of all my sins and crimes, what l can offer to you, Daya! Why, nothing but those very sins rimes. My mind thinks of doing something by way of pleasing (prasaadayitum). Knowing your propensity to annihilate my mind at once hits upon placing those very sins as offerings
u. Knowing as it does the immensity of those sins committed e, my mind naturally feels elated at the opportunity it is availing of, of offering them all to you,—such a big naivedya (oblation).
lation or pleasure at the thought of placing a full and rich it before you, is however very short-lived.

For, as soon as that frightfully large and heavy load of is offered to Daya, she licks them all up,—laps up the whole without leaving even a faint trace, and appears to want more.
t she has taken, instead of appeasing her appetite and hunger, only helped to whet that appetite, with the result that she now is positively hungry and famished. One is inescapably made onder at this, and exclaim ‘Aho’ अहो.

For all that the Lord and Daya Devi do to help us, what that we can think of doing or giving by way of recompense? malwar exclaims: அறியேன் ஒருகைம்மாறே. (I am not able think of any return or recompense). Alavandar cries out in equally helpless frame of mind Kinnu-samarpayaaami te—समर्पयामि ते) What is it that I can offer to you (in return)?— same sentiment overpowers Desika here and he gives expres-to it in his own inimitable way. Daya Devi takes a pleasure etting us freed from our sins. This is poetically referred to ns being eaten up by Daya Devi; consumed. All the worlds destroyed by the Lord in pralaya. He is said to have eaten e worlds: உண்டது உலகேழும் உள்ளொடுங்க. Similarly is said to eat or devour the sins of her votaries or tees. That act of grace is beyond repayment. That she not look forward to any recompense is only too patent. That cely expressed by saying she takes a pleasure in killing and uring our sins, and the pleasure she derives is the only benefit gets out of it. The words “Aalihya taan niravasesham alab-riптиhi” indicate the extreme pleasure that Daya Devi derives e process of the annihilation of sins. Sweet things like honey ot gulped but are licked and lazily tasted by the tongue. “Aali-’ meaning licking, has been specially used here to denote tasteful the pardoning of sins is to Daya Devi. “Nirava-um” shows, without leaving a bit, drop or fragment, and rms the tastefulness. Even then it does not satiate. Daya ers for more as shown by the word “alabdhatriпти” not fied.

It is easy to miss the poetic imagery employed in this sloka, ke the words literally, and to conclude that Desika is here ng a premium on sins and sinfulness, and lays down that lease Daya one must never stop committing sins. Nothing oe farther from the mind of that great Acharya than that sin- an is a qualification for God’s mercy descending on him.

Maataha! मातः Mother! is the vocative in the first half of loka, wherein the tendency of the human mind to placate, please Daya Devi by the offering of sins is referred to. That ate relationship emboldens one to think in that strain. Daye! e second vocative in this sloka and occurs in the second half ting to Daya Devi’s capacity to forgive all sins—however ous. For is she not a Daya having the support of the Lord, ishagiri. Vrishagireesa dhrita Daye!

Readers will have reminded themselves of the sentiment given ssion to in Sloka 29 ante, viz., “By ignoring me and protecting sinners, you, Daya, will not obtain a sense offulness or satis- on or appeasement of hunger. I am sorry for you”—was, was said there. That struck a note personal to the poet. n this 97th sloka the poet emphasises the power of Daya to on all sins—however numerous and however heinous—and ore no one need feel that he has sinned that much which is d Daya’s pardoning capacity. This is one aspect of Maha- sa, or the great faith, which assures us that however much ight have sinned in the past, the moment we regret and un-vedly place ourselves in the hands of the Lord's protecting

; we are sure to be saved.

नह्याद्वृषाचलपतिः प्रतिघेऽपि न त्वां

धर्मोपतप्त इव शीतलतामुदन्वान् ।

सा मामरुन्तुदभरन्यसनानुवृत्ति-

स्तद्वीक्षणैः स्पृश दये तव केलिपद्मैः ॥ (९८)

śād Vṛṣhaachalapatih-pratighepi na tvaam dharmopatapta iva seetalataam udanvaan mam aruntudabharanyasanaanuvrittis-śād-veekshanais-sprisa Daye! tava kelipadmaihi (98)

Daya Devi! However much the Lord of Vrishachala may get (at me), He is not capable of giving you up—even like the ocean is unable to discard its inherent coolness even in the hottest er. You in turn are so minded that a repetition of prapatti nder unto you) is very wounding to you. I therefore beseech please let the lovely glances of His (Srinivasa's), which are sportive lotuses, touch me (fall on me).

This sloka can be said to contain the final prayer of Vedanta ka in this stotra. He wants to be the recipient of the Lord's active glances (kataaksha). While dealing with slokas 49 50, we had occasion to recapitulate the kataakshas that mark everal stages in the spiritual progress of the human soul.

series of kataakshaas winds up with the kataaksha or shana sung in this sloka. It is the one which secures ultimate tude to the individual soul. Slokas 99 and 100 that follow ly describe the form that the poet desires that beatitude to take.

As if to explain why all these ages on ages that have passed, ipaasaka, who has now sought Daya's intervention, was left ffer in samsaara, the poet refers to the anger of the Lord, an r roused by his sins. At once Desika reminds himself of s hold on that Lord. He is incapable of giving up Daya.
is inherent in Him. She is of His very nature, just like cool-is of the ocean (sloka 23 ante). Even when it is 50 degrees grade (122 degrees F) in the shade, on land, the waters of the re cool. As the sea is incapable of giving up its coolness, Lord is incapable of giving up Daya. The sloka starts with ssuring fact,—so helpful to us all.

The next idea is about Daya's readiness to help. For one prapatti—prapatti once done—(vide “Sakrid-eve-prapannaaya” of the Ramayana) Daya unreservedly promises her full help and cooperation in obtaining for us from the Lord what we want of Him viz., moksha. The very idea of a second prapatti or repetition (anuvritti) of the process of surrender is so repulsive to Daya. It is like a sharp stab straight into her sweet and good heart—so wounding to her (aruntuda).

The Lord is placated by our invoking Daya. Daya has been placated by our surrender to her. Then what remains? Nothing but the realisation of the final beatitude. Then why tarry? Pray let the glances of the Lord play on me. This glance, the present one, is not a step towards mukti, but is mukti-conferring. Let me have it, prays Desika. The close connection between the Lord's Kataksha and Daya has been referred to more than once before. In sloka 42 it was tvatparishvanga-dhanyaihi, glances blest by your close embrace,—in sloka 49, it was “Sakheem-te,” glances which are fond and close confidante (bosom friend) of Daya. Here they are Daya's Keli padmas or lotuses with which Daya Devi fondly plays.

Sprusa-touch, Touch me with those glances of the Lord. That is to say make me the recipient of those glances. Bathed in the effulgence of those loving glances of the Lord, I shall become freed from Samsara and become a full-fledged Mukta.

दृष्टेऽपि दुर्बलधियं दमनेऽपि द्रुतं

स्नात्वापि धूलिरसिकं भजनेऽपि भीमम् ।

बद्ध्वा गृहाण वृषशैल तर्दये मां

त्वद्वारणं स्वयमनुग्रहशृङ्खलभिः ॥

(९९)

Drishte-api durbala dhiyam damanepi driptam snaatvaapi dhoolirasikam bhajanepi bheemam ।

Baddhwaa grihaana Vrishasailapater Daye maam

tvad vaaranam svayam anugrahasrinkhalaabhihi

(99)

Daya of Vrishachalapati! Pray, bind me, your elephant, with the chains of your anugraha (favour) and capture me. I resemble an elephant because my intellect is weak even in regard to objects fully seen and comprehended. I am full of uncontrollable force and vigour even when controlled. I am very fond of, and take to, dirt and dust, the moment I emerge from a bath; and I am frightful even when placated.

Having become the recipient of the Lord's kataksha by the goodness of Daya Devi, Desika now prays to Daya to chain him up and capture him so that he can no more be what he was in the past. By four very nice and suggestive epithets he compares himself to an elephant and describes in a nutshell the proclivities of erring mankind.

(1) Drishte-api-durbala-dhiyam.

Man slides into error not because he is unable to see that it is an error. He sees well, and fully realises the situation in all its aspects, and yet does wrong because he has not the strength to avoid it and do good.

An elephant sees well the danger ahead of it; yet especially when it is in rut, it rushes forward because its mind is not strong enough to withhold it from danger.

(2) Damanepi-driptam.

Though sought to be tamed and subdued, acting in an uncontrolled and unrestrained way. How many elders in society, or at home, and how many good friends check us in our mad career of sin? Do we pay any heed? We think they are fools and old-day cronies, and that we know better, with the result that, haughty and turbulent, we rush into error.

The mahout does his best to prevent the elephant from running amok or going astray. The rash elephant does not obey his command and even when he pricks into its head by the ankusa (restraining hook or goad) it does not mind, but tries to throw him out and rush on in its rash career, uncontrollable.

(3) Snaatvaapi-dhuli-rasikam:

After a bath, having a taste for dirt. A very fitting description of the human taste for filth. In every human soul there appears to lurk a desire to descend low in thought, word and deed. Only a few have the courage to resist and withstand that desire. The rest simply succumb.

After over an hour's arduous time in water, the mahout rubbing the elephant clean, the moment the elephant gets out of water it takes hay, grass, and other rubbish nearby, and puts them on its own head and strews them over its body. Its taste for dirt is so strong.

(4) Bhajane api bheemam:

Frightful even when praised and placated. Tondaradippodi Alvar has sung about himself: சினத்தினால் செற்றம் நோக்கித் தீ விளி விளிவன்வாளா (angry at every one and everything, I look daggers at others, and shout at them as if spitting fire). No wonder every one is afraid of such a person. Sweet words intended to make him see reason, and climb down from the high altitude of great anger fall on deaf ears. Did Hiranya listen to the sweet words of his wife Kayaadu and his child Prahlada? Did Ravana pay heed to the words of praise lavished on him by Malyavaan and Vibheeshana calculated to wean him from his sinful path? So too, very often we discard the sweet and coaxing words of praise and flattery emanating from good persons, and remain terrible, frightful to look at. Valmiki's description of Ravana is well worth being recollected in this connection. In one place Ravana is referred to as Bhooshitopi Bhayankaraha. भूषितोऽपि भयंकरः

Oftentimes even a trained elephant, which is normally very submissive and obedient, flares up, and on those occasions however much the mahout may try to soften its temper by sweet words, it becomes frightful and gets out of hand. In that state it will be terrible to look at, a mass of fury.

The aforesaid four traits are all seen in me, as in the elephant, and therefore I am an elephant, says Desika. But I am now your elephant. Tvad-vaaranam. So please catch hold of me and hold me captive by your chains. An elephant does not easily get caught. It tries to prevent people from catching it. The words tvad vaaranam can also give this meaning, viz., obstructing you, preventing you. Nevertheless capture me.

How? By the chains (srinkala) of anugraha. Anugraha means conferring a favour, rewarding. Your favour towards me should be the binding force chaining me.

Anu-graha can also mean catching up from behind, (the rear). I am not easily capturable. So please come from behind and catch me unawares by throwing the chains of your anugraha (favourableness) without my knowing it, without my seeing it. Desika seems to give tips to Daya Devi herself about how to capture him.

Baddhvaa-grihaana: Bind and capture.

Parasara Bhatta has employed the analogy of the elephant to describe Lord Ranganatha. In one verse of his Srirangaraja Stava he sings thus:

स्व संस्कृत द्राविड वेदसूक्तैः भान्तं मृदुक्तैर्मलनी करेति ।

श्रीरङ्गकम्रः कलमं क एव स्नात्वपि धूलिरसिकं निषेद्धा ॥

Lord Ranganatha, the majestic Elephant of Srirangam who shines in the Scriptures—Sanskrit and Tamil—makes himself dirty by accepting my words (in His praise). Who can prevent an elephant from indulging in its taste for dirt and rubbish soon after it has had a bath?

The same words Snaatvapi-dhuli-rasikam have been used more fittingly by Desika in this sloka to describe himself. In two other places in the course of his sweet stotras Desika again refers to himself as an elephant and his getting chained and bound. In the Bhagavat Dhyana Sopana, he sings about

दृष्ट्वा सेयं दृढनियमिता रश्मिभिर्भूषणानाम्

चिन्ता हस्तिन्यनुभवति मे चित्रमालानयन्तम्

This mind of mine which is like an elephant, always proud and arrogant, (mad and wild), has been tied fast and tight to the two beautiful hands of Lord Ranganatha as to a tying post, by means of the shooting rays of the jewels adorning the Lord.

In the Yathiraja Saptati, the elephant-analogy is again worked to perfection.

अविचारण्यानि कूहर विहरन्ममकमनः

प्रामाद्यन्मातङ्ग प्रथमनिगळं पादयुगळम्

Ramanuja's feet are there enjoyed as the first chain (pratama nigalam) that binds the mind of the poet which is like an elephant in rut, freely and playfully wandering about in the centre of the big forest of avidya or ignorance.

Ramanuja's feet (the acharya's feet) are the first chain. Daya is the next chain as enjoyed in this sloka. Once caught in the grip of the Acharyas, the soul is next caught (anu-graha) in Daya. And now it is caught for ever.

नातः परं किमपि मे त्वयि नाथनीयं

मातर्दये मयि कुरुष्व तथा प्रसादम् ।

बद्धादरो वृषगिरिप्रणयी यथाऽसौ

मुक्तानुभूतिमिह दास्यति मे मुकुन्दः ॥

(१००)

Naatahparam, kimapi me tvayi naathaneeyam

Maatar-Daye mayi kurushva tathaa prasaadam ।

Baddhaadaro Vrishagiripranayee yathaasau

Muktaanubhootim iha daasyati me Mukundaha. ॥ (100)

Mother Daya! Beyond this, that I am now going to pray of you, there is nothing that I desire. Kindly confer on me this boon, viz., that this Mukunda, who loves (His residence in Tiruvengada Hill) Vrishagiri, exhibits great love and affection towards me, and confers on me here the bliss that Celestials enjoy (in Vaikunta).

This is the 100th and last sloka of this stotra proper. There are eight more slokas but they are really in the form of an epilogue. The Sataka (centum) ends with this sloka.

After extolling Daya and her qualities in 90 slokas and after having sung 9 more slokas thereafter entreating Daya Devi to come to his help, Vedanta Desika makes known in this sloka to Daya Devi what it is that he desires most. That there is one desire in his heart more than any other which he wants Daya Devi to fulfil, is shown by the opening words of the sloka which say that beyond this there is nothing I desire to have from you. This is all that I seek of you and from you.

He calls Daya here as Maatar-daye! Mother Daya! It is a very sincere and earnest and intimate prayer—one that a child is prone to make to its fond mother.

Please confer it on me. Let it be your prasadam, favourable grant to me.

Please grant that this Lord, asau Mukundaha,—असौ मुकुन्दः this Mukunda, gives to me Muktaanubhooti मुक्तानुभूति here, इह lha. He is a Mukunda, one who can confer the best of the here and hereafter, मु (mu) means final emancipation. कु (Ku) means the earth. It is because the Lord can confer on His votaries all the pleasures of moksha, as also all the pleasures of the earth, He is known as Mukunda. Here Desika co-ordinates the two pleasures and combines them into one and prays for it.

He asks for muktaanubhooti or the enjoyment of the emancipated souls,—muktas. But he wants to get that enjoyment here in this world. Where the Lord is, that is Vaikunta. The Lord is now in this Virishagiri and He is here by choice. He is at the place so. He is Vrishagiri pranayee—a lover of Vrishagiri. This reminds us of the famous purana sloka.

मायावी परमानन्दं त्यक्त्वा वैकुण्ठमुत्तमम् ।

स्वामिपुष्करिणीतीरे रमया सह मोदते ॥

the great Maayin (or Maayan मायान् as Andal would have it) enjoying the great and glorious Vaikuntam revels along with his consort (Lakshmi), रमया सह Ramayaa Saha, on the banks of the Pushkarini (the tank called Koneri in Tirumalai, next north of the shrine of Lord Srinivasa).

Then again He is a baddhaadhara बद्धादरः one who evinces solicitude for, and loves, the bound ones (embodied jeevas who are born and who die and are re-born in this world). The baddhadhara can be taken with the verb daasyati and made to mean, give with love towards me. But the meaning suggested here will be found to be more appropriate when set off against the muktaanubhooti. In giving the bliss of Moksha to the Muktas, there is no special point or merit. So too in giving that bliss in this world, there is nothing specially noteworthy. But to give the muktaanubhooti to baddhas, and to give it here (Iha),—they will have special and noteworthy features which normally He may not wish to give, and will give only at behest of His beloved Daya Devi. Therefore Desika makes it his heartfelt and earnest prayer to Daya Devi that the Lord should vouchsafe that celestial bliss to him even while on this earth.

The ancient Srutis have in places touched upon this state, and it can be referred as jeevan mukti in one sense (see commentary on sloka 44 above); but by far the more numerous passages there refer to an Utkranti,—a going up, to a different and higher world. The Tamil scriptures also touch upon the state of Mukti in Vaikunta while also in this world itself; but here the weightage is in favour of Mukti being attained and enjoyed here. Nammalwar, Andal, Thirumangai Alwar have made no secret of the fact that their aim is not for the pleasures of Paramapada (Vaikunta) but for the Muktas here. Their realisation is very beautifully and succinctly expressed in a Tamil verse by Mukunda Desika.

விண்ணவர் வேண்டி விலக்கின்றி மேவும் அடிமையென்
மண்ணுலகில் மகிழ்ந்து அடைகின்றனர் நம் ப
மரும் தமிழ்வேதம் அறிந்த பகவர்களே.”

All the pleasures that the Nityasooris derive in serving the in Vaikunta, our little great ones of this world (சிறுமாமரை who have learnt the Tamil Vedas, enjoy with delectation here on this earth itself. As a premier Dramida-Sakha-adhyayee (சந்திரமதித் தமிழ் மறையோன்) Vedanta Desika therefore prays in this sloka not for being taken to Vaikuntaloka but for being blessed with the bliss of Vaikunta here itself.

That this is not a mere casual or temporary or poetic mood of Desika's part, but is his definite and deliberate longing, is seen by his prayer to Lord Ranganatha and Lord Varadaraja elsewhere. In the Abheetistava in praise of Ranganatha, Desika desires to obtain in this world the enjoyment of the celestials of Parvati pada. वयं त्रिदशनिर्वृतिं भुविमुकुन्दं विन्देमहि (Note the use of the word Mukunda here also). Addressing Varadaraja of Kanchi, Desika says if certain enjoyments are vouchsafed to him here, this world will itself become Vaikunta संसारएष भगवन् अपवर्ग एव Sarva will itself become moksha.

Every prapanna, every true Vaishnavite who has imbibed the spirit of Ubhaya Vedanta will only pray thus. The desire to go to Vaikunta will not be his. The Lord however, may think otherwise, and in the fullness of time may take such a one to His Loka,—Vaikunta. That has nothing to do with the yearning of the human heart. Note the मे in वैकुण्ठवासेपि नमोऽभिलाषः

By two very significant epithets used here to denote the Lord, Desika justifies this craving of man to get all glories, pleasures and benefits here itself; பெறுவதெல்லாம் இங்கே நாம் டெவ்வாழ். One is Vrishagiri Pranayee, and the other is Baddhadharaka as referring to this Lord. The suggestion seems to be that since the Lord Himself loves this place, and has great fondness for mortals here, why opt for something which will be contrary to what He manifests? Will we not be rejecting His proffered bliss here, if we aspire for something far away, to give which He would not have descended into this earth at all, as the Lord of Tirumala gadam.

Once again emphasis is laid on Archaistara, whose great

Vedanta Desika in line with the great Acharyas he follows, does not subscribe to the view that the Archa or the image in Temple is a mere step towards the Infinite, a stepping stone to attain higher altitudes of spirituality. To Desika the Archa is in itself the Primary God. To those who are not gifted enough to rise to Desika's heights and see the Highest Truth in Lord Srinivasa, the prayer made by him in this sloka may not mean much. But to those steeped in the Ubhaya Vedanta lore, synthesised and handed down to posterity, by great Acharyas like Nathamunigal, Yamuna-charya and Ramanuja, Lord Srinivasa is Para Brahmam, and enjoying Him here is Moksha. To them there is no prayer worth making than the one contained in this sloka.

This sloka is the summit of this stotra, the hundredth of the sataka. Addressed to the Lord's Daya, it depicts the summit of human aspirations which lies in the enjoyment of beatitude with the Lord who resides in the summit of Vrishagiri, and also in the summit of the srutis. श्रुति शिरसि विदीप्ते ब्रह्मणि श्रीनिवासे भवतु मम परस्मिन् शेमुषी भक्तिरूपा Sruti-sirasi-Videepte-Brahmani-Srinivase-Bhavathu-Mama Parasmin-Semushee-Baktiroopa, was Ramanuja's opening prayer voiced in the very first sloka of his Sri Bhashya. Following in his wake Vedanta Desika has equated Srinivasa with Para Brahmam, and Mokshananda with the enjoyment of that Brahmam here.

निःसीमवैभवजुषां मिषतां गुणानां

स्तोतुर्दये वृषगिरीशगुणेश्वरीं त्वाम् ।

तैरेव नूनमवशैरभिनन्दितं मे

सत्यापितं तव बलादकुतोभयत्वम् ॥

(१०१)

Nis-seema Vaibhava Jushaam. mishataam-gunaanaam

Stotur-Daye Vrishagireesa guneswareem tvam ।

Taireva noonam avasairabhainanditam me

Satyaapitam tavabalaakutobhayatvam ॥

(101)

Daya Devi ! Even while all the other gunas (attributes) of infinite glory, pertaining to the Lord of Vrishagiri, have been looking on with unwinking eyes, I have praised you, their Empress. Those very gunas are involuntarily congratulating me (for having praised you). That for those who rely on your strength or power, there is no fear.

The poet's sense of relief at the safe completion of the stotra can be sensed from the sentiments voiced in this sloka. When he began to praise Daya, one of the numerous attributes of Lord Srinivasa, it became incumbent on him to show her off to advantage by belittling the other attributes, and in places subordinating even the Lord before Daya. By extolling Daya and assigning to her a place above the Lord Himself, Desika must have felt that the Lord may not take him amiss; possibly He might also feel glad. But in regard to the other gunas (qualities) of the Lord, such as Gnana, Bala, Aiswarya etc., the poet was not quite sure that he will be winning their approbation by singing the praises of one like them, and in places setting them off against her to their disadvantage. This fear must have been lurking in the poet's mind. Now that the stotra has been completed without obstacle, the poet heaves a sigh of relief, and at the same time gets the idea that the other gunas have really applauded his hymn of praise about Daya, and the way he set about it. While thanking them and praising them for it, Desika adroitly sings Daya's praise in a new way.

Nisseema- Vaibhava-Jushaam-gunaanaam. Seema is boundary or limit. Nis-seema is limitless. The Vaibhava or glory of the gunas of the Lord are limitless. They have all been praised by the Srutis. In fact the srutis alone have postulated them.

Those gunas have been watching Desika sing the Daya Sataka. They have been so watching with eyes wide open—mishataam. Appreciation as well as concentration is indicated by this reference to wide open eyes. When intensely looking, the eyes forget, or omit, to wink. And in admiration the eyes get opened wide, and in the process, winking is suspended.

Now that I come to think of it, the poet seems to say, there is nothing surprising in the other qualities of the Lord, not only not getting angry at Daya being praised, but positively becoming happy and pleased thereby. For Daya is Guneswari, the Empress among Gunas. She has once before been referred to as Guneshu-Saarvabhaumi गुणेषु सार्वभौमी (sloka 30) And no subject is going to take offence if the King (or Queen) ruling over him or her is praised.

Therefore they themselves तैरेव felicitate the poet on his Daya stotra. That they can't help doing so is indicated by the word avasaihi. They do so spontaneously involuntarily, wholeheartedly.

Readers will be aware of Kalidasa's famous saying Aapari-toshaat-vidushaam na-saadu manye. No poet is satisfied until and unless he obtains the approval and approbation of the learned and the wise. This poet of poets, Vedanta Desika, therefore talks here with satisfaction and pride about the approval and appreciation, which the other qualities of the Lord are lavishing on his Daya stotra. Elsewhere also there are several similar expressions in Desika's works (e.g.) Vaisampaayana-Saunaka-prabrutayaha - Srehtaassirah-Kampinaha, where reference is pointedly made to the approbation of the great Maharishis.

From the fact that the other gunas, who have been referred to in the course of the stotra in not very complimentary terms, have ungrudgingly congratulated Desika for his having praised Daya, Desika weaves out one more praise-worthy feature in Daya Devi. Her strength and support are capable of dispelling fear from the mind of her adherents and votaries. Where Daya is favourable, there is no need to entertain fear from any quarter. The Upanishads have in several places spoken of the fearlessness of those who rely on the Lord. नबिभेतिकुतश्चनेति ; नबिभेतिकदा चनेति. They have nothing to fear, nobody to be afraid of. That courage and fearlessness, it is here pointed out, are the result of reliance on Daya's strength. Incidentally one more plume is added to Daya's attractive and all-round greatness, a greatness always associated with the Lord, but one which He really acquires through Daya Devi.

The word मे (me) at the end of the 3rd pada of the stotra is so placed that it can be taken with the word abhinanditam that precedes it, as also with the word Satyaapitam, that follows it. Desika's dexterity in handling words is indeed superb, "In my case he seems to say, "felicitation by the great gunas has taken place, and also the establishment of the truth that there is no cause for fear for those who rely on the strength of Daya.

अद्यापि तद्वृषगिरीशदये भवत्या

मारम्भमात्रमनिदं प्रथमस्तुतीनाम् ।

संदर्शितस्वपुर्निर्वहणा सहेथाः

*Adhyaapi tat Vrishagireesa Daye Bhavatyaam Aarambhamaatram anidumpratamastuteenam ।
Sandarsita-svapara-nirvahanaa-sahetaaha*

Mandasya saahasam idam tvayi vandino me. " (102)

Daya of Vrishagireesa! Even for those primordial hymns (the Vedas) praise of you is still (even to-day) only in the initial stage. In respect of such a you, this dull-witted person (i.e., myself) who is only a Vandhi (encomiast) has been guilty of great audacity (in weaving out a complete poem of 100 slokas). This audacity on my part has to be pardoned by you, demonstrating thereby your capacity to forgive, and to make others forgive.

In this sloka Vedanta Desika tenders his apology for having sung the Daya Sataka. He calls his attempt a Saahasa. साहस a rash and audacious act. "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread." Desika's apologia is conceived in that same way. He refers to the fact that the ancient srutis, which are the first and foremost hymns of praise, have if at all, but very vaguely hinted at Daya, and left the matter there, without elaboration or elucidation. The srutis evidently felt unequal to the task of adequately praising Daya. But here I am, says Desika, a mere Vandhi a Vaithaalika, one who is employed in palaces to sing the praise of royalty, and a mandha मन्द a person of weak intellect, who has had the boldness, if not affrontery, to sing a whole stotra about that self-same Daya. So saying, Desika prays for pardon. He has to be pardoned by the Srutis, and he has to be pardoned by Daya Devi herself. He appeals to Daya and prays that she may be pleased to pardon him, and also secure to him the pardon of the Vedas. This dual capacity of Daya is referred to by the expression Sva-para-nirvahana स्वपर-निर्वहण.

She can forgive apacharaas committed in regard to her. She can also get others to forgive the faults and sins of commission and omission in regard to those others by those others themselves. How else has she been able to secure for us the protection of the Lord, and made Him ignore, overlook, and forgive our enormous sins? That Daya Devi is herself capable of saahasas has been referred to in sloka 71 above. So she can appreciate well-intentioned and well-meant saahasaa in others. Only it must not be the atisaahasas referred to in sloka 94. "Daya is audacious in seeking to get protection even for me", says Desika, "why should I not be equally audacious, and sing the praises of such a great and bold benefactor?"

प्रायो दये त्वदनुभावमहाम्बुराशौ

प्राचेतसप्रभृतयोऽपि परं तटस्थाः ।

तत्रावतीर्णमतलस्पृशमाप्लुतं मां

पद्मापतेः प्रहसनोचितमाद्रियेथाः ॥

(१०३)

Prayo Daye tvadanubhava-mahaamburasau

Praachetasaprabrutayopi param tatastaaha ।

Tatraavateernam-atalasprusam-aaplutam-maam

Padmaapateh Prahasanochitam audriyethaaha. ॥ (103)

Daya Devi! It looks as if even great persons like Valmiki have confined themselves to the shores of the great and mighty ocean of your glory, (i.e., stopped short of stepping into the waters). I got into that ocean, was very soon lifted off my feet, and began to flounder (float). And thereby I became the object of fun and ridicule to the Consort of Lakshmi, who sweetly smiled at my audacity. and consequent discomfiture. You please take me in your protection.

The poet had thought of the Vedas in the first instance and sung in the previous sloka about his having done something they had omitted to do. In this sloka, he thinks of the Upa-Brahmanas (The Itihasas and the Puranas) and how there is no full-fledged praise of Daya in any of them. It dawns upon him once again that he has purported to do something which the authors of those great works, Itihasas and Puranas, deliberately left unattempted. He compares his state to that of one who foolishly plunges into an ocean, when all wise people carefully stick to the shore.

Praachetasa is Valmiki. Praachetasa Prabrutayopi, even Valmiki and others like him. What did they do? They were param tatastaaha, they very much confined themselves to the shore, being afraid of getting into the sea, or rather of being drawn into it. They stuck to the shore so firmly, to terra firma in preference to the sucking waters of the sea.

And what is that sea or rather ocean? Tvad-unubhaava maha amburausi. The great ocean of Daya's glory. Hitherto Daya was referred to as a water-course, lake, river, sea and so on. Here it is Daya's glory (tvad anubhaava) त्वदनुभाव that is the mahaamburasi, ocean. Afraid of being drowned in the waters of that great ocean, Valmiki, Vyasa, Bharata and others, who had shore stayers. When compared to the srutis, the Itihasas and Puranas deal a little more with Daya. Hence the reference to those authors as taking their stand on the shore of Daya's glory. The use of the word 'Praayaha' also indicates this, that they were mostly tatastaas.

On the other hand, what is it I have done? Undaunted, I stepped in and plunged into the ocean, only to find that the depth of it was too much for me. I could not fathom its depth, could not touch the ground underneath. I was lifted up, and made to float and flounder. Fool that I am, I was not deterred by the several great souls like Valmiki not daring to come even near the water line, and I took my plunge,—Sri Desika seems to say.

Three words have been employed here to show the three stages (1) avateernam (2) a-talasprusam and (3) aaplutam, (1) getting down into the waters. (2) unable to get a foot-hold on the ground, and (3) lifted up by the buoyancy of water, and made to float.

Tala-sprik or ground-toucher, is a term used to indicate a person who knows a thing fully well, knows all about it, its pros and and its cons. Atalasprisa used here is intended to show how uninformed Desika is about Daya. He seems to suggest by the use of that term about himself, that he has not really understood about Daya's greatness and glory. As soon as he gets in, he finds himself lifted off his feet, and unable to touch ground. This is not a case of a gradual depth. It is a sudden and abrupt depth, as is indicated by avateernam followed by atalasprusam. The wise men knew, and hence desisted from getting in.

The ever watchful Lord and His Consort have been witnessing all that Desika does, and gets involved in. And Their lovely lips get curved in a sweet smile. It is like fond parents watching the toddlings of their darling child, and getting amused thereat. That the Lord loves tatastaas was shown even in the 9th sloks. He is a big ocean of Daya,—Karunaa-Varunaalayam. But He discovers and discloses Himself only to tatastaas,—those who stand on the shore, aghast at the immensity of His Swaroopaa, Roopa, Vibhava etc., realising the truth of the Upanishadic saying 'Avignaatam Vijaanataam Vignaatam Avijaanataam'. Vrishasaila tatastaas, were therefore rewarded by Him by His disclosing Himself to them as the Resplendent Lord of the Seven Hills. So too the tatastaas like Valmiki were very much beloved of Him and were the recipients of His Grace in an extraordinary measure.

Vedanta Desika instead of emulating those tatastaas behaves contrariwise by plunging in. So in an "I told you so," mood the Lord smiles on seeing Desika's discomfiture, floundering in the depths of Daya.

He does not smile alone but in concert with His Consort, Padmavati. Leelārāsa, or the sweetest of sport, is indulged in by the Lord and His spouse, Lakshmi. They therefore enjoy this rāsa also, and smile. That the smile is not one of disdain or contempt, but one of love and endearment is indicated by the Upasarga pra prefixed to hasana. (hasana can also mean ridiculing).

However much the child may realise the fondness of its parents, when they smile at its discomfiture, it is apt to feel hurt. In that mood Desika appeals to Daya Devi and prays, please take me in your protection, "aadriyetaaha आद्रियेशः This is the last prayer of Desika to Daya Devi in this stotra. In fact this is the last of the ślokas in this stotra addressed to Daya Devi.

वेदान्तदेशिकपदे विनिवेश्य बालं

देवो दयाशतकमेतदवाद्यन्मां ।

वैहारिकेण विधिना समये गृहीतं

वीणाविशेषमिव वेङ्कटशैलनाथः ॥

(१०४)

Vedantadesikapade vinivesya bualam

Devo Dayaasatakam etad avaadayan-maam ।

Vaihaarikena vidhinaa samaye griheetam

veena visesham iva Venkatasailanaathaha ॥

(104)

That Deva who is the Lord of Venkatasaila has placed (me) this infant on the Peeta (pedestal) of Vedantacharya and has made me give out this Daya Satakam,—even as a rasika takes up a veena in a delightful mood dictated by the enjoyment of leela (sport), and makes that veena sing beautifully.

In this śloka which is fraught with several very great and important meanings and suggestions, the chief idea is that of satvika-tyaga. सत्त्विक त्याग To the vishistadvaitin everything is the Lord's and must be offered up to the Lord. This must be done in the threefold way of swaroopatya, kartrutva-tyaga and phala-tyaga. The central idea of this śloka is that by himself the poet

Daya Sataka, and that it is the great Lord who resides on Venkata-chala, and has an infinite instinct for sport, that has really made Desika give out this Daya Sataka. The analogy is of a great musician (Vainika vidwan) taking up a veena, when the muse is on him and he feels like indulging in it, and making it give out delicious and delightful music. The musician here is Lord Srinivasa. The veena is Vedanta Desika. The Lord who has played this Daya Satakam on the Veena of Vedanta Desika is very aptly referred to as “Devaha” देवः. The word “deva” not only denotes divinity, but also a taste for sport or kreedu क्रीडा. The words समये गृहीतं “Samaye griheetam” are also very aptly used. The vainika vidwan and the veena are always there, but it is only on occasions that the mood comes on the vainika and it is that period that is indicated by the word “samaye”—at the proper time. So also in regard to the Lord and Vedanta Desika, the word “samaye” has got very great significance. The Lord did not think it fit to sing Daya Sataka by Himself, or through others; before this Stotra was sung through Desika. So also Desika was chosen as the fit and apt instrument, through which Daya Sataka has to be given out to the world, at a particular point of time (samaya) in his life. The word “samaye” therefore indicates the coalescence of the Lord’s sankalpa (desire) to sing the praise of Daya Sataka through Desika, and Desika’s own sukrita (good deeds) entitling him to that benefit.

Desika here has referred to himself as “baalaha” बालः. Baalaha means an infant, an immature person. This word is employed here by way of naichanusandhana, the anusandhaana or expression of one’s smallness and incapacity, felt out of a sincere sense of humility. In Tamil it is called “அவையடக்கம்” (avaiaidakkam). The idea sought to be conveyed is, that just as the veena, which though incapable of giving out musical notes of its own accord, at the touch of the deft fingers of an expert vainika gives out pleasant and melodious notes which are enchanting and rapturous to the hearers, so too, though by himself Vedanta Desika may be nothing and may almost be akin to an achetana (inert matter) like the veena—yet the clever and capable Lord has utilised him to give out Daya Sataka to the world. The word “baala” reminds one of the Brahadaaranya Upanishad. One of the mantraas there says that after having learnt everything that is worth learning, the great ones will be like children: बाल्येन तिष्ठासेत्

Though it might not have been Desika's intention, yet the word "baalaha" employed is so apt and applicable to the greatness and scholarship of Vedanta Desika. As he has stated about himself in the Sankalpa Sooryodaya, by the age of 20 he had mastered all the vidyas (branches of learning). His learning and his modesty are by-words in the history of Vaishnavism. Though in the sphere of controversy he bowed to none, in regard to his conduct through life, he was child-like and simple in the extreme, short in stature and unassuming and modest by nature.

The opening words of the sloka—"Vedantadesika pade vinivesya baalam" are to be understood and enjoyed in the context of a great event in Desika's life, gratefully mentioned by him in several places in his own works. Born in the year 1268 A.D. in Kancheepuram, this Acharya who was named Venkatanatha by his parents, stayed for a number of years at Tiruvahindrapuram (near Cuddalore New Town in South Arcot District in the Madras State) where he did penance, and acquired the prasaada or bounty of the Lord. Then he travelled far and wide, and visited almost all the sacred places in this holy land of Bharata-varsha from Badrinath to Cape Comorin. Having returned to his native place Kancheepuram, he was living there for several years, leading the life of a true Vaishnavite Acharya. A call came to him then from Srirangam, the headquarters of great acharyas from Alavandar downwards. It was a command from Lord Sri Ranganatha Himself, the Presiding Deity of that place and indeed was couched as such: "Sreemat Sri Ranganathasya Vishvakṣenasya saasanam." श्रीमत् श्रीरङ्गनाथस्य विष्वक्सेनस्य शासनम्. The great and celebrated annual Adhyayana Utsavam of that place (inaugurated by Tirumangai Alwar centuries ago) was objected to and its performance obstructed by Advaitins who protested against the importance given to the Tamil works of the Alvars known as the Divya Prabhandam, very highly venerated by all the Sri Vaishnava Acharyas from the time of Nathamunigal of the ninth century A.D., To establish the sanctity and supremacy of the Divya Prabhandam by refuting the arguments of Advaitins against the Tamil language and against introducing the Tamil Scriptures into Temple rituals, Desika's services were requisitioned by the Acharyas then residing at Srirangam. Desika readily started from Kanchi and reached Srirangam; and it is said that after a long and serious debate at wide scholarship, keen intellect, and polemic skill; and, above his deep and abiding devotion and admiration for the Tamil es of the Alwars, vanquished the adversaries and made them apt the Prabhandas, especially Nammalwar's Tiruvoimozhi Saaras-saraswataanaam सारस्सारस्वतानां and Samhita-Saarva-umee संहितासार्वभौमी (as the quintessence of language, and as empress among Samhitas). The Adyayana Utsavam was held, and celebrated more grandly than in previous years.

Lord Sri Ranganatha in recognition of this great achievement Vedanta Desika is said to have conferred on him the title "Vedantacharya." For the authenticity of this happening and this honour to Desika, we are not left to rely on the admiring utterances of a disciple or follower, or on mere tradition. For, this incident, the conferment of this title by the Lord, has been gratefully acknowledged by Desika himself in his works. The second half of the sloka of his Adhikarana Saravali runs as follows:

विश्वस्मिन्नामरूपाण्यनुविहितवत्ता तेन देवेन दत्तां

वेदान्ताचार्यसंज्ञामवहितबहुवित्सार्थमन्वर्थयामि

This is a definite and categorical statement that the great Lord, who gives a form and a name to this universe and everything that is in it, was graciously pleased to bestow on Desika the samgnya

"Vedantacharya." A samgnya is a name or noun having special meaning and peculiar significance (by the use of which a person is definitely indicated to the exclusion of the rest). Desika would not have been vain enough to refer to it as a title or biruda बिरुद: he calls it modestly a samgnya. But what a name! VEDANTACHARYA. There is only one Vedantacharya and that is the Lord Himself.

Vedantakrit Vedavidevachaaham. (Gita): He has been pleased to confer that name and that appellation on Venkatanatha, the poet of Kanchi. But when one comes to think of it, who but the owner of a thing or name can give it away to another and make it other's own? This is also pointed out by this same acharya in his Stotra Bashya (Commentary on the Stotra Ratna) it has been said Svakam-iti-Hari-dattam-Nigamantacharyakam—स्वकमिति हि ... निगमान्ताचार्यकं (Nigamanthacharyatva given to me as His own, to be kept as my own). As already said, this title of "Vedantacharya" is referred to in ever so many places in the numerous works of this prolific writer in three languages, Sanskrit, Tamil, and Manipravala. This is not the place to gather together and catalogue all those references in the poet's works to this very unique event in his life.

But how comes it that what Lord Ranganātha of Srirangam did is attributed to Lord Srinivasa of Tirupati, and why has it been sung that Venkatasailanātha placed this poet on the pedestal of Vedantacharya? The answer is furnished not only by the general and well known theory that all the Lords in the several temples are one and the same, but by a special identity between Ranganatha and Srinivasa enjoyed by Tiruppanalwar in the third verse of his "Amalānāadipiran"—வடவேங்கட மாமலை வான வார்கள் சந்திசெய்ய நின்றான் அரங்கத் தரவினணையான். The great Lord of Vaikunta first alighted on Venkatachala where He stood for a time before going to Srirangam and lying down there on His serpent couch. So it is quite proper and apt to say that Lord Srinivasa gave to Desika the name and title Vedantacharya.

Acharya and Desika are synonymous and interchangeable terms; and so Vedantacharya and Vedanta Desika convey the same meaning. The poet whose name was Venkatanatha or Venkatesa has ever since been known as Vedanta Desika and Vedantacharya because that was the appellation that the Lord had given to him.

Another incident in Desika's life has to be recapitulated here. While he was only five years of age, a veritable baalaha बालः Desika was the recipient of the blessings of his prāacharya, प्रचार्यः, Vaatsya Varadacharya (Nadadoor Ammal) in the following words:

प्रतिष्ठापितवेदान्तः प्रतिशिक्षितबहिर्मतः ।

भूयास्तैविद्यमान्यस्त्वं भूरिकल्याणभाजनम् ॥

The promising and precocious child was to become an establisher of Vedanta, (Vedanta-pratishtaapaka). When he became that actually, and that too not of one Vedanta but of two Vedantas, Sanskrit and Tamil, the Ubhaya Vedanta, the Lord Himself gave him the name and title of Vedantacharya. This blessing received in early life has been very thankfully and gratefully recorded by Desika in the Sankalpa Sooryodaya and in the second sloka of Adhikarana Saravali. A sketch in colour on the ceiling of the Pradakshina of Lord Varadaraja's shrine on the Hastigiri in Kanchipuram depicts this incident in Desika's life.

This great honour was bestowed on him when he was literally a child, a baala. It looks as if the Lord only put His sanction and seal on what a great Acharya had done. He once again made true what a true and sincere devotee of His had said. Satyam-vidhatum-nija-bhritya-bhaashitam. सत्यं विधातुं निजभृत्यभाषितं.

That the Vedantacharya-pada bestowed on him is really a ubhaya-Vedantacharya-pada is also very subtly and beautifully demonstrated by this great poet in and by this sloka. This Daya Sataka has been, it is said, sung by the Lord with Desika as a Veena-visesha,—an excellent Veena. Adhikarana Saravali which avowedly deals with the Brahma Sutras and the Sri Bhashya is a treatise on the Sanskrit Vedanta. The penultimate sloka therein conceived in the same saatvika-tyaga style as this sloka of Daya Sataka, refers to the Lord having given out that Adhikarana Saravali employing Desika as a conch. paanchajanya..... पाञ्चजन्यक्रमेण स्वाध्मात् रङ्गनाथः स्वयमिति मुखरीकृत्य (मां) सम्मोदतेस्म. Here the Daya Sataka has been given out in the form of the sweet and mellifluous notes of the Veena, the softest of musical instruments. The conch is a loud instrument employed in war as can be seen from the first chapter of the Bhagavat-Geeta. Desika never sings casually and never employs words haphazard. The difference between the conch (shanka) and the veena is the difference between the two Vedantas, in both of which Desika had attained a high degree of proficiency. The Sanskrit Vedanta involves polemic warfare. The Tamil Vedanta provides sweet and quiet enjoyment. Even the Lord finds great sweetness and attraction in the Prabhandas; for, they are Sadhyaha—Paramaatmani—chitta—ranjaka—tamaihi सद्यः परमात्मनि चित्तरञ्जकतमैः and Svaadu Suvyahritaani. स्वादु सुव्याहृतानि. And so they are like the sweet and pleasing notes issuing from the Veena. In fact the Lord Himself is sweet to the Alvars like the notes of the Veena. Vide யாழ்வினிசையே ! and முன்னல்யாழ்பயில் நூல் நரம்பின் முதிர் சுவையே of Nammalwar. Daya Sataka is thus the quintessence of the Prabhandas, whereas Adhikarana Saravali is the summary of the meaning and import of the Brahmasutras, about which there are as many views as there are Bhashyakaaraas (commentators). Further elaboration is needless. The Sanskrit Vedanta is like the Ganges, muddy, violent and forceful. The Dramidopanishad is like the Yamuna, dark, cool and pleasant. They were flowing as two different streams till they were united and blended into one stream, the ubhaya Vedanta system, by the mingling of the Saraswati (words) of Vedanta Desika, thereby bringing about a Triveni, a confluence of three streams. This is the contribution of Vedanta Desika to Vishistadwaita Siddhanta and Vaishnavite religion, for which he has been justly famous through the centuries.

Even in regard to the form of satvika-tyaga indulged in in this sloka, Desika follows closely in the footsteps of Nammalvar. In the 9th Tiruvoimozhi, in the 7th Pathu, Nammalwar has stated that his verses were sung through his mouth by the Lord Himself: என் சொல்லால் யான் சொன்ன இன்கலி என்பித்து தன் சொல்லால் தான் தன்னைக் கீர்த்தித்த மாயன், (Making it appear as if these are my words and my verses, the Lord has really sung about Himself by His own words).

In regard to Daya Sataka the singer is the Lord, of course, through Desika. But the subject of the song is not the Lord Himself, as it was in the Tiruvoimozhi, but Daya Devi. Daya Devi being the consort of the Lord, He probably felt it delicate to Himself sing her praise; for that purpose probably He Himself came into this world as Sri Thoopul Venkatanatha (Vedanta Desika) and has sung Daya's praise in the form of this Daya Sataka. Desika has been claimed and acclaimed to be an incarnation of Lord Srinivasa, and certainly one of the chief purposes of that incarnation must have been to sing about Daya to whome He owes His real greatness, and because of whose achievements he becomes 'Visuddhanam vaachaam stutipadam—विशुद्धानां वाचां स्तुतिपदं (sloka 68 ante) the subject of praise by the srutis.

Thus this sloka seems to give the Avataara-rahasya, the Avataara-prayojana and the Avataara-karya of the author of this work, Vedanta Desika.

अनवधिप्रधिकृत्य श्रीनिवासानुकम्पा-

मवितथविषयत्वाद्विश्वमब्रूडयन्ती ।

विविधकुशलनीवी वेङ्कटेशप्रसूता

स्तुतिरियमनवद्या शोभते सत्त्वभाजाम् ॥

(१०५)

Anavadhim adhikritya Sreenivaasaanukampaam

avitathavishayatvaad-visvam avreedayantee ।

Vividhakushalaneevee Venkateshaprasoota

This stotra begotten by (of) Venkatesa,—which deals about the limitless Daya of Lord Srinivasa,—which contains matter not one of which is untrue or false, and about which therefore no one need feel abashed or ashamed,—which is a fountain-head for all kinds of auspiciousness,—and which is free from all fault or blemish, this Stotra is sure to shine glorious in the eyes of all Saatvic men.

In this and the next sloka Desikā harks back to the Maalini मालिनी metre which he handled in the fourth decad. It is one of his favourite metres, and one with which he ends several of his stotras.

With many poets, after the main theme is over, even if they sing further slokas by way of winding up, those slokas will be flat and commonplace. Not so with this master poet. One has only to enjoy the language and sentiments contained in this and the later slokas to agree with what has been stated here.

The fine medium of slesha is employed in this sloka to reconcile the apparent conflict between slokas 102 and 103 on the one hand (in which the poet has talked of himself as the author of this stotra) and sloka 104, on the other, (in which he said that the Lord it was who gave out this stotra). After all it is Venkatesa who is the author of this hymn of praise. (This is an obvious reference to his having been named after the great Lord Venkatesa). Whether it be Lord Venkatesa of the Seven Hills or the poet Venkatesa of Kancheepuram this stotra is Venkatesa-prasoota वेङ्कटेश प्रसूता born to (of) Venkatesa, (produced by Venkatesa).

The word Stutihi स्तुतिः is of the feminine gender. So the child is a girl. The rest of the Stotra describes the nature and qualities of this excellent girl.

Anavadhim - Sreenivaasaanukampaam - adhikritya—Concerning that limitless anukampa or Daya of Srinivasa. The subject of this Stuti or Stotra is Daya. The child enjoys the blessings of Daya.

Avitatha-vishayatvaat-visvam-avreedayantee—No one need be ashamed of anything contained in this stotra because its contents are all avitatha अवितथ falseless, i.e., true. Vitatha means false: a-vitatha is therefore true. Viswam is the entire world avreedayantee अव्रीडयन्ती means, makes it unnecessary to be ashamed or abashed about: why? because its vishaya विषय or content is avitatha. If a woman with half-closed eyelids is praised a person as visaalaakshee, विशालाक्षी (broad-eyed lady), every concerned must feel ashamed. But when existing excellently and appropriately praised, every one feels happy.

The girl has such high qualities like truth, purity and chastity, no one need in the slightest feel ashamed about her, but every can legitimately be proud of her.

Vividha-kusala-neevee—विविधकुशलनीवी Neevi is the knot lady's garment. It also means the capital or principal sum lucing or earning interest or other profit by way of augmentation. It may therefore be taken to refer to the source or fountain-
.

Kusala refers to what is right, proper, auspicious and happy, stotra is thus said to be capable of yielding to those who y it, welfare, happiness and auspiciousness. Vividha means d. For all sorts and kinds of happiness this Stuti is the source.

Anavadya—अनवद्या blameless, irreproachable. The stuti is less. The girl has faultless form and so, extremely handsome.

Just as a girl born of a good family, having faultless character possessing a very attractive personality will be praised by ight-minded persons, this stotra also is highly appreciated enjoyed by Satvic-minded persons. (Compare Desika's enjoy- of Ramanuja's works in this same strain in the sloka मुनिबहुमत Muni-bahumata-saara.....of Yatiraja Saptati)

There seems to be no limit to the sense of gratitude that Desika towards the Lord. He is thankful and happy that the Lord given to him His own name, conferred on him a title that gs only to Him, and also given him the authorship of a poem is grandeur and excellence.

शतकमिदमुदारं सम्यगभ्यस्यमाना-

न्वृषगिरिमधिरुह्य व्यक्तमालोकयन्ती ।

अनितरशरणामाधिराज्येऽभिषिञ्चे-

च्छमितविमतपक्षा शार्ङ्गधन्वानुकम्पा ॥

(१०६)

am idam udaaram samyag abhyasyamaanaan rishagirim adhiruhya vyaktam aalokayantee । rasaranaam aadhirajye abhishinchet

The Grace (Daya) of that Wielder of the Saarnga (Bow) will ascend the heights of Vrishagiri and cast her benign glances on all who correctly and well repeat (recite again and again) this centum of verses, which is capable of liberally conferring all good; and after dispelling all hostile forces and factors, she will confer on them the Kingdom ruled over by persons who have no support but hers (Daya's).

The previous śloka dealt with the benefits which can be obtained by a study of this Stotra by extolling its excellence and incidentally indicating those benefits. This śloka is more avowedly a phala-sruti फलश्रुति for this stotra. The usual scheme indulged in by many of the Alvars in the last verse of each decadium of their songs is adopted here by Desika. It is to extol the Vishaya vailakshanya, the vaktru vailakshanya and the Prabanda Vailakshanya, and then to indicate the good and great things that will be obtained by those who study the work. That is to say, excellence of the topic, greatness of the author and the merit of the work itself,—these will be followed by a reference to the benefits obtainable by the study thereof. Readers would have noticed how in śloka 105 the threefold excellence (of the topic, author and work respectively) had been dealt with. This śloka makes pointed reference to the phala or fruit. It starts by reiterating the prabandha-vailakshanya. This is a Satakam,—a hundred. It is udaaram—उदारम्, generous and munificent, lofty and excellent, noble and illustrious. The Lord is all that and Daya Devi is also all that. This Satakam equally with them is also udaaram.

Abhyaasa is repetition. Samyag is well and correctly. Samyag abhyasyamaanaan,—those who truly and well recite and repeatedly recite. They will recite it again and again to enjoy to their hearts' content the beauties of language and sentiment enshrined in the verses, and to incessantly contemplate on the greatness and glory of Daya Devi as depicted therein. Just as the enjoyment of the Lord is ever fresh and never stale ஆராவமுதம் and नित्यापूर्वं, the enjoyment of the Stotra also will always be fresh. Each time one reflects on a śloka of this poem, some new idea emanates, some new beauty comes to the surface. It is a perennial stream of literary beauty and artistic excellence, that gushes forth all the while, exhilarating the spirit, and elevating the soul into realms of mystic communion with the Lord Himself, through the instrumentality of Daya.

Samyag-abhyaasa has been mentioned here to denote recitation and reflection of the Stotra with a full understanding of the meaning and significance of the verse, and not a mere parrot-like repetition.

Those who revel in the language and the sentiment of this Satakam will become the recipient of Daya's Kataksha (benign glances). She will see them well, and clearly—vyaktam aalokayantee. She will see them from the heights of Vrishagiri on which she has got up. Vrishagirim-adhiruhya-aalokayantee. Here it is plainly asserted that Vrishagiri is really the seat of Daya Devi, not so much the Lord's. This idea is reinforced by the poet's deliberate omission to refer to the Lord in this sloka as the Lord of Vrishagiri, but as Saarn gadhanvaa. In all the 108 slokas of this stotra barring only a few, reference has been made to the Hill by one name or another. In almost all of the large number of those slokas the Hill has been linked with the Lord. This (106th) is one of the very few slokas in which there is a reference to the Hill, and yet the Lord is designated by another name. There seems to be no end to the literary devices indulged in by this poet to drive his point home. That there is a deliberately intended suggestion (dhvani ध्वनि) will be clear from the use of the word Saarn gadhanvaa, which in turn is calculated to remind the reader of sloka 28, in which the Lord was referred to as Saarn gee. It was in and by that sloka that we were told that Vrishagiri is the Lord's vijaya-sthana विजयस्थान. Why it is so, is explained in this 106th sloka by referring to Daya Devi as having ascended this Hill—Vrishagirim-adhiruhya. Tirumala is thus the capital city of Daya's Kingdom, and the Lord taking His residence there is essentially a Dayavaan.

From the top of Vrishagiri, Daya Devi looks graciously upon those who have mastered this stotra sung in her praise. And at once she drenches them in the cool and life-giving stream of her protective Kataksha. Abhisheka literally means sprinkling water, or wetting and drenching. It is because the installation and the crowning of a King closely follow his being bathed with "coronation water," the word Abhisheka has come to denote the installation of Kings.

The high altitude of Vrishagiri is conducive to give Da Devi a good vision (vyaktam aalokayantee) of the entire earth situ

beneath. It is also helpful to let loose the cool and pleasant streams of her grace in which to bathe those in the plains, whom she thinks fit to be bathed therein. So they are all coronated, to change the metaphor. She crowns them kings—Abhishinchet.

What is the Kingdom over which they are crowned? Anitara-sarānaanaam-aadhirajye. अनितर शरणानामाधिराज्ये The great kingdom reserved for those who look to no one but the Lord and His Daya for help and protection. Aadhirajya is sovereignty, overlordship. The Kingdom of Heaven is the Kingdom of service to the Lord and His chosen devotees. This is referred to by Desika in several places as Kinkaratva-aadhiraajyam किङ्करत्वाधिराज्यम् the sovereignty of service. This is the sovereignty desired by those who are anitarasaraanaas, those whose sole refuge is the Lord and the Lord alone, and who have no taste for, and do not desire, any purushartha except service to Him. Those who are the recipients of Daya's gracious Kataksha because of their having mastered this Satakam, are installed as sovereigns in that Kingdom of Service or Kainkarya. Worldly wealth, power and position, and even the exalted posts held by Brahma, Indra and the other Devas, are the gifts that Daya Devi bestows on her votaries who desire to obtain those preferments. But they are not anitara-saraanaas or true paramai-kantins, for though they may look to the Lord's Daya alone for help and assistance, their desires are not for the Lord and the Lord alone. They belong to the first three categories of persons who approach the Lord, as mentioned in the Bhagavad Gita, the aarta, the arthaarthi and the gignaasu. The fourth person there enumerated is the Gnani, who is specially extolled by the Lord Himself as His soul. What special gifts are reserved for the Gnani who wants nothing of the Lord but service to the Lord, those are all available to the persons who master this centum of praise—Daya Satakam.

The words Samīta-Vimata-pakshaa—शमित विमतपक्षा meaning having conquered the enemies' forces have to be understood both in relation to the upasaka's foes, and also to the opposing forces ranged against Daya. Both sets of enemies are conquered and the King is installed on the throne.

Saarn gadhanvaanukampa, the Daya of the wielder of the Saarnga (bow). This mode of reference to Daya furnishes as it were the reason for her ability to quell opposing forces. Is she punishment is unknown to her. She is agnaathanigrahaa—अज्ञातनिग्रहा. She is a favour-bestowing mother to one and all (viswa). Or she is a mother desirous of bestowing all anugrahas (viswa-anugraha).

The second phrase Vyatishajat-svargaapavargaam indicates her capacity to confer all the pleasures of trivarga and of moksha. "Swarga" is here used compendiously to denote the first three purusharthas, dharma, artha, and kama. This phrase used towards the end of the stotra is very reminiscent of the words sootim-apavarga-trivargayoho of sloka 10 ante, the first sloka in praise of Daya in this stotra. If at the upakrama उपक्रम (beginning) of a work, and in its upasamhaara उपसंहार (end) the same idea is given expression to, and if one also finds that idea very often dealt with in the course of the work, it has to be taken that that is the central idea or theme, Taatparya तात्पर्य, of the work. Tested by these lingaas लिङ्गाः or symbols, we can see that the conferment by Daya of Dharma Artha and Kama purusharthas on the one hand, and moksha purushartha on the other is what the author desires to be understood as the chief idea and the prominent theme of the stotra.

That by nature Daya is favour-bestowing was conveyed by the first expression Visvaanugrahamaataram. That is her anugraha-seelatva—अनुग्रहशीलत्व. Her capacity or power to confer those anugrahas in the shape of trivarga and apavarga is indicated by the second compound vyatishajat-svargaapavargaam. This is her phala-dhana-shakti फलदानशक्ति. The third epithet (visheshana) "sudhaa-sadreecheem" is intended to bring out Daya's intrinsic worth. Even apart from her anugrahaseelatva and phala-dana-shakti, she is by nature sweet and life-giving, like sudhaa, amrita or nectar.

Iti-dayaam-astuta—Daya has been praised in this manner i.e., in this threefold way. Venkateswara Kavi has praised Daya in this wise. Praise of Daya is itself new. Praise in this wise (iti) is indeed novel. Wherefrom did the poet get inspiration to sing them? Bhaktya भक्त्या—Out of the intensity of his devotion to Daya.

Pausing for a moment, the poet looks back on the verses of the stotra; he takes a bird's eye view of their (krama) order, their classification into ten decads, well defined and clearly marked out by the varying metre in which each decad is couched, the topic of each of the decads, and the development of those topics in a strain-less succinct manner. He wonders at the arrangement, at the development, at the language, at the sentiment, at everything that goes to make up for the excellence of the stotra as a finished product of literary, and at the same time religious, art; and the feeling grows on him that this must be the work not of a human mind and human hand, but of that great and mighty Sankalpa or will of that great Lord of the Universe, a Sankalpa which he has himself described elsewhere as Visvaparipalana-jagarooka-sankalpa विश्वपरिपालनजागरूक-संकल्प a sankalpa in praise of which this great poet has himself brought out a great and grand drama—the Sankalpa Sooryodaya. This idea is dealt with in the second half of the sloka.

Iha-padyaanaam-ayam-kramaha इह पद्यानां अयंक्रमः Here-of the verses—in this order, (i.e.,) This particular order of verses in this stotra sung out of the great devotion of the poet towards Daya. The suggestion evidently seems to be that not even the poet's devotion is responsible for the glory of the stotra, but only the Sankalpa or will of the Lord that a Stotra should emanate from this poet in this form with all its fineness and finish. The Lord pleased with the sense of devotion and adoration that the poet has in regard to Daya willed that a stotra of this nature should come out from him. That will is referred to as Bhagavat Sankalpa, (the will of Bhagavan). That Sankalpa in turn is entirely vidheya विधेय to Daya, i.e., dependent upon Daya, and subservient to Daya. That Sankalpa is here equated to a Kalpaka Vriksha, the mythical tree in Paradise which is capable of fulfilling all desires expressed in its vicinity. Just as ripe and tasty fruits fall from a mango tree, from this Kalpaka tree of the Lord's will these verses have fallen. Fruits are gathered from a tree, or the tree is shaken by human hand to make the fruits fall down. Only fruits that are ripe will be gathered or made to fall by shaking the branches. Here without anybody's attempt to pluck the fruits or make them fall, the fruits have fallen of their own accord impelled by the strong force of a sweeping gale. That is shown by the reference to 'Ihanjhaamaarutadhootachootanayataha'—as per the law of mango fruits falling down, when the mango tree is shaken by a violent gale. Such a mango tree is compared to the kalpaka this Kalpaka tree has dropped this rich and plentiful lot of fruity verses. The mango tree is shaken by a hurricane, (Jhanjha-maa-ruth-dhuta). Who shakes the Kalpaka tree here? Daya Devi. She is the Jhanjhaamaaruta or the terrific wind which passes over the Kalpaka tree of the Lord's will and makes it shed these sweet verses of this lovely stotra. That is why the Sankalpa was talked of as Daya-vidheya.

Daya is thus said to have been chiefly instrumental in Desika singing this stotra in her praise. She moved the Sankalpa or the will of the Lord and that Sankalpa in turn has produced this stotra through Desika, all because of Desika's deep devotion to Daya, a devotion equalling if not exceeding, his devotion towards the Lord Himself.

कामं सन्तु मिथःकरम्बितगुणावद्यानि पद्यानि नः
कस्यास्मिञ्छतके सदम्बुक्तके दोषश्रुति क्षाम्यति ।

निष्प्रत्यूहवृषाद्रिनिर्झरझरत्कारच्छलेनोच्चलन्

दीनालम्बनादिव्यदम्पतिदयाकल्लोलकोलाहलः ॥ (१०८)

Kaamam santu mithah-karambita-gunaavadyaani-padyaani naha
Kasyaasminchatake sadambu-katake doshasrutim kshaamyati
Nishpratyooha Vrishaadri-nirjharajharatkara-chchalenochalan
Deenaalambana Divya Dampati Dayaa kallola Kolaahalaha (108)

In our verses let there be excellences and defects intermingled in abundance. But no one's fault-finding words in regard to this centum which is capable of cleansing the hearts of the satvic-minded persons, will ever be tolerated by the mighty onrush and uproar of the waves of the helpless man's support,—the Divine Grace of that Divine Couple,—in the guise of the falls and cascades of Vrishadri flowing with terrific noise.

In slokas 104 to 106 the Stotra and the slokas in it were referred to in very appreciative terms. Sweet as the notes of the Veena (104), a treasure-trove for all auspiciousness (105), and liberal beyond words (106). They all sound like self-praise and the poet is not unaware of it. He adverts to the possibility of the slokas, some or all of them, being described by others as bereft of merit, and being full of faults, in language or sentiment or both. That however does not perturb him. For he has sung this hymn out of his Bhakti (devotion), and it is his humble offering at the feet

Daya conceived in humility and sung in all modesty. If people use to pick holes in such a work, and/or discover faults, flaws, foibles, no one need bother about it; the poet himself does mind it. For he is certain that Daya Devi will not tolerate adverse criticism of this work in praise of her, and that is enough for him. If he had sung it for his own glorification he would have taken adverse criticism to heart, and either attempted to repel it as unfounded and baseless, or if that was not possible, he would have pointed the faults and admitted his errors. But in regard to a work like this, sung in the true Satvika tyaga spirit, where comes the question of minding what others feel or say about it?

Every true devotee who has sung in praise of His God in the excess of his devotion, if asked about the merits of his songs, will readily admit that they may not be sweet. Probably they are inferior. But it is sweet to the Lord in whose praise it is sung. And the devotee rests content in that feeling. இனாய புன்கவிதையே எம்பிராற்கினியவாறே. After having sung 44 soulstirring songs about Lord Ranganātha, Vipranarayana, better known as 'Madharadippdoi Alwar,' winds up his Tirumaalai (திருமாலை) with the above words, which mean that though it may be inferior to the best of the above poetry, it will be sweet to his Lord, (எம்பிரான்—Lord and Liege). Desika has almost copied the words of that sloka towards the end of his classical Rahasya-traya-saara, when he sings “கூனுள நெஞ்சுகளால் குற்றமெண்ணி இகழ்ந்திடும்தேனுள பாதமலர் திருமாலுக்குத் தித்திக்குமே.” Though men with crooked and perverted minds may decry the work by imagining faults and defects, it will taste sweet to the Lord (of Lakshmi with feet like flowers exuding honey). This sloka of Daya Sataka embodies almost the very sentiments of the Tamil verse.

Desika makes it clear by the opening words of the sloka that when one told him about the existence of faults along with, probably, some merits, he was not going to join issue with him about it. Kaamam Santu कामं सन्तु is a trite expression to denote ‘all means let it be as you say.’ It may also mean “let there be many faults as you would desire.”

The rest of the sloka explains why that is of no moment to the poet. Whose hostile criticism is going to be tolerated? कस्य-ति क्षाम्यति Kasya-dosha-srutim-kshaamyati.

Daya Devi is certainly not going to allow them even to be heard. The words of critics will get drowned in the mighty noise (Kolaahala) of Daya's forceful flow imitating the noise of the falls of the Tirumalai Hill,—even as a human voice will get drowned in the mighty roar of the waters of the Niagara falls. Readers will remember how in the course of the stotra the flow of Daya had been likened to the cascades on the Hill of Vrishadri (e.g.) slokas 31 and 69. Nirjhara is a hill cascade.

What is it that rushes so mightily? Daya-kallola-kolaahalaha दया-कल्लोल-कोलाहलः The hostile uproar of the rush of the waves of Daya.

Whose Daya? Divya Dampati Daya. The Daya of the Divine Couple (Sri and Srinivasa). This epithet gives the clue as it were to the interpretation of the Daya of Vrishachalapati referred to in almost every sloka of this stotra. Really only the Daya of the Celestial Couple was talked of in all the slokas of this stotra though it was referred to as Srinivasaanukampa, Padmaa Sahaaya Karunaa etc., in places, and more frequently as Daya Kripa Karuna Anukampa or even as the Daya of Vrishagireesa. Desika has elsewhere established that wherever the Lord or Narayana is talked of in the Srutis and other Shaastraic texts it invariably takes in Sri or Lakshmi also, as the two are inseparable and always go together.

In this sloka there is one epithet or viseshana for the Sataka and one for Daya. The Sataka is referred to as sadambu-kataka. Kataka is the cleaning nut plant, the nuts of which have got the power, when added to muddy water, of clearing the water of mud and along with it dirt and impurity. Here the kataka, meaning thereby the sataka, (centum), is capable of cleaning and clearing the minds of saatvik type of men. It is clear Desika here is thinking of the beautiful Sloka in the Valmiki Ramayana (Balakanda, 2nd Sarga, 5th sloka).

अकर्ममिदं तीर्थं भरद्वाज निशामय ।

रमणीयं प्रसन्नान्बु सन्मनुष्य मनो यथा ॥

The righteous minded men's minds will be cleared and purified by a study of Daya Sataka. Just as the Kataka nut makes the water free from mud and dirt, so also Daya Sataka is capable of clearing the mind of all low thoughts and vicious tendencies and maintaining it in a pure and placid state.

Daya is here described as Deenaalambana Daya,—Daya the only help, or source of help, for all helpless beings. Deena means not only a poor and humble individual, but one who is miserable and wretched beyond measure and ever dejected and melancholy. Āalambhanam is support or prop. The outstanding quality of Daya is the help rendered to those who are utterly helpless.

The stotra started with solidified Daya,—Daya, hard and huge like the Hill. It ends with the torrential flow of Daya,—Daya—Kallola-Kolaahalaha दया-कल्लोल-कोलाहलः

May the Daya of Lord Srinivasa protect all of us!

कवितार्किक सिंहाय कल्याणगुणशालिने ।
श्रीमते वेङ्कटेशाय वेदान्तगुरवे नमः ॥

All Glory to Vedanta Desika
All Glory to Lord Srinivasa
All Glory to Srinivasa's Daya.

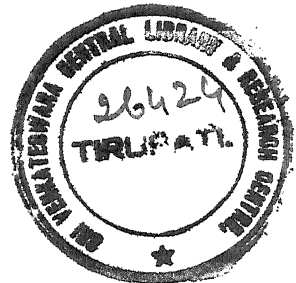

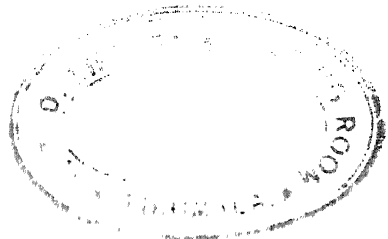

सर्वतन्त्रस्वतन्त्राय सिंहाय कविवादिनाम् ।
वेदान्ताचार्यवर्याय वेङ्कटेशाय मङ्गलम् ॥
श्रियःकान्ताय कल्याणनिधये निधयेऽर्थिनाम् । श्रीवेङ्कटनिवासाय श्रीनिवासाय मङ्गलम् ॥

INDEX OF SLOKAS

	Sl.	P.		Sl.	P.
अ			औ
केञ्चननिधिं ...	10	8	औत्सुक्यपूर्वमुपहृत्य ...	97	182
हूपारैरेकोदक ...	61	98
चैदविशिष्टान् ...	17	18	क
तेकृपणोऽपिजन्तुः ...	51	79	कमप्यनर्वाधि वन्दे ...	9	7
तैलंधितशासनेषु ...	27	34	कमलानिलयस्त्वया ...	26	33
तिविधिशिवैः ...	75	132	करुणे दुरितेषु ...	28	35
द्यापि तद्वृषगिरीश ...	102	195	कलशोदधिसंपदो ...	22	26
नवधिमधिकृत्य ...	105	205	कलिक्षोभोन्मीलत् ...	69	117
नन्याधीनः सन् ...	63	103	कामं सन्तु ...	108	214
नितरजुषामन्त ...	77	137	कृतिनः कमलावास ...	3	2
नुगुणदशापितेन ...	18	20	कृपणजनकल्पलतिकां ...	14	14
नुचरशक्त्यादिगुणां ...	11	10	कृपे कृतजगद्धिते ...	87	161
नुभवितुमधौघं ...	34	46	कृपे परवतस्त्वया ...	88	164
पां पत्युः शत्रून् ...	64	104	कृपे विगतवेलया ...	81	146
पि करुणे जनस्य ...	53	82	क्षणविलयिनां ...	78	139
पि निखिललोक ...	12	12
बहिष्कृत निग्रहान् ...	25	32	ख
भिमुखभावसंपद् ...	52	81	खिलं चेतोवृत्तेः ...	70	119
वतरणविशेषैः ...	35	48
विदितनिजयोग ...	32	42	ज
शिथिलकरणेऽस्मिन् ...	31	41	जगज्जन्मस्थेम ...	68	114
शेषविघ्नशमनम् ...	5	4	जगतिमितंपचात्वदितरां ...	56	87
हमस्म्यपराधकृवतीं ...	30	38	जलधेरिव शीतता दये ...	23	29
			जह्यात् वृषाचलपतिः ...	98	185
आ
प्राज्ञां ख्यातिं धनम् ...	41	58	त

	Sl.	P.		Sl.	P.
त्वदुदयतूलिकाभिः ...	59	92	प्रभूतविबुधद्विषत् ...	89	165
त्वदुपसदनादद्य इवो वा ...	79	141	प्रसक्तमधुना विधि ...	85	156
त्वया दृष्टस्तुष्टि भजते...	66	110	प्रसूय विविधं जगत् ...	82	148
त्वयि बहुमतिहीनः ...	40	56	प्राजापत्यप्रभृति विभवं ...	42	60
			प्रायो दये त्वदनुभाव ...	103	197
द			फ
दये दुग्धोदयः ...	67	112	फलवितरणदक्षं ...	33	44
दिव्यापाङ्गं दिशसि ...	50	76
दिशि दिशि गतिविद्विः...	38	52	भ
दृष्टेऽपि दुर्बलधियं ...	99	186	भगवति दये भवत्या ...	13	13
दैवात् प्राप्ते वृषगिरि ...	48	73	भीमे नित्यं भवजल ...	46	69
ध			म
धृतभुवना दये ...	54	84	मयि तिष्ठति दुष्कृतां ...	29	37
न			महाहोषेत्तन ...	94	178
नयने वृषाचलेन्दोः ...	20	22	मृदुहृदये दये ...	60	94
नातः परं किमपि ...	100	190	य
नामीपद्यस्फुरण ...	43	62	यस्मिन् दृष्टे तदितर ...	44	64
निगमसमाश्रिता ...	55	86	युगान्तसमयोचितं ...	83	152
निशामयतु मां नीला ...	8	6
निषादानां नेता ...	65	108	र
निस्सीमवैभवजुषां ...	101	193	रूढा वृषाचलपतेः ...	19	21
नैर्साकेण तरसा करुणे ...	92	175	व
प
परद्वयतपोधनप्रथन ...	86	159	वन्दे वृषगिरीशस्य ...	7	5
परहितमनुकम्पे ...	36	49	विगाहे तीर्थबहुलां ...	2	2
पराशरमुखान् वन्दे ...	4	3	विक्षेपमर्हसि दये ...	95	179
परिमितफलसङ्गात् ...	39	54	विज्ञातशासनगतिः ...	93	176
प्रणतप्रतिकूलमूलधाती ...	24	30	अशिथिलकरणे ...	31	41
प्रणिहितधियां त्वत्संपृक्ते	80	143	विबेत्सावेत्तु ...	62	101
प्रपद्ये तं गिरिं प्रायः ...	1	1	विष्णुहृदयं ...	107	211

	Sl.	P.		Sl.	P.
विश्वोपकारमिति ...	91	172	स
वृषगिरिकृष्णमेघ ...	58	90
वृषगिरिगृहमेधि ...	15	15	सकरुणलौकिकप्रभु ...	57	88
वृषगिरि सुधासिन्धौ ...	76	134	सटापटलभीषणे ...	84	153
वृषगिरिसविधेषु ...	37	50	सन्तन्यमानमपराध ...	96	181
वृषगिरिसुधासिन्धौ ...	76	134	समयोपनतैस्तव प्रवाहैः ...	21	24
क्षणविलयिनां ...	78	139	समस्तजननीं वन्दे ...	6	5
वेदान्तदेशिकपदे विनिवेश्य	104	199	सारं लब्ध्वा कमपि ...	45	68
			अनितरजुषा ...	77	137
श			ह
शतकमिदमुदारं सम्यक् ...	106	207
श्रेयस्सूति सकृधपि दये ...	49	75	हितमिति जगद्दृष्ट्या ...	74	129

015, ix (Q22)
—K61

not the Daya of the Powerful Lord who holds the great Saarnga in His hand?

विश्वानुग्रहमातरं व्यतिषजत्स्वर्गापवर्गा सुधा-

सध्रीचीमिति वेङ्कटेश्वरकविर्भक्त्या दयामस्तुत ।

पद्यानामिह यद्विधेयभगवत्संकल्पकल्पद्रुमात्

ज्ञज्ञामारुतधूतचूतनयतः सांपातिकोऽयं क्रमः ॥ (१०७)

*Visvaanugrahamaataram vyatishajatsvargaapavargaam sudhaa saddhreecheem iti Venkateswarakavir-bhaktiyaa Dayaam astuta Padyaanaam iha yadvidheyā bhagavatsankalpakalpadrumaat
jhanjhaamaarutadhootachootanayatāh-sampaatikoyam kramaha* (107)

The poet Venkatesa has thus out of devotion sung the praise of Daya, who is the mother (of all) capable of conferring (all) favours, who brings (unto us) (bestows on us) Swarga and Apavarga (moksha), —and who is ever (sweet and life giving) like nectar, (amrita). And even like ripe mango fruits shaken by strong winds during a hurricane, this particular order of verses in this Stotra has dropped from the Kalpaka tree of the Lord's Sankalpa (will) which is ever subordinate and dependant on (or is at the disposal of) that Daya (whose praise has been sung by the poet Venkatesa).

This and the next sloka, which is the very last sloka of the whole Stotra, are couched in the Saardoola Vikreedita metre. As the name itself indicates, the syllables and words leap and frolic even as a leopard does during its sporting moments. This metre contains 19 syllables to a paada. It is thus the longest of the several metres employed in this Stotra.

It is only in this sloka that the poet definitely refers to himself as the author. In Sloka 104 a reference was made to his titular name Vedanta Desika. In sloka 105 the name Venkatesa occurs, but it was used ambiguously and could be taken as referring as much to Lord Venkatesa as to himself. By the words Venkateswarakavi employed here, the poet refers to himself by his proper name, and so this is the "mudra sloka," the sloka bearing the seal of the author.

The Stotra was referred to as udaaram उदारं in the previous sloka. The subject of the stotra, Daya Devi, is referred to her as Visva-anugraha-maataram. She is the mother. She is a mother who always bestows favours, anugraha-maataram. Nigraha

श्रीमते निगमान्तमहादेशिकाय नमः

श्री श्रीनिवास परब्रह्मणे नमः

॥ दयाशतकम् ॥

DAYAA SATAKAM

NINTH DECAD.

THE Lord's unbounded kindness towards prapannas was very well illustrated by the two previous decads, which respectively dealt with (a) His essential nature of dispelling sins and their unpleasant consequences (anishta) and (b) His overwhelming love towards the prapannas, which is willing to adapt itself to their desires with a view to ultimately sublimate those desires into God-love. This idea has been well expressed by Desika elsewhere also. Vide Dramidopanishad Saram:

अथानिष्टान् पुंसां स्वयमुपजिगीर्षन्नपि विभुः

तदिच्छां बाह्येषु प्रशमयितुकामः क्रमवशात् ।

निजेच्छासंसिद्ध त्रिविधचिदाचिद्वस्तुविततिः

श्रितेच्छावैचित्रीवश इति वदत्पष्टमशते ॥

“ With a view to dispel and banish the anishtas of men and in order to see that their desire for worldly pleasures is gradually put down, He the Lord of all, who has the entire threefold chetana and achetana creation under His own sway, yields Himself up to the variegated desires of His followers.” (Those who are interested in pursuing the theory that is being elaborated in this commentary, that the theme for each of the ten decads of this stotra is furnished by the respective themes of the ten centums of Nammalwar's Tiruvoimozhi, as laid down by Desika, will have noticed the use of several identical words and phrases in this sloka of Dramidopanishad Saram and the 81st sloka of Daya Satakam).

This ninth decad furnishes the reason why the Lord is so fond of His devotees, and fond to the extent of coming down to their level. He is shown here to be a nirupadhi Suhrit निरुपधि सुहृत् who has not in her composition the fault of punishing others, will see to it that the evil results that must follow as a result of our wrong acts after prapatti are warded off in some manner or another. The methods of warding off the evil effects are, by making us undergo expiation or prayaschitta for the sins that we shall unconsciously or unwittingly commit after the performance of prapatti, or if our nature does not permit us to take to such expiation, then Daya Devi sees to it that some punishment is awarded for that error or slip from the path of virtue, so that by being punished for it, the sin itself disappears. For the prapatti performed, the Lord has at the behest of Daya Devi promised to the prapanna complete freedom from the cycle of births and deaths at the end of this particular life. No change is effected in that sankalpa or resolution of the Lord, taken with the help of Daya Devi. The Lord through Daya Devi sees to it that the sins committed in the post-prapatti period are not allowed to stand in the way of conferring mukti or release on the prapanna. This is achieved by Daya Devi counteracting the errors of commission and omission that may set in in the post-prapatti period. The word "pratividhim" shows the counter-action. Elsewhere Desika has elaborated this idea and said as follows referring to the Buddhipoorva-paapa

धीपूर्वोत्तरपाप्मनां अजननात् जातेपि तन्निष्कृतेः

कौटल्ये सति शिक्षाप्यनघयन् क्रीडीकरोति प्रभुः or conscious sins Conscious errors of commission and omission will not occur. Even if they occur, by prayaschitta निष्कृति, or by punishment, the Lord sees to it that His original sankalpa of mukthi is carried out. The prior sins are all wiped out by the nyaasa or saranagati. The portion of the prarabdha which has to be gone through till the end of this lifetime is suffered, and thereby liquidated. Conscious post-prapatti sins will not occur, and if they occur they are destroyed by expiation or punishment. The result is there is no balance of karma left at the moment of the prapanna's casting off this body of his. This process is dealt with in this sloka which emphasises the absence of the danger of once again getting into the clutches of the god of death (yamavasāyātām. यमवश्यताम्). Daya Devi casts asunder that great danger, and in conjunction with that hitaishinee or benefit-Conferer, Lord Srinivasa, does away with all the obstacles in the way of conferring moksha upon the prapanna.

क्षणविलयिनां शास्त्रार्थानां फलाय निवेशिते

सुरपितृगणे निर्वेशात्प्रागपि प्रलयं गते ।

अधिगतवृषक्षमाभृन्नाथामकालवशंवदां

प्रतिभुवमिह व्याचख्युस्त्वां कृपे निरुपलवाम् ॥

(७८)

Kshanavilayinaam saastrarthanaam phalaayanivesite

Sura Pitirigane nirvesat praagapi pralayam gate ।

Adhigata Vrishakshmaabrinnaathaam akaalavasamvadaam

pratibhuvam iha vyaachkhyustvaam Kripe! nirupaplavaam ॥ (78)

Daya Devi! where the Devas and Pitrus who have been appointed to confer fruits for the performance of good deeds prescribed in the Saastras (such as daanaas and homaas), fruits which are of very short duration, when those gods and pitrus themselves reach the end of their career and disappear, you who are not subject to any limitations of time, you who are unaffected by the troubles that others may create, and you who have Lord Srinivasa for your support, stand guarantee for the realisation of the phala by those persons who have done those good deeds. So the great ones have said.

Deeds that human beings perform can be good deeds or bad deeds. It would have been noticed that only bad deeds, which are called sins, have very often come up for consideration. Just as sins have to receive punishment, good and virtuous deeds have got to receive their rewards. The perpetrator of sins will be anxious to avoid having to undergo the punishment due for those sins. Similarly those who have performed good and righteous deeds will be anxious to have the reward prescribed for those deeds bestowed on them. This sloka deals with the doers of good deeds, and assures them that if they are anxious and desirous of obtaining all the benefits and rewards that they are entitled to by virtue of their good acts, they need not be afraid of having to lose them because the minor gods and the Pitrus, who, propitiated by these good deeds, have to give to them those rewards, disappear before that date. The rewards themselves are impermanent. It may also so happen that before the time arrives for rewarding those persons who eagerly wait their for their rewards, the Devas and Pitrus may themselves disappear, because the good deeds responsible for getting them their high position have come to an end. Daya Devi however sees to it that no disappointment is caused to those who have by their good acts earned those rewards and preferments. It is said in this sloka that she stands as a surety and a guarantee to them for the realisation of all the benefits and rewards.

The Vedas, in the Karmakanda portion thereof, have prescribed several deeds and actions by which men can propitiate a particular devata or a particular forefather (pitru). The Devatas or Devas, such as Indra etc., have attained the position of power and importance by virtue of their good deeds. Any act done in order to please them results in good things to the person doing the acts. One who desires to go to Swarga has been ordained to do a particular yaga. When there is no rain, Indra or Varuna has been directed to be propitiated by suitable mantras and observances, and when these observances are gone through, rain comes, and so on. If a Deva so propitiated ceases to be a Deva by the time the good deeds done to propitiate him begin to earn fruit, what is to happen to those deeds? This uncertainty in the persons here down below will act as a deterrent to their taking to a good act with the motive of obtaining good results. To protect the sanctity and greatness of the sastras which have laid down particular deeds, and the rewards to be obtained therefor by or through the agency of certain minor gods, Daya Devi functions as a surety ensuring the reward. She is not liable to any destruction. She is an akalavasamvada, not subject to the operation of time. She is also nir-upaplava, obstruction-less. Above all Daya Devi has annexed herself to Lord Srinivasa, the Lord of Venkatadri who is above all limitations of time and space.

Pratibhoo (प्रतिभूः) means bail, surety, guarantee. Daya Devi is the guarantor, and guarantees certainty of reward, though the rewarder may not be there.

This sloka refers to the short-lived greatness of persons who dole out from a position of power, rewards and benefits to others smaller than themselves. Even during the short time that a god officiates as a god, it is only with the strength given by Daya that he gets the capacity to reward others. This topic has been touched upon in this sloka particularly to show that just as the sinners need not be afraid of receiving punishment if they rely on Daya, the virtuous men need not be afraid of losing their reward.

त्वदुपसदनादद्य श्वो वा महाप्रलयेऽपि वा
 वितग्नि निजं पादाम्भोजं वृषाचलशेखरः ।
 तदिह करुणे तत्तत्क्रीडातरङ्गपरम्परा-

तरत-तया जुष्टायाम्ते दुरत्ययतां विदुः ॥ (७९)

Tvadupasadanaat adya svovaa mahaapralayepi vaa vitarati nijam paadaambhojam Vrishaachalasekharaha । Tad-ihā Karune! tattadkreedataaranga-paramparaataratamatayaa jushṭaayaste duratyayataam viduhu ॥ (79)

Devi Karuna! on those who resort to you, and take refuge in you, the Lord of Vrishachala is certain to confer the blessing of His lotus Feet. It may be today, or it may be tomorrow, or it may be only during the Mahapralaya. But the conferment is certain. Therefore it is that the learned people have understood you, with you variegated sportiveness, that is itself like a succession of waves. ar: indeed hard to be overcome or fathomed.

Having dealt with the way in which Daya operates to punish the sinners, and guarantee rewards to good men, Desika harks back to the one topic which alone is uppermost in his mind,—the attainment by all human beings of the Feet of the Lord. Though Daya is capable of relieving us from the burden of sins, and of seeing to it that we get rewarded for our good deeds, yet her primary desire is to see that we attain the Feet of the Lord and get away from the realm of Papa and Punya. That the attainment of beatitude at the Feet of the Lord is the positive content of saranagati is once again emphasised in this sloka. At the same time, the difference in the time of attainment, which in turn depends upon the intensity of the yearning of the upasaka to attain the Feet of the Lord, and the consequent difference in Dayaprasaada, is the topic dealt with in this sloka. If the yearning of a person to reach the Feet of the Lord is so intense that he adopts saranagati for immediate release from samsara, Daya Devi secures to him that desire of his by seeing that the Lord takes him unto His feet immediately, forthwith;—अद्य, here and now. Svaha स्वः means tomorrow. That is, slightly delayed. If as in the case of most of our Acharyas, the prapatti is performed with a view to attain the Feet of the Lord at the end of this bodily existence, surely Daya Devi sees to it that the heart's desire of such a person is fulfilled, and the moment his connection with this particular

By the word Prabriti etc., we have to understand Satsangha (association with Sudhdhaanta siddhantins) Archa-ānubhava (enjoyment of the beauty and grace of the Gods in Temples) and similar faultless and elevating pleasures that make life itself worth living.

अनितरजुषामन्तर्मूलेऽप्यपायपरिप्लवे

कृतिविदनघा विच्छिद्यैषां कृपे यमवश्यताम् ।

प्रपदनफलप्रत्यादेशप्रसङ्गविवर्जितं

प्रतिविधिमुपाश्रत्से सार्धं वृषाद्रिहिषिणा ॥

(७७)

Anitarajushaam antar-moolepyapaayapariplave

kritavidanaghaa vichchidyaishaam Kripe! Yamavasyataam ।

Prapadanaphalapratyaadesa prasangavivarjitam

pratividhim upaadhatse saardham Vrishaadri-hitaishinaa ॥ (77)

Kripa Devi! Even if those who steadfastly look up to the Lord and the Lord alone, as their upaya and purushartha, (means and end), happen to commit any conscious sin, you who never allow yourself to forget the saranagati that they have done, and who have not in your make up the fault of punishing,—to them, you in conjunction with that great Well-wisher of all mankind in Vrishadri, bring about a counter-acting element, so that there is no impediment or bar to their attaining the fruit of the Saranagati that they have observed.

The cleansing process was the topic of the previous sloka. As the Prapanna continues to live even after performing Saranagati, his further life is decided according to the praarabdha or that part of his karmas which has begun to give effect. Therefore his future acts of commission and omission are likely to lead him into sin. It is here pointed out, that because prapatti is made with the determination to follow the Lord's commands, and never to do any act proscribed by the Sastras, which contain His orders and ordinances, it is not likely that the prapanna will ever be guilty of conscious commissions and omissions in the nature of sin. But by the force of the prarabdha, if the prapanna happens to be unwittingly guilty of an act of commission or omission, which will be an apaaya or sin, what will happen to him? This is the problem which will present itself to every thinking man. If after doing Prapatti, I go wrong, will I lose the benefit of the prapatti performed by me, is the question that is likely to assail every prapanna. The answer to that is furnished by this sloka. The sloka assures us that Daya Devi who is not likely to forget the saranagati that we have done, and ishagirisudhaasindhau jantur-Daye! nihitas-tvayaa bhavabhaya pareetaapachchhittiyai bhajannaghamarshanam tushitakalusho mukter-agresarair-abhipooryate svayam upanatais-svaatmaanandaprabhrityanubandhibhihi (76)

Daya Devi! That being who is placed by you in that ocean of nectar that is in Vrishagiri, gets his fear and tapa (heat) engendered by samsara, dispelled, and becomes pure and freed from sin. Having thus got himself cleansed of sin, he is filled, during his further stay in this world, with all the higher pleasures, like those obtained from a true realisation of one's own self,—pleasures which are really fore-runners and fore-tastes of the mokshananda that is sure to come.

Aghamarshana अघमर्षण is a bath enjoined by the Scripture and Dharmasastras for cleansing oneself of very heinous sins and crimes. There is a sookta सूक्त or prayer in the Rig Veda, known as the Aghamarshana Sookta, which, if repeated while bathing, has got the power of releasing the bather from heinous sins. The reference in this sloka is to that purifying and expiatory bath.

Daya is here referred to as placing (निहितस्वया) her upaasaka in that grand and sweet nectar-sea, that is Srinivasa. This is the bath she enjoins on her votaries, or rather gets them to go through. It is clear that Desika is here thinking of the old saying “Esha brahma-pravishtosmi-greeshme-seetam-iva-hridam” एष ब्रह्मप्रविष्टोऽग्निष्मेशीतमिव हृदम्. I plunge myself into this Brahman, like plunging into a cool and deep lake, during scorching summer in the Devanayaka Panchasat (a stotra in praise of the Lord of Tiruvahindrapuram in South Arcot District) Desika has made the reference more plain and pointed:

या मोहिता विविधभोगमरीचिकामिः विश्रान्तिमव्यलभते विबुधैकनाथ ।
गम्भीरपुण्यमधुरं मम धीर्भवन्तं धीप्मेतटाकमिव शीतमनुप्रविष्टा ॥

Lord Devanatha! Having been ruthlessly duped by several kinds of mirage in the shape of earthly pleasures, my mind has just not attained rest, peace and comfort; for it has entered into (plunged into the depths of) You, who are like a majestic, sacred, and sweet lake (full of water),—even as one scorched gets into a tank).

It was only a tataaka तटाक or tank in Devanayaka Panchasat. Here it is an ocean, Sindhu,—an ocean of nectar, Sudha-sindhu. (Please refer also to Sloka 43 above). Pleasurability apart, t

The people of this world prefer aiswarya, wealth, to all other things. Aiswarya here must be taken to be a compendious term indicating all worldly pleasures. The kaivalya which comes next is the stage where the aspirant to spiritual eminence indulges in the realisation of the pleasures of the self, bereft of God-association. To the true devotee of God, even kaivalya is not a stage worth aspiring for. It is as good, or as bad, and certainly as evanescent and unsatisfying, as aiswarya itself. The opening words of the sloka show that people who are spiritually minded prefer the pleasures of wealth and Aatmanubhava even to the exalted positions held by Brahma and Rudra. It shows that people are so taken in by what this world can offer that they do not even desire the other-worldly pleasures like those of Brahma and Rudra.

Daya Devi understands correctly the desire of the people of the world to obtain earthly wealth, or in a few and rare cases the supreme satisfaction of Aatmanubhava आत्मानुभव. Personally Daya Devi, who knows the real value to be attached to these, as contrasted with the pleasures attainable at the Feet of the Lord, is not happy about the craving that people entertain for these pleasures. But just like a fond mother, who pretends to satisfy the expressed desires of the child, all the while having in her mind the idea of converting it later on to her views. Daya appears to grant what they want, so that her hold on them may become firm and they may learn to look to her for everything they desire to have. The illustration about conferring punya and dispelling sin on an individual who does not desire punya or to get rid of his sin, but only feels thirsty, shows the way Daya Devi sets about it. Just as a person interested in a thirsty man's soul takes him to the sacred theerthas like the Ganga, and asks that person to quench his thirst with the water of the Ganga, so that he may not only have his thirst quenched but also obtain punya, so too Daya Devi eggs on her votaries to appeal to her (and thereby to the Lord) to secure their hearts' desire with the idea of ultimately making them desire the Lord for the Lord's own sake. It is Daya's attempt to convert the first three classes of men denoted by Lord Sri Krishna as Aartha आर्थः Jignasu जिज्ञासु and Artharthi अर्थार्थी into persons belonging to the last class namely gnani ज्ञानि.

The word 'veetaatanka,' which literally means having dispelled fear, shows how carefully Daya Devi sets about the task of redeeming us and taking us to eternal bliss, mokshananda. She has

The people of this world prefer aiswarya, wealth, to all things. Aiswarya here must be taken to be a compendious indicating all worldly pleasures. The kaivalya which comes is the stage where the aspirant to spiritual eminence indulges in the realisation of the pleasures of the self, bereft of God-association. To the true devotee of God, even kaivalya is not a stage worth aspiring for. It is as good, or as bad, and certainly as evanescent and unsatisfying, as aiswarya itself. The opening words of the sloka show that people who are spiritually minded prefer the pleasures of wealth and Aatmanubhava even to the exalted position held by Brahma and Rudra. It shows that people are so taken in by what this world can offer that they do not even desire other-worldly pleasures like those of Brahma and Rudra.

Daya Devi understands correctly the desire of the people of the world to obtain earthly wealth, or in a few and rare cases the supreme satisfaction of Aatmanubhava आत्मानुभव. Person Daya Devi, who knows the real value to be attached to these pleasures, is contrasted with the pleasures attainable at the Feet of the Lord. She is not happy about the craving that people entertain for these pleasures. But just like a fond mother, who pretends to satisfy the expressed desires of the child, all the while having in her mind the idea of converting it later on to her views. Daya appears to grant what they want, so that her hold on them may become firm and they may learn to look to her for everything they desire to have. An illustration about conferring punya and dispelling sin on an individual who does not desire punya or to get rid of his sin, but feels thirsty, shows the way Daya Devi sets about it. Just as a person interested in a thirsty man's soul takes him to the source of theerthas like the Ganga, and asks that person to quench his thirst with the water of the Ganga, so that he may not only have his thirst quenched but also obtain punya, so too Daya Devi eggs on votaries to appeal to her (and thereby to the Lord) to secure their hearts' desire with the idea of ultimately making them desire the Lord for the Lord's own sake. It is Daya's attempt to convert the first three classes of men denoted by Lord Sri Krishna as Aarthi आर्थी: Jignasu जिज्ञासु and Artharthi अर्थार्थी into persons belonging to the last class namely gnani ज्ञानि.

The word 'veetaatanka,' which literally means having dispelled fear, shows how carefully Daya Devi sets about the task of reaching us and taking us to eternal bliss, mokshananda. She

त्रिविधचिदचित्सत्तास्थेमप्रवृत्तिनियामिका

वृषगिरिविभोरिच्छा सा त्वं परैरपराहता ।

कृपणभरभृत्किंकुर्वाणप्रभूतगुणान्तरा

बहसि करुणे वैचक्ष्ण्यं मदीक्ष्णसाहसे ॥

(७१)

trividha chidachit sattaasthemapravrittiniyaamikaa

Vrishagirivibhor ichchhaa saa tvam parairaparaahataa । ripanabharabhritkimkurvaanaprabhootagunaantaraa

vahasi Karune! vaichakshanyam madeekshanasaahase ॥ (71)

Devi Karuna! you who are but the wish or desire of the Lord Vrishagiri; who order and direct the states of existence, continuance, and activity of the three kinds of chetanas and achetanas; who is uncontrolled by others; who willingly bear all the burdens of helpless and wretched beings; who are served (obeyed) by the other lofty realities (of the Lord),—Such a you possess great skill in (are adept at) the very bold act of patronising and protecting me by making me the object of your (protective) glances.

Daya is here defined as the Lord's Ichcha—desire or wish. The Lord's desire to protect—that is Daya. It is not an empty desire, nor is it a vain desire. This is demonstrated by reference to four factors.

The first of them is dealt with in a long phrase Tri-vida-chit-chit - satta - sthema-pravritti-niyaamikaa. Trivida is threefold. Trivida chit or the threefold chetana classification is as Nitya, Mukta and Baddha. (The ever celestials like Garuda; the released souls; and the souls in bondage.) Trivida achit refers to the three chetana objects known generally as prakriti, time and suddhasatva. The existence, continuance (persisting in the same state) and activity, of all the above six are Dayaadeena—i.e., they are all ordered and ordained by her.

The second is parairaparaahata—uncontrollable, unobstructed by any one and anything else. Daya's sway is supreme. Nothing and nobody can stand in the way of the Lord's desire, whose name is Daya. It is the Ichcha, desire, of a Vibhu, a mighty and eminent sovereign and no one dare cross it.

Daya is next stated to be Kripa-bhara-bhrit, the bearer of the burdens of kripa—helpless beings. This has been dealt eyes here we find Daya Devi doing this daring act, namely, welcoming the sinner with avidity, just because that sinner has been clever enough to take to Bharanyaasa. The followers of other systems, which are also claimed to have been derived from the same Srutis, exclaim, "what foolishness this!" and "to what Khila खिल or vacuity of intellect is this to be attributed?"

Vismerabhuvanam विस्मेरभुवनं a world gaping with shock and surprise. Vismaya विस्मय may also refer to admiration, in which case the words will mean, to a world admiring Daya or Devi's cleverness. In view of the other words in the Sloka like Khilam, this latter meaning cannot be appropriate for this word as referring to the world. The poet is going to refer to the real admiration that the Lord entertains for this bold act of Daya. That is the other sentiment enshrined in the sloka.

Simhakshmaabhrit सिहक्ष्माभृत् is Simhaachala one of the Puranic names of Tirumala. The Lord residing there is referred to here as a Kritamukha कृतमुख which means a very learned and clever person. The term विद्वान् Vidwan in a way will bring out the meaning of this word Kritamukha. The act of Daya related above in coming forward and meeting the prapannas at the cross-roads is looked upon by this very learned and clever Person with admiration. Only a Vidwan can adequately appreciate a Vidwan's work. As already pointed out there is a difference between the Vismaya of the world, and the Chamatkaara which is the reaction of the Lord to Daya's act. Here it is unalloyed admiration. What the Lord has not been able to achieve by Himself without the help of Daya, Daya has achieved before His very eyes; and His heart feels happy and glad at this welcome which Daya extends to Prapannas.

Prasthaana प्रस्थान means setting forth, starting; Pratiprasthaana प्रतिप्रस्थान has been understood as counterstarting or setting forth, meaning, going out for the purpose of welcoming those who come in.

This is the last sloka of this decad in which Daya Devi's supremacy in action has been very well described. Her daringness and audacity, in protecting those who have taken refuge in her, as dealt with in this decad are referred by Desika himself in the opening sloka of the next decad as a Saahasa, साहस a very rash and daring

a Devi to me if some small evil happens to you त्वयि किञ्चित् किं कार्यं सतया मम. That was the extent to which Rama Sugreeva. Sabari, the hunter-woman, whose hospitality Rama is a household word, is referred to next. Sabari means man of the hunter class. This lady had no other name by which she was known. So Kaapi Sabari may be taken to indicate nameless hunter woman. 'Kaapi' has however been used to show that a peerless lady bearing the name Sabari is indicated. Rama was her guest, and gladly and willingly ate of what had carefully put by as sweet and delicious in anticipation of his arrival.

Rama was the acme of modesty and one will not be surprised at his moving intimately and freely with Guha, Sugreeva, or Sabari.
 The Lord Krishna, a God from birth, born as a God and not a man, having to His credit several deeds from boyhood to adulthood which are distinctly superhuman—what about Him?
 The Devi renders Him too accessible to one and all in the lower strata of society. Kuchela (meaning dirty-and-torn-cloth-man) a picture and model of poverty; Kubja of ugliness; Gopis, of untutored ignorance; and maalakaara a vendor of fragrant garlands of flowers, not one among which would he have for his use. And with all of them, Sri Krishna mixed freely and on equal terms. The reception He gave Kuchela should ever serve as an ideal for small minded rich men to follow, persons who will deign even to recognise in a poorer man an old-time friend and classmate. Kubja means bent woman, a hunch-back. A woman with this defect in her body was preparing sandal paste for the king's use. While she was taking some sandal one day to Kamsa, she met Balarama and Krishna in the streets of Muttra. At once she willingly offered the sandal to those lovely youngsters. Krishna immediately rewarded her by relieving her of her hunch back and turning her into a young and handsome damsel. The first thing that lady then was to catch hold of his uttariya (upper garment) and drag Him towards herself. Thereby Krishna earned one of his 108 names (Ashtottara-sata-namaas) namely 'Kubjaaambaradharaha' कुब्जाम्बरधरः. There is a Kubja (कुब्ज) in the Ramayana, whose name stinks; as much as that of the Bhagavata counterpart exhudes fragrance. So to demonstrate that it is not the evil and inimical kubja, but the devoted and loving one, it is said here 'Kubja-saa,' that Kubja.

ook up to her for help and succour, to the great Acharyas who are beloved of the Lord, so beloved as to make Him refer to them in the Bhagavat Geeta as His Atma, (gnanee-tu-atmaiva-me-matam) and as very dear to Him (Sa-cha-mama-priyaha). The gnani of the Geeta is here referred to as Budaha (बुधः). Their greatness was indicated in the previous sloka by the words Vrishagiri-jushah-tira-chara-silpinaiva-parikalpita-chitra-dhiyaha. As they are repositories of Daya's protective qualities, ordinary men and women have to rely on them for redemption. This is known as the Acharya-ishtha form of Saranagati.

(7) Madhure! Sweet! By nature Daya Devi is sweet and attractive, even as a mother is to the baby.

(8) Vrishagiri-sarvabhauma-dayite! Beloved of the Emperor of Vrishagiri! Daya is one of the Consorts of Lord Srinivasa. It has been said before that the other Consorts like Sri, Bhoo and Leela Devis are dear to the Lord because the Lord sees Daya reflected in them. (Sloka 36).

(9) Bhavuka-nidhe! Storehouse of all mangalam (auspiciousness)! The very first description of Daya in this Sloka was as an kinchana-nidhi (treasure-house for the helpless). That nidhi or treasure is here pointed out to be a bhavuka-nidhi, a treasure of auspiciousness.

After having thus called Daya in nine different ways, Sri Desika makes known to her his prayer in the words "mayi-te-mahateem-havamoola-haraam-lahareem-nidhehi,"-pray divert towards me our mighty floods capable of uprooting this great tree of Samsara. That is to say, please destroy my connection with Samsara and bestow on me the beatitude of the Highest Bliss. The nature and the content of that Bliss have already been described in detail in the fifth decad.

Thus the sixth decad of this Stotra concludes with the performance of prapatti by Desika even as the sixth Centurium of Verse Nammalwar's Tiruvoimozhi ends with the Alwar's anushtaana (practice) of prapatti. The effect of this anushtana or practice of prapatti is seen in the following decads. The twofold aspect of the help that Daya renders to prapannas, viz., Anishta-nivritti and Anushta-praapti (Removal of undesired fruits and realisation of desired fruits respectively) is described in detail in the succeeding decads.